AROUND THE CITY

With considerable discussion in the Province of Ontario on the question of proportional representation or some rearrangement of the electoral districts for provincial elections, the same subjects are bound to be discussed in other provinces, New Brunswick among them. An analysis of the vote in the recent Ontario general election shows that by the system of parliamentary representation in vogue in that province the party now dominant was placed in power by an absolute minority of the people, a minority which by actual count had the small end of a three-to-one vote at the polls. Fredericton as a municipality frequently has felt the disadvantage of being a portion of an overwhelmingly rural constituency and frequently the proposals has been made that this city should have its own representative in the legislature. Up to the present the movement has not had sufficient force behind it to produce results but with the city of Moncton given its own representatives in the House and with the population of Fredericton increasing as it has in recent years, this city is in a better position than ever to demand separate representation. It also is possible that some of the larger towns of the province will demand that there be a readjustment of the electoral system such as will give them adequate representation.

Coleman's Big Frog still sits in state in his show-case at the Barker House but so long has it been since he first made his appearance there, that many do not know the story which attaches to that magnificent specimen of the taxidermist's art. Many do not know the story of the discovery of the monster frog by the late F. B. Coleman in Killarney Lake some three miles from Fredericton and his feeding of the reptile with cornmeal and other special foods until it attained a terrific size, nor do they know that the frog would respond to the whistle of his owner. Strangers who observe the stuffed monster are eager to learn about it. One of those who displayed the greatest interest in the frog was the owner of the Cinderella Company an English musical comedy organization which visited Fredericton some months ago. Strange as it may seem local people manifest very little interest in this marvel of Nature!

This column recently referred to "home-made gin" which has become one of the numerous popular Prohibition drinks in the vicinity of Fredericton. It is said to have the appearance and the odor of the genuine article but hardly the flavor, although it is most reminiscent of J. D. K. Raisins however, are the stand-by of the majority who do not take kindly to innovations. They believe in the simple process of putting a few raisins in a bottle of "two per cent" or even hop beer and letting Mother Nature do the rest. They claim that the result is all that can be desired under the circumstances and the "kick" one with most durable qualities.

Many people believe in signs but some make their belief too literal. A resident of Hanwell who was in town the other day saw the mystic words "Hot Dogs" on a sign at a quick-lunch restaurant. "What does it mean?" he asked a bystander. "You can get a hot dog to eat there," was the answer. "My Heavens," said the Hanwellian, "I read that they were eating horses across the water but I didn't think they had come to eating dogs in Fredericton."

This city has not yet begun to reap the full benefit of her position as railway centre. With the effects of the war becoming less apparent and the times of peace returning to what they used to be, train-services will be expanded and distribution greater. With six lines of railway radiating from Fredericton this city is destined to be the distributing center of Central New Brunswick. Moncton easily can make her claim to the title of Maritime Distribution centre, but in the central and western portions of this province Fredericton has an advantage which she will not yield to the Railway City. It is not beyond the realm of fact to expect a considerable number of jobbing houses and branches to locate here within the next few years, particularly if the expected mineral development in New Brunswick takes place. Fredericton's ambition to be on a main railway line have been gratified to some extent by the inauguration of the St. John Valley-Quebec Bridge service of the C. N. R. which probably will be further expanded, but this city cannot help thinking of the

ANOTHER VICTIM OF RHEUMATISM

Entirely Well After Six Weeks' Treatment With "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. AMEDEE GARCEAU

32 Hickory St., Ottawa, Ont.

"I was for many years a victim of that terrible disease, Rheumatism. In 1913, I was laid up for four months with Rheumatism in the joints of the knees, hips and shoulders and was prevented from following my work, that of Electrician."

I tried many remedies and was under the care of a physician; but nothing did me any good. Then I began to take 'Fruit-a-tives' and in a week I was easier, and in six weeks I was so well I went to work again."

I look upon this fruit medicine, 'Fruit-a-tives', as simply marvellous in the cure of Rheumatism, and strongly advise everyone suffering with Rheumatism to give 'Fruit-a-tives' a trial."

Why do a certain few persons who attend shows giggle at the moments when most serious parts of the "unspoken drama" are portrayed on the screen Thursday at the Gaiety when Tom Moore, playing the lead in "The City of Comrades" burst into tears in the "Down and Out Club" a number of people began to snicker. This is not an isolated instance. Any one who attends picture shows will notice similar cases. Girls usually are the offenders. Perhaps psychology can account for this, perhaps it is arrested mental development.

Portions of military attire frequently are seen doing duty as parts of civilian dress. There are military regulations forbidding this but with the general break-down in convention which has attended the war, they are disregarded. Often the military attire is used without any alteration but in a few cases the garments have made the acquaintance of the dyer. Khaki takes a very good brown when dyed and also can be dyed black without difficulty.

NOTED PREACHER CALLS THE ENEMY BROTHER

London, Nov. 28.—Some angry criticism has fallen upon the Rev. Dr. J. H. Jowett, the famous preacher, for saying "I would tear out the fettering, embarrassing, imprisoning, demeaning word 'alien' and substitute 'brother' no matter if a man were stained with blood." Dr. Jowett was understood to bring the Germans within the sweep of his declaration. His sympathies were too broad for a good many British critics.

"Nothing can be economically right which is morally wrong," says the preacher in an explanatory interview. "The great need now is to help Europe and as I have always been an upholder of free trade I contend we must have deeds and not merely words. It is only by practical help that we can give aid, by sending what raw materials we can spare and generally assisting distressed Europe to resume her industries, and by raising the blockade."

VESSEL'S HULL UNEARTHED

(Chatham Commercial.)

Capt. Samuel J. Breaux, of the W. S. Loggie Company's schooner Warren P., who was in town yesterday, re-Kouchibouguac.

The recent severe storm washed out a large sand hill in that vicinity, exposing to view the front half of a large schooner, estimated to be a 300-ton vessel. The keel, timbers, etc., remain intact while the decks and houses have the appearance of having been burned off. The lumber is quite sound and looks as if it is juniper or pine.

The vessel was "through-fastened," the fastenings being of iron. The bank or hill along the beach where the vessel can be seen protruding is all of 25 feet high, and up till two years ago was fully half a mile away from the shore. There never has been a gully where the schooner lies, in the recollection of the oldest residents. The beach has been washed away in the vicinity so much of late years that buildings, etc., have had to be moved back. Because of these facts it is practically impossible to estimate how long the vessel has lain there buried in mother earth.

FIRST AERIAL WAITER DIES

London, Nov. 27.—Orio Alessandro of the Criterion Restaurant is dead. He was the first waiter to serve a course dinner in Cloudland, carrying plates of soup in his teeth while clutching the brass rails in the gondola of the airship R-33 during its recent voyage from London to Paris and Brussels and return with a party of financiers. Orio died from a long standing affliction of the stomach.

Orio was an Italian and served in the army of his country. He leaves a son 10 years old, who becomes the ward of the restaurant.

ABOUT 170 years ago tea sold in England for $14.60 a pound. It was a luxury which only the wealthy could afford.

Thanks largely to the great increase in the area of tea plants under cultivation in India during the past fifty years, there is enough tea grown to-day to supply tea to the world at a price even the poorest can afford.

A cup of "good" tea—Red Rose Tea—costs only a fraction of a cent. There is hardly anything sold in the grocery store that gives more value or more pleasure for the money.

Consisting chiefly of ASSAM teas—the richest and strongest of Indian teas—Red Rose is exceedingly fragrant, flavory and economical. It is a tea of real quality and real value.

Sold only in sealed packages.
