A REAL FISH STORY FROM OYSTER BAY, LONG ISLAND

Trout Kept in Pool Beneath Hotel Bar Got Jagged on One Occasion—Keg of Sherry Wine Sprung Aleak in the Pool—Fish Had Wild Cabaret—Fresh Water Sobered Them Up.

Out at Oyster Bay, set among a cluster of antique dwellings on the sands of the beach itself, is one of the oldest inns on Long Island. It is also one of the most remarkable.

Over the door swings a faded and unpainted sign which tells the close observer that the place in the Trout Pond Inn. The sign starts to tell when the inn was established but it gets no further than "18"—the century is distinguishable but the year has long since faded into a weatherbeaten blur.

William Fox, the present proprietor, has been there for more than thirty years and his predecessor was there longer than that.

If you happen to be the kind of a person he likes, will tell you who put the trout pond in the Trout Pond Inn.

Bill even consented to show the writer the trout pond, although he said he didn't like to at that particular time because there had been an accident a few days ago from which the fish had not yet recovered. However, he led the way to a dark cavern underneath the bar, where the sound of running water could be heard.

Suddenly Bill flashed on a string of electric lights and revealed a concrete-lined circular cave, at the bottom of which was a glistening pool of clear, sparkling, artesian well water.

Submerged in the pool were several beer and ale kegs attached to the spigots on the bar upstairs by long metal tubes.

Around the kegs cavorted a dozen huge trout. The smallest, Bill said, weighed considerably more than six pounds, and several tipped the scales at better than eight. "Tipping the scales" is one of Bill's standard jokes.

Just then Bill dipped down among the trout and brought up a glass of water that was as clear as crystal. As he held it up against one of the electric light bulbs the water shone like liquid diamonds.

"See them trout?" he added. "Well there ain't one that has been in that pool less than ten years. Now, there's Jessie, for instance. She's hidin' behind that beer barrel 'cause she's sort of shy with strangers."

"Jessie ain't as spry as once she was," declared Bill. "She is close onto eleven years old now, and I guess she'll be passin' out soon. Her father, a trout called Old Bill, whose remains are stuffed and hanging up behind the bar, lived in this pool for twelve years and three months. At that age he died a natural death. This part of Oyster Bay went into mourning when

WHY BELGIANS STILL NEED HELP

"In travelling through Belgium with the Belgian armies, I have been able to see the country recently tenanted by the Bochs in the condition in which they left it, and never was there such desolation anywhere. One cannot get away from signs of destruction, no matter where one goes, along the country roads or in the city streets.

Not only has property been destroyed and every means of livelihood taken away from the people, but the peasants, especially in the country districts, have been left destitute both of home and food. We travelled twelve miles yesterday through open country and as but one small instance of the vast plundering of the Germans, let me state that in all twelve miles not one solitary live animal did we see, and practically every tree had been felled, so you can imagine the dreary aspect of the scenery.

All the peasant women and children we met on our way, said a news correspondent, while they greeted us with cheers and received us into their homes with open arms, those that had homes, showed the greatest suffering from insufficient food and nourishment. They did not complain, but merely stated as a fact that they had not tasted meat for two months and had lived largely on soup and coffee.

The cry of the Belgians today is for food and clothing and those who would help, no matter how little, should send their contributions to their committee, or direct to the Central Committee, Belgian Relief Fund 59 St. Peter street, Montreal.

FRUIT TREES OF RAVAGED PART OF FRANCE

There is one little movement in behalf of France with which everyone may not only have sympathy, and in connection with which everyone may do a practical thing to restore the beauty and fruitfulness of the devastated region. That is the movement, which has its central office at 1974 Broadway, New York City, to provide the ravaged district with fruit trees. As all know, if the Germans left a single fruit tree alive in the region which they invaded, it was through oversight, or because they were driven out so quickly that they could not finish their destructive work. As a rule, they cut down uprooted or girdled every fruit tree that they found their object in doing this of course, being in no sense military, since they gained no military advantage from the proceeding, but to hurt French people ticed a queer odor of sherry in the pool. Then I discovered that one of the sherry casks had sprung a leak and I knew in a minute that all those fish were plum intoxicated.

"The one lying on the surface as sleeping his jag off. The rest were simply having a wild cabaret. I let a lot of fresh well water into the pool and after a while they began to sober up. Most of 'em had bad headaches for a long while after."

ONE DOSE RELIEVES A COLD—NO QUININE

Take "Pape's Cold Compound" every two hours until you have taken three doses, the all gripe misery goes and your cold will be broken. It promptly opens your clogged-up nostrils and the air passages of the head; stops nasty discharge or nose running; relieves the headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffing. Ease your throbbing head—nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only a few cents at any drug store.

and to destroy their future means of subsistence so far as they could. The returning French people come back to a district in which the very soil has been turned topsy-turvy and the fertile loam largely covered with the upheaved sterile sub-soil. Now in that condition, the growing thing which has the best chance of success is the fruit tree. It sends its roots deep into the ground. Often it thrives in loose gravel better than it does in any other soil, and the loosening up of the soil-bed, by explosions and excavations may even facilitate its development, provided it is supplied with a modicum of fertilizer. One would say that the devastated section, with the proper scientific attention, could be made an ideal fruit-growing country. He who plants a fruit tree in northeastern France helps to wipe out the stain of the Hun and to restore the once fair land to productivity and beauty. Fortunately 10,000 trees have already been provided for in France by American subscriptions, and it is likely that the orchards of the country will be fully restored by this means.
