Confessions of an Every-Day Wife

By Idah McGlone Gibson

A CHANGEABLE HUSBAND.

Toddy drew a long sigh of relief as we left the theatre. "I suppose, of course," he said, "that when I reach the age of Barrie I will be looking back and wondering if things had been different what would have happened to me, but just now my past seems one great glorious dream, from which I am not yet awake. After all, this trying to conjure up a different kind of life from the one you have lived, for the mere pastime of making yourself dissatisfied with the only life you will ever have, seems to me the most stupid of indoor sports."

"But Theo," I remonstrated, for I had enjoyed the play more than anything I had seen in a long while, "you don't quite seem to get the idea. Barrie has shown in his poetical and whimsical way the very thing that you are always preaching in the vernacular of the man of the street: 'You always get what's coming to you; don't beef.' Theo looked rather surprised at my using so much slang, even when I was quoting him."

"I'm afraid you wouldn't be much of a leader among the proletariat, Lieutenant Symone," said Mrs. Charlton. "If your wife has voiced your sentiments, it's the easiest and most popular thing in the world to make an ignorant man think that he is superior to his station; that circumstances over which he has no control keep him where he is."

"That is one of the things our politicians seem to learn first," said Major Gordon. "If a man can make his constituents think he is working to put them where they deserve to be, instead of where they are, his political fight is won."

"I rather like that idea of Barrie's," said Theo with a grin, "of the man who said in his heart, 'If I could have married my affinity, I would never have strayed,' finding out that, being married to his affinity, his recalcitrant heart went out to his wife."

"Which means," I could not help but interpose, "that if one becomes a wife, one ceases to be an affinity."

"Now Margot," said Theo with a grin, "don't try satire."

"And you know, Mrs. Symone, a young and pretty woman has no cause to be satirical," said Major Gordon.

"Like every other man, Mrs. Symone," said Mrs. Charlton, "the Major would make youth and beauty in a woman ample compensation for any lack of keen perception."

"Squelched, by Jove," said Toddy under his breath. "If that woman doesn't have a care she'll lose him."

Shortly we arrived at the Amsterdam Roof, and it was a joy to see Toddy's face. His smile became positively cherubic, as we wended our way to our table close to the dancing floor.

"Bet I'll bust a balloon before you do Major," he said. "I see the girls still smile provocatively as they send the balloons against your lighted cigar."

We all enjoyed the dancing and music thoroughly, but I was rather glad when finally the party broke up and Theo and I got back to the hotel.

"Toddy," I said, as I turned up my lips to meet him, "this

MIRROR DROP CURTAIN SAID TO BE A CURE FOR LATE ARRIVALS

London, June 26.—The project of a gigantic mirror as a drop curtain for the Looking Glass theatre in the Adelphi, has aroused many speculations among playgoers.

Some theatre lovers believe that the use of the mirror is a determined effort of a "reconstruction" management to deal with late comers who take their seats in the stalls, to the discomfort of people already seated, only a minute or two before the curtain is timed to rise.

"Late arrivals," said one of the people who welcome the mirror curtain, "do not see the expressions on the faces of the people they disturb as they push their way to their seats. In the mirror they will see the faces of the people they have still to pass and the faces of the people they have passed. They will also, if the theatre is well-lit, see by facial expression what the front row of the pit is saying about them."

Another critic said that theatre managements were taking a great risk in the mirror curtain. "At the end of the first act of new productions that 'catch on,'" he said, "the mirror will be a help to the management; it will reflect the universal smile of approbation of the audience. But what when it reflects a houseful of glum faces? Nothing is so contagious as crowd emotion. Supposing that when the audience see themselves in the mirror a psychic wave attacks them and they all walk out?"

Still another critic disapproved of the mirror curtain on the grounds that it will encourage managements to have unduly long entr'actes, and will lead to disunion among audiences.

"While people in the back rows of the pit and in the upper circles and gallery would be stamping their feet and whistling, the people in the stalls," said the critic, "would be sitting in seraphic patience contemplating themselves in the mirror. Men will hear this sort of thing from their wives: 'Oh, let's go to the Tiara; I hear that the have lovely half-hour intervals between the acts.'"

EVIL OF SUBSTITUTION EXPOSED

A dealer substitutes because he makes more profit on an inferior article. A local citizen was induced to take a substitute for Putnam's Corn Extractor, with the result that the substitute burnt his toes and failed to cure. Putnam's contains no acid and is guaranteed. Always get Putnam's Extractor, 25c. at all dealers.

Self-defence is one good excuse for eating onions.

Sawing wood is perhaps much easier for the old kaiser than changing uniforms every fifteen minutes.

Any season is a good vacation time for the fellow who has the habit of minding other people's business.

An indication of the trend of the times men who a few years ago wished for a million dollars, are now wishing for five millions.

Life is full of compensations. We know that when dust is coming in the open window it is accompanied by fresh air.

war has made poets of you all—I have not had time to tell you what an impression that poem you sent me in your last letter made upon me—

"When I come home from Flanders' Field,
I want to live Life's common way."

I quoted softly from the protecting circle of his clinging arms.

"Do you think you will be satisfied to live Life's common way? Since we were married so hurriedly, dear, I've often wondered if you'll be content to settle down to the humdrum monotony of an everyday wife. Unconsciously, Toddy, you suggest to me that only change makes you happy. Will you ever want to change me?"

He looked at me in a puzzled questioning way. So I added: "I was touched by your joy at seeing me on the pier, but that soon merged into your enthusiasm over Fifth Avenue, both of which you immediately forgot upon the arrival at luncheon of your steak and mince pie. Then for a moment Mrs. Charlton held your mind as well as your eye."

"Why, dearest, can you not see it is all one enthusiasm, just home and you?"

"Oh, Theo, I was only joking," but nevertheless way down in my heart I wondered if he would be so changeable when greater issues were at stake.

FATEFUL YEARS FOR ALL WOMEN

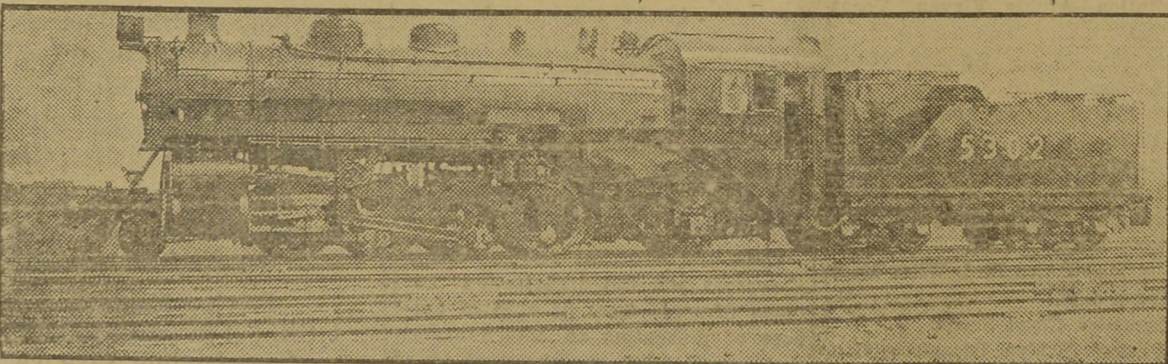

How Best to Overcome the Troubles That Afflict Women Only.

The most fateful years in a woman's life are those between forty-five and fifty. Many women enter this term under depressing conditions through overwork, worry or a neglected condition of the blood, and so they suffer heavily. Still, variations of health at this time can be relieved by home treatment.

Among the commonest symptoms are headaches and pains in the back and sides, fever-flashes, palpitation, dizziness and depression. Women stand in need of rich, red blood all their life, but never more so than in middle age, when the nerves are a so weak and over-wrought. Now every woman can prove the prompt help afforded to her health by renewing her blood supply. It is a test that any ailing woman can make by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for these pills make rich, red blood, which in turn helps the appetite, strengthens the nerves and restores robust health. Thousands of women have found in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the means by which new health and a brighter outlook of life were gained. In proof of this is the voluntary testimony of Mrs. H. S. Peterson, Milford, Ont. who says:—"I have suffered greatly from those troubles that afflict my sex, and I have found that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in such cases not only do all that is claimed for them, but more. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done so much for me that I urge every weak woman to try them, and they will soon realize the great difference in one's health they make."

If you suffer from any of the ills that particularly afflict womanhood you should avail yourself at once of the health help of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can get them from any dealer in medicine or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

New Giant C.P.R. Locomotive

One of the largest locomotives ever built for use on Canadian railways have been under construction for some time at the C.P.R. Angus Shops in Montreal, and one of these, No. 5302 was inspected the other day by President E. W. Beatty, and Vice-President Grant Hall. These locomotives are of the heavy Mikado type and are intended for freight service, being designed and built under the direct supervision of Mr. W. H. Winterrowd, the Chief Mechanical Engineer.

The weight of the engine and tender in working condition is 500,000 lbs., the engine alone weighing 323,000 lbs. The diameter of the driving wheels is 63 inches. The cylinders are 25½ inches in diameter by 32-inch stroke, which with 200-lbs. boiler pressure makes these locomotives capable of exerting a maximum tractive effort of 36,000 lbs. The diameter of the boiler is 80 inches at the front end and 90 inches at the back end. The fire box is 84 inches wide and 120 inches long, and the grates are moved by steam grate shakers.

The cab is of the vestibule type, which is the C.P.R. standard, and every effort has been made to make the accommodations for the engine-men as comfortable as possible. One side of the cab is fitted with a clothes locker 14 inches by 20 inches wide, in which clothes can be hung and lunch pails carried.

The tender has a capacity for 12 tons of coal and 8,000 imperial gallons of water.
