THINKING AHEAD.

The mental quality that most differentiates a man from the beast is his imagination. The poet gets more out of life than the peasant, largely because he can project himself into the past and into the wide present. The successful business manager is more valuable than the stevedore, chiefly because he can project himself into the future. Speaking to a friend who was doing night work to supplement his day's income, the manager of a department of a Minneapolis wholesale house once said: "I don't have to work nights any more. I can put my feet up on my desk in the forenoon and think out a new method that will net our house ten thousand dollars annually, and do this more than once a year. I work my head by daylight, and lay it on a pillow at night."

One type of human being lives in the present. He can think a little further than the horse can, because his imagination reaches to the next payday. But beyond that his mind is occupied with the passing things that catch his eye and ear. These go through his brain unassimilated. His mind is not a laboratory; it is a channel. The rabbit and the ox are mentally much after his pattern. The present days are great days for the profitable exercise of the imagination. Possibly ten million persons, soldiers, and men and women workers at home, are thinking more or less seriously just now of shifting occupation. The earning class is in flux as it never was before. "Do you want your old job back?" asked an employer of a returned soldier. "No, I want something better." "What would you like?" "I don't know, but I think I ought to get something better; I don't care what, only so it pays better," was the soldier's reply.

This young man had had hours, and days on end, when he might have been fixing his mind on a choice of employment, and when he might have been preparing in some measure for his chosen work. He had time to kill—and he killed it. He did not even take time to decide what he wanted to do. He left that—the question of most financial interest to himself—to another man to decide.

Most men who do not think, shirk thinking for themselves because thinking is the hardest work a man can do. But it is the sure way to success. Straight thinking is the best paid labor in the world. The man who lets another do his thinking for him must pay the thinker's head labor with his own hand labor; for hard thinking must precede any occupation that employs hand labor.

The literature issued in connection with the war savings and thrift stamps campaign indicates that Canada is a land of many nationalities. Already pamphlets have been printed in French, Italian, Swedish, Norwegian, Icelandic, Ruthenian, Polish and Yiddish. The war savings and thrift stamps have been very heartily received in many communities settled by foreign born persons, many of whom, in the land of their birth, had been brought to realize the advantages of similar methods of saving. The Canadian War Savings plan has also been well supported by the foreign language press.

Kingston Standard: It is only right that the London Stock Exchange has passed a new rule under which no member shall, without the special permission of the committee, employ in any capacity any person of German, Austrian, Hungarian, Bulgarian or Turkish birth or any former member who has been expelled and whose application for re-election has been rejected.

Collier's Weekly: Mr. Hohenzollern says he prefers not to think of his exit from Germany as a "flight." While we would like to agree with William, we cannot help thinking of a phrase that occurs in real estate leases. When a tenant is thrown out for not paying his rent or for abusing the premises, the lawyers call it "an amicable action in ejectment."

Count William Hohenzollern, the former Kaiser of Germany, is sixty-years old today. Having lost his throne, he is now in Holland and, it is to be hoped, will soon be placed on trial to answer for his bloody crimes against humanity. As hanging is too good for such a cut-throat, it is a trifle difficult to know what sort of punishment will be meted out to him.

Of the 203 German submarines lost during the war, it is estimated semi-officially, that 120 were sunk with all on board, and that in the others an average of half the crew perished. The complement of the German submarines varied. Some small boats had only thirty on board, while a boat of the cruiser type averaged between fifty and sixty.

A London cable says that the Canadian contingent is about to leave Germany and Bonn, which has been their headquarters since they came to the banks of the Rhine, will fall to the occupation of some other corps.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

As Mrs. Hen will be attending the poultry show this week, egg consumers will please be patient.

Thus far this has been a mild winter, the elements tempering the wind to the shorn consumer.

THE CITY BOUNDARIES

F'ton, Jan. 27, 1919.

Editor Daily Mail.

Dear Sir:—

An editorial in Saturday's Gleaner opposed the proposal to reduce the boundaries of the city to more reasonable proportions. I would ask the person who wrote the editorial whether he is prepared to advocate an increase in the tax rate in order that these roads referred to by him, be kept in, even, reasonably good order, and would the Gleaner Ltd., or the individual cheerfully pay their fair proportion of such increased taxes, provided the increase was expended for this particular purpose.

As it is now, the city of Fredericton is responsible for the upkeep of the roads to the Sunbury County line, and also the roads leading up over the hill at the rear of the city, just as much as the proper care of the streets and sidewalks shown in the town-plan of the city.

The inclusion within the city of Fredericton of the whole Parish of Fredericton, does not reflect favorably upon the intelligence of those who applied for incorporation in the first place.

A diagram of the area included in the city, and the actual city city, would demonstrate clearly the absurdity of the present situation. The wonder is that so long a period has elapsed without a suggestion of this enlightened reform in the matter of the intelligent conduct of the city's affairs.

Yours truly,

TAXPAYER.
