ITALY IN SUGARLESS WAR
TIME AND SUNDAE FAMINE

(Ruth Underhill in New York Sun)

The lieutenant, known as Spearmint because he habitually travelled on a gum coupon instead of a pass, was sitting with Seraphine and me at a pink marble cafe table regarding a wicker swathed bottle. Some one had said U. S. A. and we had each fallen into a trance. We were in Italy, trying to do something worth while for an allied nation, and we were all homesick.

"We didn't appreciate 'em when we had 'em," said Seraphine dreamily, voicing her deepest longing. "The sweetness, the deliciousness—"

"Are you talking about girls?" said Spearmint, voicing his deepest longing.

I knew what Seraphine meant: she had said it so often before. I chimed in: "I like 'em very dark. And cold." "Vamps, Clarissa?" That from Spearmint.

"Sundaes, stupid! They don't make 'em in Italy: there's no sugar."

"And is that what you think about when you hear the words 'U.S.A.'?"

"Certainly. We've been serving our country overseas for a year. And we haven't seen one, we haven't smelt one, we haven't even licked off a spoon that has ever had ice cream on it."

Spearmint, opening a package of cigarettes sent over by a dotting nation was noble about it.

"It's good for your character to go without luxuries. People get made over by the sufferings of war."

"Clarissa has been," said Seraphine meditatively. "She's lost twenty pounds. But that means her clothes had to be made over too. You come out about even on that making over proposition."

"I'll treat you to something to drink offered Spearmint, kindly. "Some of those little glasses full of pink and green and yellow stuff."

"I hope," said Seraphine, with an ardor that would have pleased her W. C. T. U. grandmother, "never to see cordial again."

"Well, don't they have wine here? It's all right to look on it when it's white, isn't it?"

"I'll look on it," said Seraphine fiercely, "but I won't drink it. Imagine a country that tries to make up to you by alcoholic beverages for sundaes and real candy!"

"Many people would like to," Spearmint informed her. But Seraphine was dreamy. Eyes on the array of priceless liquors, she shook her head tragically and murmured. "Oh for a sundae."

We strolled out in a depressed mood to march by a ruin or two and a few world famous specimens of architecture. Suddenly Seraphine shouted:

"Look, Clarissa. Oh, look!"

Spearmint and I were going to be lofty, but she dragged us to the window of a tea room, long reduced to the sugarless level of a pharmacy, and showed us the Thing.

"It's undoubtedly made of saccharine," said I.

"And stuffed with a dried fig," said he.

"And you can see by the sign it costs as much as ten cents."

But Seraphine was undaunted. "Is even ten cents too much," said she "for the first chocolate cream since the war?"

We decided to pool our resources and buy it: Spearmint being allured by the idea of sharing bites. It tasted exactly like a chocolate cream. Obviously peace times were beginning.

But it was only in these peace times that we began to know the real horrors of war. For who will stop at one chocolate cream? Yet, consider what a pound would come to at ten cents apiece!

"I refuse to eat them one at a time," said Seraphine. "It's like that one drop of boiling water torture, you know. I'm going to save up and buy a whole pound."

She might as well have decided to save up and buy the title to an Italian dukedom. We cut out wines and cordials and all those things, but it didn't help much; they cost next to nothing in Italy. But the day finally came when we walked out of the tea room with a box under my arm and the waiter telling the proprietress that Americans were crazy.

"Let's eat it in leisure," said Seraphine. "We'll stay home next Sunday and let nobody in."

And then we met Spearmint flying down from the Organization office.

"I say! You girls! You know that ship that was to sail for America on Sunday? It's going after all. You're registered for it, aren't you?"

We collapsed against a priceless public monument. "Sail! You bet! Hooray! Home! Daily papers! Tubs!

Cream and sugar!"

Spearmint, who was not registered, nearly wept.

"Gummy," Seraphine said to comfort him, "two weeks from today—"

"You'll be," interrupted Spearmint sour-grape-ishly, "in a country that's going dry. Well, you're only girls; you won't mind. But I'd rather advise you to have one last sample of Italy's justly admired sunny vintage before you go. Sorry I can't treat you; you refused it once, and now I'm broke."

"O-oh!" said Seraphine, realizing slowly, "Why, that would be a good idea. But we're broke too. We've just spent all our money on a whole box of chocolate creams that would be worth about thirty-nine cents in New York."

"And now we're going where we can afford thirty-nine boxes! Oh—sugar!" "Damn!" encouraged Spearmint.

"Oh—sugar!"

LONDONDERRY
WALLS MANNED
BY SOLDIERS

Lady Day Parade to be Prevented—Sinn Fein Organizations to be Suppressed

Londonderry, Ireland, Aug. 15.—Troops manned the walls of Londonderry today for the first time since the historic siege of the city in 1689, as part of the military effort to prevent the Nationalist and Sinn Fein "Lady Day" demonstration and procession set for today. The demonstration has been forbidden by the British commander general Hackett-Pain.

Orangemen and Unionists, it is said

A Pimply Face or Poor Complexion
Quickly Restored

Thousands of young men and women would be handsome and attractive were it not for unsightly pimples, blackheads, and rough uneven skin. Custom seems to recommend lotions and salves, but unfortunately their effect is but temporary. These disfiguring blemishes do not originate in the skin—their birth in every case goes further back, to the blood, which must be cleansed of humors before the pimples depart for good.

A physician who has made a careful study of such cases, says that the quickest cure comes from a blood-building medicine like Ferrozone. The minute Ferrozone strikes the blood its good work begins. Poisons and foul matter are expelled. Every trace of humor is driven out, and the whole life current is supplied with nutriment and health giving qualities. You can always tell a Ferrozone complexion when you see it—the cheeks are clear and rosy, no signs of sallowness—the eyes are bright and expressive because rich, red blood is circulating through the whole system carrying health, energy, and strength with it. Not only will all skin eruptions disappear, but an increase in vital strength and all-round improvement will be apparent. No rebuilding tonic could be more efficient. Get Ferrozone today—Good for young and old, for well folks and sick ones, too. 50c. per box or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or direct by mail from The Catarrhzone Co., Kingston, Ont.

have declared their determination not to permit the holding of the parade, which they termed anti-British.

Left for Ireland

London, Aug. 15.—A number of members of the House of Commons, representing Irish districts, left for Ireland last night after it was announced that the government had decided to suppress all Sinn Fein and kindred organizations in County Clare as the result of increased disorders there.

A proclamation declaring all Sinn Fein organizations and Irish volunteers in County Tipperary to be unlawful was issued from Dublin Castle on July 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert FitzRandolph and family, who have been spending the summer at Digby have returned home.
