ANOTHER BIG FIGHT FOR THE GOULD MILLIONS

George J. Gould, Son of the Great Financier, is Fighting an Attempt to Oust Him From the Position of Administrator—The Elder Gould's Remarkable Career Recalled—Was One of the Kings of Wall Street.

(Toronto Mail.)

George Gould, administrator of the estate of Jay Gould, is fighting an effort on the part of one or more of his brothers to have him ousted from the position. It is alleged that he has been improperly paying and withholding large sums of money, that he has been enriching himself at the expense of the estate. All these charges are denied. Hence the lawsuit, which promises to be long and expensive and the opportunity to glance over the career of Jay Gould, one of the most remarkable of American financiers and stock manipulators. He began with practically nothing, and died in 1892 leaving an estate appraised at $72,- 000,000.

Even today $75,000,000 is a considerable heap of money, and twenty years ago it probably represented what $150,- 000,000 would represent in 1913.

Moreover, when Jay Gould made his millions the secret of doing so was not at the disposal of the many. Nowadays, thanks to the gratuitous advice handed out by John D. Rockefeller and others, everybody knows how to become a millionaire. All that is necessary is to get up early in the morning and be honest and thrifty except with regard to church contributions, when a certain amount of prodigality is advised.

A Real American.

Another thing about Jay Gould is that he was American for several generations back. He was no refugee from Lithuania or Kiev, who landed in the United States on July day dressed in a gabardine and a fur cap to blossom forth in a few months as the proprietor of a hat checking concession.
The original Gould, or, as the name was spelled then, Gold, was Nathan, who left England in 1846. Sixty years later his son Nathan II., was deputy governor of Connecticut and later on Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of that state. Another ancestor, Col.
Abraham Gould, was killed in the war of Independence, and his sword with authentic bloodstains remains in the possession of the family. Jay Gould, who in early life was known as Jason, was born in Roxbury, N. Y., in 1836.
He left school when he was sixteen, but devoted his time to teaching himself mathematics and the cruder forms of surveying. He also kept books for the village blacksmith and earned enough to pay his board.

Became a Speculator.

He worked for his father in a hardware store for a short time and then set out to survey and map New York counties at a salary of $20 a month.

Having early advices as to where roads would be laid, he was able to pick up some real estate that he soon turned into money. He used to do his surveying with a level, but one day when he was running a line, one of his directors turned up with a mess and complicated theodolite, and expected him to operate it.

Jay knew about as much about the theodolite as the theodolite knew about him, and seemed about to be unmasked as a surveying quack, but just as he approached the instrument a sudden rain shower fell. The party had to take refuge in a nearby house.
The rain continued and for two days made surveying impossible.

At the end of that time Jay Gould had mastered the mysteries of the theodolite's numerous joints and screws, and when the weather cleared enough for the surveying to proceed, he manipulated the instrument with as much nonchalance as though it had been a pocket flask.

Got Hold of a Railroad.

Young Gould picked up considerable money at the surveying and land speculating game, and later got a chance as manager of a little railroad whose stock was controlled by Daniel Miller, his father-in-law. He was successful in reorganizing the concern and putting it on a sound basis, and was equally successful with the Rutland & Washington road.

The bonds were considered practically worthless, and Gould picked them up for a song. The money he made out this deal when, by careful work and inspection he had made the bonds valuable, gave him the capital which launched him successfully on his great railway career.

He had the extraordinary ability of estimating the values and possibilities of railroads and one the stock market showed a genius for combinations and a tenacity of purpose that soon made him one of the acknowledged generals of Wall Street.

He did not always win in his daring speculations and more than doubtful enterprises. His average was probably not better than about 700, but it was enough to put by a couple of millions or so for every working year.

When He was Hard Up.

At one time he was reputed to be the heaviest borrower in the United States, and in 1882 it was reported he was hard put to it for money. The street was on the verge of a panic when Gould called a group of financiers into his office, and showed them securities worth $53,000,000. His connection with the Erie Railroad in association with Jim Fisk resulted in a first class financial and political scandal and there were other blots on his escutcheon. Nevertheless he contin-

SPECKS FLOATING BEFORE HIS EYES

When specks start to float before the eyes, when everything turns black for a few seconds and you feel as if you were going to faint, you may rest assured that your liver is not working properly.

The essential thing to do in all cases where the liver is slow, lazy or torpid, is to stir it up by the use of a medicine that will clear away all the waste and poisonous matter from the system, and prevent as well as cure all the troubles arising from this accumulated mass which has collected in the system.

Keep the bowels open by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and you will have no liver trouble of any kind.
They will clear away all the waste and effete matter which has collected and make the liver active and working properly.

Mr. John R. Morrison, Grand River Falls, N.S., writes:—"Several months ago I was troubled with a sour stomach, and had specks floating before my eyes. I took five vials of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills which cured and cleaned my blood before any length of time. I told my friends about it and they got some, and they, too, find themselves different since they took highly."

ued to thrive, always sticking to railroads.

The Gould fortune is a railroad fortune, just as the Astor fortune is a real estate fortune. The Gould system of railroads in the southwest had a mileage of 10,000 and at the time this was more than one-tenth of the railroad mileage of the United States.

Whether the fortune he amassed has grown or decreased since his death is uncertain, but the indications are that it has grown and there can be little doubt that if Jay Gould had lived for another fifty years he would have been the oldest if not the richest man in the United States.
