AUTHORITIES ROUNDING UP WOOD ALCOHOL VENDORS

One Man is Arrested and Held on Murder Charge—A Quantity of Alcohol is Seized in a Grocery Store—A Deadly Substitute for Booze Which Has Claimed Many Victims Recently and Aroused the Public.

New York, Jan. 2.—The round up of wood alcohol distributors and makers of other brands of illicit "whiskey" in and near this city continued yesterday with several new arrests, with the holding of one important prisoner in $25,000 bail, with a raid on a wood alcohol plant in Manhattan and the indictment of four men who are alleged to have sold $500,000 worth of "doctored up" whiskey in this city.

Edward G. Ware of No. 190 State street, Brooklyn, was held in $25,000 bail by United States Commissioner McGoldrick in Brooklyn in connection with the investigation of the shipping of wood alcohol into Connecticut. Ware is the manager of the drug store of his brother in law, Samuel Saleeby at No. 84 Court Street, Brooklyn. Saleeby was arrested on Monday and held in $25,000 bail as one of the band of men who sent the wood alcohol to Connecticut. Ware was arrested Tuesday night.

Group of Four Indicted

As a result of an investigation covering three months federal agents yesterday said they had found the sources of a brand of whiskey which has flooded the market for months and in indictments were handed down by the federal Grand Jury against four men who are charged with floating $500,000 worth of the liquor "down the stream" to this city. Those indicted are John Lynn of No. 40 Morningside avenue; E. Fabian, G. W. Doyle and David S. Somno, whose addresses were not made known. One of the men has disappeared. Judge Knox issued warrants for arrests.

According to the United States officials this group of speculators brought more than 15,000 cases of real whiskey from a distillery in Kentucky to this city, where it was placed in a warehouse. The supply then was "doctored up" and parcelled out in small quantities in violation of the law.

While the officials considered the indictment of the four men important they did not for a moment relax their efforts to round up the murder whiskey operators. They were doing every thing in their power to prevent the sale of the poison liquor before the New Year's Eve spirit carried men off their feet and led them to indulge in promiscuous drinking in the cheaper barrooms.

Following the death or disability of nearly a score of persons in Passaic, N. J. the police and federal agencies of the two States united in a round up of those believed to be responsible for furnishing the supply to the New Jersey city.

Several Bands at Work

This case is evidently totally dissociated from the Connecticut case. It shows the officials say, that several bands are operating independently. For the most part, they are Italians. Wherever a few men who are familiar with the inns and outs of the whiskey trade can obtain a supply of wood alcohol they disguise the poison under a fancy name and distribute it to their friends and clients. The purchasers are usually ignorant and do not suspect that they are selling or drinking poison.

Six saloon men were arrested as a result of the Passaic deaths and were held yesterday without bail on charges of manslaughter. Acting on advice from Passaic, the New York Headquarters detectives raided a grocery store in East Houston street and seized a quantity of liquor which they said was wood alcohol and a liquor said to have been concocted from the poison.

Traced to Manhattan

The Passaic police informed the New York Headquarters that the wood alcohol liquor was sold by two saloonkeepers in that city, who confessed to having obtained their supply from a grocery store in Garfield, across the river from Passaic. The arrest of the Garfield grocers brought the information that their supply had come from Battista Le Cicero a grocer in Elizabeth street, Manhattan. They said they had paid $35.50 a gallon for the stuff.

On complaint of Benjamin F. Turner captain of detectives in Passaic Detective Stein of the Homicide Squad Squad at Police Headquarters arrested Le Cicero on a charge of murder. He was locked up in Police Headquarters and steps were taken to bring about his extradition for trial in New Jersey.

One of the wood alcohol victims in Passaic who had been lingering in critical condition for hours, died yesterday, bringing the total deaths to eight.

To Extradite Prisoners

Frances G. Caffey United States District Attorney, and Assistant District Attorney Alexander W. Creedon, of Hartford Conn., left New York yesterday for New England where they will seek to get extradition papers from the governors of Massachusetts and Connecticut for men arrested in this city in connection with the wood alcohol fatalities in New England. Mr. Caffey said he expected that the men alleged to have shipped wood alcohol to those States would be charged with nothing short of murder in the first degree.

CUSSING IS BANNED BY RAILROAD

Warren, Pa., Dec. 5.—Pennsylvania Railroad employees must cease "cussing" while on duty is the edict that has come down the line. The use of profane language is being frowned upon by the railroad heads and the practice must stop on trains, in yards and in shops in fact everywhere along the right of way.

On the Middle Division a number of employees have been suspended for using "foul and profane" language. Such language, employees are given to understand, "will not be tolerated on the Pennsylvania lines in the future."

The order reached here today and states that violators of the "anti-cussing" edict will be "harshly dealt with" on the first offence, and "if repeated" they will be dismissed from the service.

The great railroad systems of the country have taken up the challenge of certain ministers of the gospel that the corporations can do a wonderful evangelizing work in America.

Cigarettes are barred by one big railroad which operates west and south of Chicago; liquor is under the ban of all railroads in America and the church going movement everywhere is receiving at least the tacit support of several big trunk lines.

Mrs. Stella Comyn Ballentine, niece of Emma Goldman, the Red who has been deported to Russia after thirty years in America preaching and practicing communism and anarchy, thinks the Ellis Island censor is no gentleman. Aunt Em wrote a letter to Mrs. Ballentine asking her to go to get her a couple of pairs of her favorite corsets. The censor concurred this was a desperate code message which might send the republic in twain and it was struck out of the letter. Later the niece got a verbal confirmation from someone and hustled to get the special harness for aunt, who, rather more adipose tissue than the average woman totes, faced the coming trip overseas with dread and horror without her favorite stays.
