ALL FIGHTING NOT OVER BECAUSE GERMANY AGREES TO THE TERMS

Some Twenty Campaigns are Still Being Fought in Europe—Bolsheviks Attacked and Being Attacked on Various Fronts—United States Has Sent Punitive Troops Into Mexico—Trouble Still Threatening in Afghanistan.

The fact that Germany accepts the peace terms of the Allies does not mean that all fighting in Europe will cease. Today the following nations and factions are battling one against the other:

North of the Crimea General Denekine is attacking the Bolsheviks.

General Grogan commands a large relief force composed mainly of British troops, at Archangel. So far it has only met desultory resistance.

The Murmansk force, under General Maynard, has advanced to Povenets on Lake Onega about 400 miles south of its base at Kola.

Southwest of Maynard's troops, Finnish White Guards have advanced as far as Olonets. They are standing along the Tuloksa River.

The Estonians and loyal Russian troops are advancing slowly on Petrograd and Trotzky has hurried to that city to rally its defenders.

Further south another Estonian army has pushed the Bolsheviks from the Gulf of Riga to the River Aa.

A strong Polish force has advanced as far as Vilna in their attempt to push forward to Dvinsk.

Lithuanian troops are moving in the same general direction and have reached Ponevezh.

Bolsheviks who crossed the Dneister into Bessarabia have been repulsed by French and Algerian troops.

A loyal Russian volunteer army has forced the Bolsheviks to evacuate Bakhmut, 100 miles north of the Sea of Azov, and is thirty miles from Tsaritsyn on the Volga. They are said to have captured 22,000 Bolsheviks in their advance.

On the Eastern front Admiral Kolchak's centre and left armies which were checked in their advance against the Bolsheviks, have rallied and are again slowly advancing.

British and loyal Russian forces have had two naval engagements in the Gulf of Finland, in both of which the Soviet ships

Confessions of an Every-Day Wife By Idah McGlone Gibson THEO COMES HOME.

I was awakened late next morning by the ringing of my telephone. The manager of the hotel was calling, and he informed me that there was a transport coming up the bay.

I could hardly wait to thank him, so excited was I at this message. I hurried into my street clothes, called a taxi and rushed to the pier. There I found thousands of people quite as excited as I; all of them looking out where just beyond the Goddess of Liberty one could see a vessel slowly approaching. Almost unconscious of what I was doing, I began to tear off my gloves as I kept pushing myself toward the edge of the pier.

"Here, here am I to rescue from drowning also," said a familiar voice near me. Instinctively I turned and held out my hands and it was not until Major Gordon had clasped them that I knew how cold and clammy they were.

"I'm delighted to see you again," said the Major.

"Thank you," I answered. "Are you expecting relatives?"

"I rather expect some of my regiment. And you?"

My voice trembled as I answered, "I hope my husband will come, but I am not sure."

I wondered if it were my imagination, or did his face change color a little as he asked, "What part of the service is your husband in?"

"Lieutenant Symone was in the aviation corps," I answered.

The ship was so near us now that we could plainly see the men on its decks. The cheering was deafening.

I stood quite still, not daring to raise my eyes, as the boat warped slowly into the slip. All at once, above the din and confusion of landing, I heard someone calling:

"Margot, Margot! Look up, Margot! Here I am!"

I raised my eyes to see my husband's face all and more than I had dreamed. It seemed hours before Theo reached me and clasped me in his arms, and then, holding me at arms' length, he gave a sigh of great content: "I'm sorry for the man who has married a French girl," he said.

The words were not very romantic, not what you would read in books, but I was perfectly satisfied. Had he said anything more flowery it would not have rung true.

"How are all the folks?" he asked, looking around as if he expected to see someone besides me.

"I came alone this time, Toddy," I said. And then suddenly remembered that I hadn't said good-bye to Major Gordon, I turned to find him shaking hands with a grizzled officer.

"Oh, Major Gordon," I said.

"Yes, Mrs. Symone," he answered.

"I want you to know my husband."

The two men came to attention with a salute.

"Theo, this is Major Gordon, who saved me from being run down by an ambulance."

"I'm very glad to know you, sir, and I am sure you can appreciate my gratitude."

"I am very glad to have met you, Lieutenant," said Major Gordon, holding out his hand as his friends called to him.

"But we must see more of you, Major," said Theo. "Mrs. Symone and I will be in New York for some time. Won't you call?"

"Nothing would give me greater pleasure," said the Major as he turned away to join his friend.

"Here, let me look at you, Margot," said Theo, whirling me around, totally oblivious to everyone else on the pier.

"Are you sure you love me, even if I'm not a hero? Oh, but it's good to be back," he exclaimed all in a breath.

"And you, my dear, you are different from any other living, breathing woman on all this earth."

"That is not always the most commendable thing in the world," I said, smilingly.

"It is in your case, Honey," he answered, taking me in his arms again, and then hand-in-hand, like little children, we got a taxi and drove to the hotel.

(Tomorrow—"We Meet Major Gordon Again.")

were defeated.

A British force has occupied Varna on the Bulgarian Black Sea.

The Red Army of Bela Kun continues to clash with the Czecho-Slovaks in spite of Allied warnings.

German troops threaten to forcibly oppose the further advance of the Poles.

Ukrainians and Poles have again clashed near Cractw.

The Italians are advancing on the Vilitach-Sanvito line against the Jugo-Slavs.

The United States sent a punitive expedition into Mexico last week.

The Ameer of Afghanistan, after asking for an armistice, is again threatening on the Indian border.

The Prince Edward Island Legislature has been dissolved and polling for a new House has been fixed for July 24th. The Conservatives have been in power on the Island since 1911, but the government's majority is small and the Liberals, under the leadership of Mr. Bell, are confident of success. Prince Edward Island and Ontario are the only provinces of Canada which have Conservative governments.

ALMOST BLIND FROM HEADACHES

It is hard to struggle along with a head that aches and pains all the time. ever, free from it, suffering continual-Headache seems habitual with many people; indeed, some are seldom, if ly, and wondering why they can get no relief.

In nine cases out of ten, persistent headaches are due to poisoned blood, the blood being rendered impure through some derangement of the stomach, liver or bowels.

The reason Burdock Blood Bitters makes permanent cures of all cases of headache, is because it starts the organs of elimination acting freely, and the poisons and impurities are carried off from the system, purified blood circulates in the brain cells, and instead of pains and aches there is revived mentality and bodily vigor.

Mrs. Geo. Monck, Arden, Ont. writes "I have been troubled a great deal with sick headaches, and at times would almost go blind, and have to go to bed. I tried different kinds of medicine without any benefit until I was advised to use Burdock Blood Bitters. After taking it, I have not been troubled since."
