CLOCKS WHICH STRIKE
THIRTEEN AT ONE O'CLOCK

Two Which Strike the Unlucky Number are in Use in Lancashire, England — Some Other Remarkable Clocks — How the Life of a Soldier was Saved by a Clock Striking Thirteen.

Among the most curious clocks in the world are two in Worsley, Lancashire, England, that never strike one. Instead they strike thirteen at 1 a. m. and 1 p. m. One of them is over the Earl of Ellesmere's place, called Worsley Hall, and is the original clock which the Duke of Bridgewater had placed in the tower. It is said that the Duke had the clock made to strike the "unlucky" number so as to warn his workmen that it was time to return after dinner, some of them having excused themselves for being late on the ground that they could not hear it strike one.

This recalls the incident when the big clock of the Houses of Parliament saved a man's life. A soldier in the reign of William and Mary was condemned by court-martial for falling asleep while on duty on the terrace at Windsor. He stoutly denied the charge and by way of proof solemnly declared that he heard Old Tom (the predecessor of Big Ben) strike thirteen instead of twelve. The officers laughed at the idea, but while the man was in prison awaiting execution several persons came forward and swore that the clock actually did strike thirteen. whereupon the soldier was pardoned and released.

Wells Cathedral contains one of the most interesting clocks in the world.
It was constructed by Peter Lightfoot a monk, in 1320 and embraces many devices which testify to the ancient horologists ingenuity. Several celestial and terrestrial bodies are incorporated in the interesting movement and relationship. They indicate the hours of the day, the age of the moon and the position of the planets and the tides.

When the clock strikes the hour two companies of horsemen, fully armed dash out at gateways in opposite directions and charge vigorously. They strike with their lances as they pass as many times as correspond with the number of the hour. A little distance away, seated on a high perch, is a quaint figure, which kicks the quarters on two bells beneath his feet and strikes the hours on a bell. The dial of the clock is divided into twenty-four hours and shows the phases of the moon and a map of the universe.

An oddity in clocks is the invention of a Frenchman named Cornu. It consists of a dial mounted above a reservoir and having a sort of seesaw mounted upon its support. The reservoir holds sufficient alcohol to last for a month and this serves as fuel for a small flame that burns at one end. The heat from the flame causes the air to expand in the bulb of the seesaw directly above it. As a result the seesaw moves every five seconds. This movement is the sole motive power that actuates the clock.

In Switzerland are made clocks that do not require hands and faces. The timepiece merely stands in the hall, and one presses a button, which by means of the phonographic internal arrangements calls out "Half past four" or "Five minutes to ten," or whatever the time may be.

A Swiss has invented a remarkable sick room clock. When a button is pressed an electric lamp behind the dial throws the shadow of the hours and hands magnified upon the ceiling, so that invalids can see it from bed without craning their necks or putting themselves to any inconvenience.

A Dutch shoemaker spent fifteen years of his leisure moments in constructing a clock of the grandfather shape nearly six feet high, made entirely of straw. The wheels, pointers case and every detail are exclusively of straw. The clock is said to keep good time.

The clock in the Lyons Cathedral is a wonderful piece of mechanism, and the legend describing it is as follows: The cock crows, the bell sounds the hours, the little bells the Sancta Spiritus, the angel opens the gate to salute the Virgin Mary, the heads of the two lions move the eyes and the tongue, the astrolabe shows the hours in its degrees and the movement of the moon. Moreover, the perpetual calendar shows all the days of the year, the feast days and the blissestle. The hours at which the chimes are complete are five and six in the morning midday and one and two o'clock in the afternoon. The chimes at the other hours are restricted so as not to interfere with the cathedral service.

Complicated indeed is the clock of the Veauvais Cathedral. It is said to be composed of 92,000 separate pieces, according to a French statement. One sees on the fifty-two dial plates the hour, the day, the week and the month the rising and setting of the sun, the phases of the moon, the tides, the time in the principle capitals of the world together with a series of terrestrial and astronomical evolutions. The framework is of carved oak, 8 by 5 meters, or 26 by 16½ feet. When the clock strikes, all the edifice seems in movement. The designer wished to depict the Last Judgment. This wonderful clock is the work of a Beau-vaisian, M. Verite. He died in 1887.

HUMOR IN SHORT METRE

A Kiss Amiss.

He asked if her hand he might kiss.
She paused in reflection and said, "I cannot consent, sir, to this, or kissing may go to my head."

Only a Dream.

I had a dream the other night, I dreamt that the umbrella I loaned way back in the fall To a careless sort of fella, Had been returned by him at last To save unpleasant scandal—Recovered neatly, and my name Carved quaintly on the handle.

She Figured It Out All Right.

That Mother Eve was up to date You really must confess, For did she not originate The loose-leaf style of dress?

We Wish He Would.

I wish some man, O very wise, Would fill the world with glad surprise,
And grow, could he but have the zeal,
An anti-skid banana peel.

Very True.

Who's never had but One divorce.

WISDOM OF EXPERIENCE.

live over again, what would you do?"
"I'd get married before I had sense enough to decide to be an old maid."

FRILLS O. K.
BUT CHILLY

London, Aug. 13.—Women war workers want their uniforms again. For two, three and four years they have been accustomed to wearing warm khaki and the "cobweb" gowns they are going back to leave them chilly and shivery.

The girl on service never lost her interest in frills. Always she had a warm spot in her heart for dainty clothes. No more ardent student of the shop windows could be found than the breached or uniformed girl on war service.

During the war at dances and society fetes war women wore evening dresses with the top half "absent on leave," just to feel what it was like to wear once more a frock that could be passed through a napkin ring without overcropping. But unless she could wear a fur coat she was unable to keep warm. Silk stockings gave her cold feet after her heavy woollens "Jazz" frocks gave her cold necks.

She is turning down tight skirts because they interfere with the long stride developed during the war. She wants coats and skirts with collars long, solid, double breasted coats and wooly "heather" stockings and "brogues." Not until it's very warm, a state of weather unknown in London so far this summer, will she return to the blouse and skirt and evening gowns.

Death at Springhill

Mrs. Mary Estella Goodine wife of Louis Goodine of Springhill died Monday night at her home after an illness of some months. She was aged thirty seven years and was a daughter of the late John Luke of Chatham.
The husband, five sons and one daughter survive. The funeral took place Wednesday morning at eight o'clock with High Mass by Rev.
Father Howland at St. Ann's Church Kingsclear.

The libel alleged that the sugar had been in the possession of the company since July 29 and that it was being hoarded.
