VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY IN THE P. E. ISLAND MURDER TRIAL

SUMMERSIDE, P. E. I., June 22.—The case against Thomas Corbett Ellis, charged with the murder of his wife, was finished yesterday, and last night the jury returned a verdict of "not guilty." The addresses by counsel and the Chief Justice occupied all day. A. C. Saunders, counsel for the defence, spoke for nearly three hours. He contended that the Crown's case was based entirely on circumstantial evidence. Attorney General Johnson, on behalf of the Crown, contended that the evidence of Dr. McTaggart showed that Mrs. Ellis died in bed and that it would have been impossible for her to have got in the position in which she was found unless someone put her there. He also emphasized the peculiar conduct of the prisoner in simply looking into his wife's room at the time of the tragedy. The Chief Justice's charge was in favor of the prisoner.

YANKEE FIRM GETS THE JOB OF REORGANIZING GOVT. DEPARTMENTS

OTTAWA, June 22.—In answer to a question by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux in the House of Commons yesterday, Sir George Foster said that the firm of Griffen Hagen and associates had been selected to investigate and reorganize the Post Office and other departments, because it was considered this firm was best qualified for the work. Owing to its wide experience in reorganization both in the United States and Canada, and because of its work in connection with the civil service reclassification for the last year or more, it was in a position to proceed with the reorganization at once, whereas another firm would have to spend some time familiarizing itself with conditions in the departments. Sir George said the firm was being paid $10,000 a month.

THE ANCIENTS BELIEVED MUCH IN DREAMS

(New York Sun)
Dreams are frequently spoken of as by the oldest books of the world. In the Bible God speaks in a dream to Jacob about the increase of the cattle, and warns Joseph, unsurpassed even from a literary point of view, and in Pharaoh, with a history of their fulfillment, occupy a large part of the first book.

The dream of Solomon and the dreams of Nebuchadnezzar, the warning of Joseph to take the young child into Egypt, are parts of the history of the Christian religion.

The Bible distinguishes between natural dreams and those attributed to supernatural influence. It states very clearly the characteristics of dreams.

The hypocrite "shall fly away as a dream, and shall not be found; yea, he shall be chased away as a vision of the night." David says, "As a dream when one awaketh," the Lord shall dispense the image of the proud. Solomon speaks of the character of dreams thus: "For in the multitude of dreams and many words there are also divers vanities"; of general causes he says, "For a dream cometh through the multitude of business."

Cheero says that men of greatest wisdom among the Romans did not think it beneath them to heed the warnings of important dreams, and affirms that in his time the senate ordered Lucius Junius to erect a temple to Juno Sospita in compliance with a dream seen by Cicero. Scipio's dream, philosophical, imaginative, grand, published in the works of Cicero for a purpose or is the veritable account of a dream.

Almost all the great characters of Herodotus believed that dreams were of supernatural origin. Kings resigned their sceptres, Cambyses assassinated his brother, priests attained great powers as commanders, cities which had been destroyed were restored by men who changed their plans and performed these acts because warned, as they supposed, in dreams, and with the invasion of Greece by Rerxes such night visions had much to do.

Fenelon relates that when the father of Plato wished to have his son educated he took him to Socrates, who, by some strange coincidence, had dreamed the night before that he bore in his bosom a young swan which as soon as the feathers came upon it displayed its wings, and singing with inexpressible sweetness raised itself into the highest regions of air, soaring with intrepid flight. Socrates never doubted that the swan typified Plato and the boundless fame he was destined to enjoy.

Plato and Socrates believed in dreams, and Aristotle admitted that they might have a supernatural origin.

L. R. Acker in City
L. R. Acker of Halifax, well known as a theatrical promoter and owner, and also as an owner of racing horses arrived here last night to inspect his stable which is located here. A. W. Warner and wife of Brooklyn, N. Y., are with Mr. Acker.

Prohibition Meeting

There was a largely attended meeting in South Devon last night in the interests of prohibition. The meeting was part of the campaign for Prohibition which has been organized in York County.

BOLSHEVISM AND PROHIBITION TO BE BANNED

Boston, June 22.—England will never turn toward Bolshevism, nor will prohibition ever become a fact there, says Charles Frederick Hingham, M. P., of London and friend of Premier Lloyd George, who addressed the Pilgrim Publicity Association luncheon, adding the assurance that there is absolutely no anti-American feeling in his country.

"If there is one thing in England that is dead besides Bolshevism," he declared, "it is 'pussyfootism.' We are now settling down to our jobs. We welcome in England American singers, artists and business men. We are trying to get the export trade of the world, but we cannot handle it all. Between the United States of America and Great Britain every factor can be kept smoking overtime in the next quarter of a century."

"When I started over here I was asked by my Government to try to ascertain whether there is anti-British sentiment over here. I have failed to find it and I have read all the papers."

Louis A. Liggett expressed satisfaction over the nomination of Gov. Coolidge to the Vice Presidency referring to the Governor as the "next President" of this country. He aroused much laughter by recounting how, on his return from Europe, the announcement was made coming up New York Harbor: "The bar will close when we pass the Statue of Liberty."

PIE ADVICE.

When you are making pies from juicy canned fruit wet and pinch together the crusts in the usual manner and then bind with a strap of white cotton cloth that has been wrung out of cold water. Press it lightly over the edge of the crust, letting the lower edge hang over the side of the tin. It can be easily taken off when the pie is baked.
