

WEEPING ECZEMA SOON RELIEVED

A Perfect Treatment For This Distressing Complaint

WASING, ONT.
"I had an attack of Weeping Eczema; so bad that my clothes would be wet through at times.

For four months, I suffered terribly. I could get no relief until I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and 'Sootha Salva'. The first treatment gave me relief.

Altogether, I have used three boxes of 'Sootha Salva' and two of 'Fruit-a-tives', and am entirely well!"

G. W. HALL.
Both these sterling remedies are sold by dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"Fruit-a-tives" is also put up in a trial size which sells for 25c.

HENS THINK ELECTRIC BULBS MEAN DAYLIGHT

(Buffalo News)

Albion, Jan. 14—John J. Larwood, a prominent farmer and poultry fancier who at present has over 1,000 choice hens at his farm at the Five Corners one mile north of this village, is experimenting with artificial illumination at night during the winter months in anticipation of increasing his egg production. Large poultry houses have been equipped with electric lights which are turned on at 6 o'clock each morning and remain lighted until daylight and again at dusk they are lighted and are not turned off until 8 p. m.

The light, though artificial, appears to equalize the time between meals and to shorten the period of inactivity of the fowls through the long nights, which causes them to use a larger proportion of fed for bodily needs than under normal conditions, but the increase already attained in egg production at this season when fancy prices are obtainable is proving the experiment well worth the extra care and expense. The artificial illumination produces springlike conditions.

Mr. Larwood raises several thousand and thoroughbred birds annually on his farm. After selecting about 500 of the choicest to keep his egg production at its best the remainder are sold. Most of his large number of eggs are shipped to the larger cities to purchasers desiring strictly fresh eggs in large quantity, for hotel and high-class trade.

WOMEN TAKE CHILDREN TO BRITISH POLLS

London, Jan. 19—British women did not permit babies to keep them from the polls.

At Paddington a mother appeared with her brood of four and was indignant because she could not take them into the polling booth with her. She left them with a policeman while she voted.

In many of the precincts women candidates provided nurseries where the babies could be cared for while their mothers voted, but despite this foresight, none of the women candidates in England were voted into parliament.

In one of these precincts 60 babies were in charge of woman at one time while their mothers were in the voting place.

Humorous incidents were many. A Hull woman insisted on occupy-

Had Hacking Cough Couldn't Sleep Nights

Hacking coughs are very wearing on the system. The constant coughing disturbs the rest, and keeps the lungs and bronchial tubes in an irritated and inflamed condition.

Don't neglect the hacking cough. You can get rid of it with a few doses of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup; the most prompt, pleasant and perfect cough remedy known.

Miss Catherine M. McLean, Craik, Sask., writes:—"Last winter I caught a heavy cold and was laid up for some time. I had such a hacking cough I couldn't sleep at night. I didn't think I would get over it. One day a friend dropped in to see me and was surprised to see how bad my cough was. She advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. The next day I sent for a bottle and I soon got relief and by the time I had taken two bottles my cough was all gone, and now I am able to do my work again. I don't think there is anything to equal it."

There are plenty of "pine" preparations on the market trying to live on the reputation of Dr. Wood's. The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, price 25c. and 50c. a bottle. Put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto Ont.

ENGLAND'S CROWN JEWELS RESTORED TO THE TOWER

Reputed to be the Finest Collection of Gems in the World—Had Long Reposed in the Tower of London, but were Removed on the Outbreak of War—A Wonderful Diamond.

(By Marguerite Mooers Marshall)

England's crown jewels have come home. The most magnificent gems in the world—if we except certain more or less mysterious collections in the palaces of Indian Rajahs—the gems conservatively estimated to be worth $30,000,000, are now reposing once more in the Tower of London, where they had been kept for nearly six hundred years until the menace of invading German aeroplanes caused them to be removed to a stone vault in Windsor Castle, twenty-five miles from London. The other day they were placed in inconspicuous cardboard boxes and brought back in an equally inconspicuous motor car, escorted by four army men in "plain clothes." Reading of that safe and quiet trip, how the Reds of the world and other plunderers must be gnashing their teeth in baffled covetousness!

For the cold, glistening, peerless diamonds and rubies, which are the regalia of England's monarchs, make loot to tempt a social revolution or a crackman's trust—or a Kaiser. (Probably they did tempt him, especially as his one-time crown was of iron and his frugal German ancestors had left him a collection of precious stones which was a disgrace to royalty.)

There are four world famous stones among England's crown jewels. First of these should be mentioned the Koh-i-noor, which in Persian means "Mountain of Light." This magnificent diamond weighs 108.91 karats, and was presented to Queen Victoria in 1849 on the occasion of the annexation of the Punjab. There are many romantic episodes in its history since 1804 when it was wrested by Sultan Ala-ed-din from the Rajah of Malwa. It is supposed, by the way, to bring ill-luck to its possessor, but Queen Victoria was willing to brave the hoodoo—I imagine any other woman would do likewise.

The Timur Ruby, the largest in existence and supposed to be lost for many years also was a gift to Queen Victoria. In the days of the Mogul Empire this stone was known as "Tribute of the World" and weighs, uncut, a trifle over 352 karats. Its recorded history begins in 1398, when it was a part of the plunder taken from Delhi by the Ameer Timur, known in Europe as Tamerlane. It was the most treasured possession of many Eastern royalties, one of whom remarked: "As long as there is a king this gem shall be his." Like the Koh-i-noor it fell into English hands at the time of the annexation of the Punjab.

When the present King George of England was crowned he wore two jewels more valuable than any monarch ever wore. The two were cut from the Cullinan diamond and were presented to King Edward VII. by the Transvaal Government. They are called the "Stars of Africa." The larger "star" is said to be the largest diamond in the world and weighs 516½ karats. It is set in the royal sceptre, which once was used by Charles II. The smaller "star" weighs 309 3-16 karats and shines from the royal crown.

THE DUKE MAY LEAVE CANADA

London, Jan. 21—A Sunday paper suggests that the Dukes of Devonshire is shortly returning to England and will be succeeded by the Earl of Athlone. No confirmation of this claim is obtainable, though it probably springs from the fact that the Duchess of Devonshire is in England.

ing the same compartment with her husband and copying his voting paper.

The oldest woman voter was Granny Lambert of Edmonton, 105, but in the precinct four women, 94, 90, 86 and 85, respectively, were taken to the polling place in motor cars and cast their ballots.

"I have waited 85 years for this experience," said one aged woman voter at Acton.

In that precinct one woman came to the polls with seven of her eight boys of whom five are in the service.

A Camberwell woman asked where she drew her money after voting, and was surprised to find that she was not paid for exercising the franchise.

Still another woman sent her servant with instructions to vote for her.

In that crown is also a magnificent and historic ruby, called the Ruby of the Black Prince. It is no redder than the tradition of tragedy and treachery in which it once played a part. In 1365 it was worn in the turban of Abu Said the Red King of Granada, when he sat as guest of honor at a banquet to which he had been invited by Pedro the Cruel, King of Castile and Andalusia. That night a ghostly band of swordsmen, headed by Pedro himself beat down the guards around the apartment in which, as a royal guest, Abu Said had been lodged, stabbed to death the Red King and stole his ruby unheeding his reproachful last words: "Miserable man! What a fine spirit thus to treat a king who confided in you!" Later Pedro presented the stone to Edward the Black Prince of England in return for the latter's military assistance.

There are many other peerless beautiful jewels in England's great collection, to which additions have been made constantly for hundreds of years. In the Imperial Crown are 3,093 diamonds and precious stones, besides the ruby of the Black Prince and the Star of Africa. Then there is St. Edward's Crown, a model of the ancient crown of England kept at Westminster until the crown jewels were plundered in the days of the Commonwealth.

The King's Orb is a golden globe surmounted by a cross. The zone is made up of sixteen clusters of precious stones, which include diamonds, rubies, emeralds and sapphires, bordered by two rows of pearls.

There are four Sceptres: The Old Sceptre of gold with enamelled ornaments; the Sceptre of Equity—first in the King's hand at coronation ceremonies; the Queen's Sceptre, which is two feet and ten inches long, ending in a mound and a cross of gold adorned with diamonds and other precious stones; and the Ivory Sceptre or, as it is also called, "The Queen's Ivory Rod." The golden staff of Edward the Confessor, the Queen Consort Diadem and St. George's Spurs of gold also must be listed with the crown jewels.

The jewels once barely escaped a daring thief, one Col. Thomas Blood. His attempt on them occurred in the reign of Charles II., and that sporting monarch was so much impressed with the daring of the super-burglar that he not only escaped the scaffold but was pardoned and given an annuity amounting to $3,000 a year.

Eight years ago elaborate structural changes were made in Wakefield Tower of the Tower of London, where the jewels have been kept on exhibition. A new stone floor was laid for the crown jewel room, stone additions were made to the walls and a cage was built to inclose the huge plate glass show case at which so many thousand loyal English and curious Americans gazed every year. Electric burglar alarms were connected with the cage at this time, and a special system of elaborate locks installed. There was ample protection against everything but Zeppelins, and now that they have ceased from troubling the most marvellous collection of crown jewels in the world would seem to be safe as long as the crown is.

Who Are Shouting the Praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Saskatchewan Man's Kidney Trouble
Developed Into Diabetes—Story of His Complete Cure.

Strong Pine, Sask., Jan. 20th—(Special).—Sore back, which developed into diabetes, had made life a burden to Maxim F. Capusten, a farmer of this place. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured him, and he is added to that great army of Canadians who glory in telling their neighbors that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure remedy for all kidney ills.

"For nearly five years I suffered from sore back and headache," Mr. Capusten says, in giving his experience. I had a bad taste in my mouth in the mornings, and I was always tired. My muscles would cramp, and I was nervous, and the least exertion would make me perspire freely. At last diabetes developed.

"I finally came to the conclusion that my kidneys were the cause of my trouble, and I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I got half a dozen boxes, and before I had finished taking them I was completely cured.

"I advise anyone suffering as I did to use Dodd's Kidney Pills." All Mr. Capusten's troubles came from diseased kidneys. They speedily ceased when he commenced to use the one sure help for diseased kidneys—Dodd's Kidney Pills.

LOOK AT A CHILD'S TONGUE WHEN CROSS, FEVERISH AND SICK

Take no chances! Move poisons from liver and bowels at once.

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "Fruit Laxative." Children love it, and it can not cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

HUSH BOAT A SENSATION IN ARCHITECTURE

London, Jan. 19—There is now lying at Clydebank, nearly completed, a remarkable "hush" boat of the British navy, which, according to the shipping paper Fairplay, is something notable in the history of naval architecture.

This is the Hood, a battle cruiser of extraordinary size, speed and gun-power and which would, says Fairplay "have inaugurated new methods of naval fighting and shown the Germans that we still far ahead of them in naval construction."

The prospect of an early termination of hostilities caused work to be eased on this great vessel, but in order to make room for merchant shipping the Hood has been nearly completed and is now out of the fitting basin.

Fairplay says the vessel "is understood to be the finest combination of size, speed, gun-power and light armor yet dreamed of, and father ahead of the present 'hush boats'—the Courageous class—than these were of the Lion and Tiger. As she lies at Clydebank, the Hood seems to fill all the space which was at one time occupied by the Lusitania, and a war vessel as long as the Lusitania—to say nothing of her other features—is something notable in the history of naval architecture."
