BLACK RECORD OF HUNS SHOULD NOT BE FORGOTTEN

The Military Nation Which Trampled Upon Small States Would Speak Again Through the Brazen Throat of War if She Dared—Huns Do Not Believe They are Defeated—A Plague
Spot That Must be Watched.

(By Francis G. Brown)

That gloomy cloud, which portends so much, has again settled on the brow of Germany. This offending state, that trampled so mercilessly upon small non-offending states, would speak again through the 'brazen throat of war' if she dared. She is looking at her battered and broken sword, and she is wondering how she can make it the sole arbiter of right. She will not try to learn that there is such a thing as pure political and international justice. She can only poorly disguise her vile love of the despotism of kings and the gospel of brute force. The cemented foundations of her martial oligarchy have been shattered; but she cannot forget what a vast system of destroying energies she had so assiduously built up; and her wanton eye sees nothing but the fact that she has become the victim of her own stratagem. The devastation she wrought in other lands she cannot see.

A Criminal in the Dock.

Germany is in the position of a burglar, who, to gain his plunder, has hacked his way through a house and murdered those who stood in his way. He failed to get away with the goods, and now standing in the dock, he sees and hears nothing but the judge and jury. The destroyed house, the murdered victims, have faded from his vision. So he thinks the judge and jury very hard on him. Why cannot they allow those horrid details to fade from their view also? Why keep the poor prisoner chained to military police on the right hand and the left?

Forget those unpleasant details, and in the name of humanity be humane—may, be even tender.

Germany is jealous of the free jury, and whilst she is in that frame of mind I see cause not for alarm, but for careful oversight on the part of the prison wardens.

No Sign of Regeneration.

She still has a vanity which is infinite in a nature where moral self-restraint is feeble. Her vaunting ambition would again o'erleap itself; and that is the plague spot we have to watch. She gives few signs of being a new-born babe, of having passed through a process of "purification by blood and fire." No, no. Traces of her primitive character are too evident; of that awful popular might which so recently turned the world into a shambles. The Allies therefore, and especially England—England who was to be annihilated—need to be watchful. If Germany is to enter a League of Nations, she can only do it by a heavier responsibility than the rest. She has a most unenviable task, for it is up to her to prove that her good intentions are greater than her infirmity.

Germany Defeated.

The unfortunate thing is that Germany does not feel that she was ever beaten. Beaten she was, right down to the ground; but in her beaten condition we granted an armistice, instead of marching over their dead bodies in triumph to Berlin. I often say, in discussing the peace terms with other soldiers, that the Allies in dealing with Germany have to keep in mind what they would have done to us, and imposed upon us, if they could have got through.

We must not, for honour's sake, act in the same spirit as they would have acted; but we must not forget the danger we were in and what their intentions were. We owe it to our children and children's children, as well as to ourselves as soldiers, to keep this in mind.

Stern Realization.

Germany has a genius for superlative phrases in describing her emotions, whether of joy or sorrow. Today they are sorrowful ones—as they should be.

Scheidemann says, speaking of our peace terms, "Away with this murderous scheme." Mark you, he is saying this to a band of murderers. If the ex-Kaiser were back home he would be throwing around similar superlatives. "This dreadful and murderous document would make an enormous jail of Germany in which sixty million persons would have to labor for the victors in the war."

Precisely; labor with their hands until the damage they wrought is repaired. Did ever burglar who murdered and destroyed to gain his loot, get off as light as that?

Some of Their Crimes.

On Sunday, Oct. 20, 1918, we pulled into Roex, on the outskirts of Denain. Here we hit upon the first French civilians on the other side of the battle area. It was a mining town and had been under German rule for four years. The people were in a pitiable condition. They told us stories of the immoral relations of German soldiers with young girls. After their ruin these girls had disappeared.

Where? No one knew. Whether deported or murdered they could not find out. A boy of eighteen pulled up the left sleeve of his coat and showed me the stump of his arm. They had cut off his hand so that when he came of age he could not serve the French flag.

The American Red Cross had sent great supplies to the people. The Germans had appropriated what they wanted for their own use, and given the remainder to the civic authorities to distribute amongst the people.

Deliberate Destruction.

I hardly saw anyone with a pair of

AN AIRSHIP'S WEAK POINT

(New York Sun)

The mishap to the navy dirigible C-5, near St. John's Newfoundland, was of a sort that has retarded the use of craft lighter than air for many years. The airship is a true ship, and therefore subject to a ship's perils. The earth surface is the coast of the atmospheric sea. It has its harbors natural or artificial shelters from the air currents, but like marine harbors they are scarce. In proportion to their bulk and volume airships have but a small part of the strength of seagoing vessels. In proportion to their element, they may be stronger when afloat in it. When stranded on the ground they find the rocks as hard as does the ship ashore. The air, while lighter than the water, makes up for its lack of impact by a greater swiftness and freedom of onrush, and has the grounded airship at its mercy.

At least airship crews cannot drown in air. If the atmosphere did as much harm to shipwrecked crews as it does to their vessels, perhaps the problem of protecting dirigibles while on boots or shoes. They wore a kind of wooden slipper, pointed at the toe, with a strap over the instep to keep it on. Children were wan and pale, and ill kempt.

The Huns deliberately and wantonly blew the shafts to pieces on the top of the mines before he left. Was it Shylock who said, "You take away my life when you take away the means whereby I live?" That was exactly what the Germans did for those people—destroyed the means whereby they lived. The dear people brightened up upon our entrance, attended to their toilet and made the best of everything. Through the Canadian Red Cross and the Canadian Corps, 73,000 people were quickly supplied with good food regularly.

Lest We Forget!

The Germans were not whining the years they occupied those districts, and polluted the people's homes, and stole away their food. This is how their representative spokesman, the ex-Kaiser, talked then.

"Exterminate first the treacherous English; walk over General French's contemptible little army"—Aug. 19, 1914.

"America had better look out after the war. I shall stand no nonsense from the Americans."—Oct. 22, 1915.

"England is particularly the enemy to be struck down, however difficult it may be."—Aug. 23, 1917.

"Everyone of you into the remotest corner of the Fatherland knows that I left no stone unturned to shorten the war."—Sept. 11, 1917.

Not Vengeance, but Justice.

I do not believe in vengeance, but I do believe in justice, for the whole moral fabric of society is built upon that principle. And she doesn't like it—as whatever criminal ever did.

When she hesitated to sign the Allies' terms, Marshal Foch went forward at once to his armies. I am glad of that.

Lest we forget! Lest we forget!

Nearly Every Girl Can Make Herself Pretty and Attractive

SOME WHOLESOME TRUTHS
EVERY GIRL SHOULD THINK ABOUT.

Probably you know just such a girl.

Perhaps she is sixteen—good to look at, and pretty—quite interesting because she reflects the graces and charm that gives promise of happiness to herself and others. But she is not strong. The color in her cheeks, once so rosy, has faded away—her eyes are listless—the buoyancy of spirit and vigor she once possessed are sadly lacking. Parents, friends, this girl needs Ferrozone—needs it that her blood may be renewed—needs it to restore the nerve force that growth, study and the development of her fresh youth have exhausted. This girl will become queen with Ferrozone—which will restore her color—bring back her oldtime energy—give brightness to her eyes and vivacity to her spirits. In Ferrozone every girl finds strength—then she can do things. In Ferrozone there is endurance—that drives away morning tiredness and languor. For the girl or woman that wants to be happy, healthy, winning—who values rosy cheeks, laughing eyes and abundant good spirits, nothing can compare with Ferrozone. 50c. per box, or six for $2.50. the ground would receive more serious study.

In the present case the navy, experimenting with abundant resources back of it, can afford to set down the mishap of the C-5 as one of the useful lessons of the transatlantic flight effort and start over again if needful. It may be that the lighter-than-air type will prove superior for purposes of conveyance across the ocean. In such a case the construction of elaborate and numerous air harbors will eventually do away with much of the present insecurity of the dirigible on land.
