END YOUR CATARRH TO-DAY

Catarrh sufferers, meaning those with colds, sore throat, bronchial trouble, etc., can all be cured right at home by inhaling "Catarrhzone." In using Catarrhzone you don't take medicine into the stomach—you just breathe a healing piney vapor direct to the lungs and air passages.
The purest balsams and the greatest antiseptics are thus sent to every spot where catarrhal trouble exists—germs are killed, foul secretions are destroyed, nature is given a chance and cure comes quickly.

Colds and throat troubles can't last if the pure healing vapor of Catarrh-zone is breathed—sneezing and coughing cease at once, because irritation is removed.

Use Catarrhzone to prevent—use it to cure your winter ills—it's pleasant, safe and guaranteed in every case.

It looks as if no monument would be erected to the Man Who Saved Daylight.

MARYSVILLE CELEBRATED IN GOOD STYLE

PARADE HELD THERE ON SATURDAY EVENING

Funeral of Frank Bamford, Victim of Drowning—Per- sonal Mention—Fred- ericton Parade.

Marysville, July 21—The funeral of the late Frank Bamford who met his death by drowning in the Nashwaak River on Friday evening took place from the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bamford, Main Street Saturday afternoon and was largely attended. Rev. E. J. Barrass pastor of the Olivet Baptist Church conducted service at the home, and the choir of that church rendered several hymns at the house and grave. Rev.
Mr. Barrass was assisted by Rev. E.
W. Lester pastor of the Reformed Baptist Church and Adjutant Miller of the Salvation Army. Interment was made in the Methodist Cemetery. The pall bearers were: Cecil Daley, Oswald Morgan, William Flemming, Harry White, Ray Gereau, and Ray Bruce. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful consisting of the following pieces: Wreath, family; Floral Cross, employees of the Napp-ing Room of the cotton mill; Broken circle, Reformed Baptist Church; Wreath, Olivet Baptist Sunday School; Flat Bouquet, Mr. and Mrs. Lee; Flat bouquet Mr. and Mrs. James Young and family; Flat bouquet, Adjutant Miller; Crescent, girls and boy friends; Flat bouquet, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Osborne and Miss Stella Osborne; Flat bouquet Mr. and Mrs. John Osborne; Wreath Marysville Brass Band. The sympathy of the entire community is extended to the bereaved family in their untimely loss.

Mrs. James Robinson of Nasonworth was here on Saturday to attend the funeral of her nephew the late Frank Bamford.

Mr. and Mrs. John Foster who have been visiting relatives here leave this evening for their home at Halifax.

Mr. and Mrs. Neill Robertson and child arrived here by auto from Oakfield, Me., and spent the weekend with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Cole, and son William and Mr. Chipman Brewer arrived here Saturday by auto from Minto and returned yesterday.

Miss Fern McDowell left today on a visit to relatives at Bangor, Me.

City Engineer McDowell of Fredericton was a visitor here on Saturday.

The Celebration

Peace Day was fittingly observed by the citizens here and at Fredericton on Saturday. The float of the Canadian Cottons depicting the vast difference between the old hand-loom and the modern draper loom was an interesting feature of the parade at Fredericton and was awarded the first prize for industrial floats. The Marysville Brass Band was also in the parade at Fredericton and occupied another float prepared by the Canadian Cottons. In the evening a parade was held here, commencing from the corner of Bridge and Morrison Streets, and the route of march was up Morrison Street to Allen and up Allen to George out George to the corner of Bridge where the procession counter marched and proceeded by way of George Allen, Morrison and Bridge Streets to Main Street, up Main St. to Methodist Church and again countermarched and proceeded to base-ball hill where a halt was made. Three rousing cheers were given for the King after which the parade was dismissed. Col. W.
H. Gray acted as Marshal of the parade which presented a splendid appearance the returned soldiers occupying a prominent position. About eight o'clock the children were lined up and Mayor Stafford assisted by a committee of ladies and gentlemen dispensed ice-cream. Upwards of one thousand cones of ice-cream were distributed. This was followed by a display of fireworks on Main St. The Marysville Brass Band and the hobo band furnished music which was thoroughly enjoyed.

Confessions of an Every-Day Wife

By Idah McGlone Gibson

A GREAT SURPRISE.

As I looked at Richard Waverly's wife Valere, it seemed to me that she would have been the last person on earth to attract him, as he would never have analyzed her feature by feature, and it was only in taking her separately that one became conscious of her charm and personality.

I suppose it must have been her unusualness that caught his fancy, for certainly she was not like any American girl whom we had ever seen. She waited demurely silent until both Theo and I had shaken her hand, and then she said, haltingly:

"I am of mouche plaitoise to meet any ginks of my hosban."

"Bully!" shouted Dick. "You see I'm teaching her English."

"Yes, I suspected as much," said Theo, "but may I suggest that I think you had better let Aunt Margie finish the lessons."

"I'm kissing all the newcomers this morning, Val," Theo continued, turning to Dick's wife, and before Valere was aware of it, he had repeated the salutation he had bestowed upon Letty.

"Theo, how could you?" I exclaimed as I saw the embarrassment and blushes of the little French girl, who seemed to think he was a crazy man.

"Don't you realize that such things are not good taste—especially in France?"

"They taste as good in France as anywhere, don't they, Val?" said Theo.

"How do you know, Theo?" asked Aunt Margie, with a smile for my husband as he bestowed a kiss on her. Before he could make any response, Valere said demurely:

"I like ze customs Americaine."

"See that you don't adopt the customs too quickly and too promiscuously, my dear," said Dick, pinching her ear.

"I will not have my daughter made uncomfortable," said Aunt Margie, putting a protecting arm around her. "Come on, Margot, we will go up to my room and let these boys talk it out among themselves."

"Thank you, Aunt Margie, but Theo and I just called to say 'How do you do and good-bye'—for the present. Come over soon, all of you, and I think with my American-French and Val's French-American we can strike up a happy medium in language."

"I'm going to talk Americane to you all the time, Val," said Theo. "I don't like hyphens and I could never make my college French reach any further than a menu."

"Tres bien, Monsieur," smiled Valere delightedly.

"Oui, oui," said Theo, "tres bean, tres bean, or as we say, Very good, Eddie."

"Ver' good, Eddee," repeated Valere seriously.

"Here, stop it, stop it," said Dick. "Your professorship ends right here and now."

"Then I'll have to kiss her again so she'll understand I'm bidding her good-bye. Actions speak louder than words, you know."

Poor Valere looked much puzzled as Dick whirled Theo around and chased him out. But as we went out I heard Dick making voluble explanations in French to his young wife.

"Do you think she'll be able to hold him?" asked Theo, as he started the car.

"Yes, because she will not ask as much of him as an American girl would. You know, Theo, that the education of the average French girl is very different from that of the American.

While the French have no word for home, yet to the French the man idea is the basic stone of his entire government. A girl is taught from the first that she is a 'citoyenne de la patrie' and as such her duty is to make a home and produce a family that will live or fight and die for that country's needs. To the French wife and mother the indiscretions of the husband are incidents rather than tragedies, and accepted as a matter of course. Her real existence is bound up in her children and her home."

"Well," said Theo, with a grin, "if Val has been brought up that way, there will probably be no divorces in the Waverly family."

"I venture she will make him a splendid wife. I'm quite taken with her," I said. "At any rate, I'm sure she's going to please Aunt Margie. Did you notice the love in her eyes as she looked at her new daughter?"

We arrived at the door of the Symone home when, much to our surprise we encountered Major Gordon leaving the house.
