BOY SCOUTS OF THE WORLD HAD FINE TIME IN LONDON

International Jamboree was Opened by the Duke of Connaught

General Baden Powell is Most Enthusiastic Over the Boys—

Says With Ample Funds Wars Can be Made Impossible—

Value of Scout Training Shown at Olympic Games.

(By Hal S. White, Staff correspondent of the Daily Mail. Cross-Atlantic Newspaper Service. . . . .)

London, Aug. 28—Opened by the Duke of Connaught, the International "Jamboree" of Boy Scouts filled the huge hall of Olympia with delighted crowds and the yells of excited bare-kneed, sombreroed lads from all over the world who have been giving London the greatest show of the outdoors life, and scoutcraft in its many activities, it has ever seen.

General Sir Robert Baden-Powell the British Chief Scout and founder of the fraternity, told me:

"The sight of these boys from all parts of the world impressed me greatly. If anything can, this League of Youth can put spirits into the League of Nations." In a plea for increased funds for the Boy Scouts movement, he said: "Give us a million pounds now, and we will make wars impossible."

The great hall of Olympia was "set" with elaborate scenery representing the sea, the western plains, the jungle; and was an appropriate background for the Jamboree of the youth of all nations. Suddenly, while a choir of Boy Scouts was singing from its balcony station, the gay bannered Parade of twenty-one Nations, descending by a rocky path from the wings, marched on to the tan-bark floor of the great hall; and the Congress of Youth was opened. Headed by the Belgian boys, the nations passed in revue. The tremendous cheers which greeted the American Scouts, who were clad in the feathers and war-paint of the American Indians, was a proof of the very cordial reception England gave to the American boys.

Enthusiasm was the dominating note of the whole Jamboree, and the typical American contribution of organized cheering did much to carry on this spirit. The British audience was very much interested in this effervescent demonstration of American enthusiasm. One heard on all sides words of admiration for the clear-eyed, free-spirited, alert lads from the United States. Five Ringed Circus.

Following the brilliant parade of all nations came a sort of five-ringed circus where clowns disported themselves with more than professional energy. Calisthenics, dumb-bell drill, wrestling, pole vaulting, steeple chasing, and Indian war dancing made a full and colorful arena; and left no dull moment for the large audience. The stirring music of Scottish bag-pipers was there to enhance enthusiasm.

In the International Tug-of-War contest America was pitted against Belgium. Her victory was greatly applauded, for it was a close struggle, a victory of pluck as well as brawn.

Among the great number of Americans who watched the very creditable showing made by the boys from the United States, none was more interesting than Colin H. Livingston, President of the Boy Scouts of America. In a talk with me about the American participation in the great Jamboree, Mr. Livingston said: "Primarily the visit of our Jamboree delegation to Great Britain, France and Belgium is of transcendent importance in the building up in the boys of a leadership that will make them competent to understand and act prudently in connection with all international affairs when they come to take their places as leaders of our citizens, as they undoubtedly will. They are meeting with boys and men from every nation that counts for anything in the world's affairs and are forming friendships that have a transcendent influence in broadening their viewpoint on the fundamentals of their life work, be it at home or in the service of their country abroad."

At the conclusion of the first performance Gen. Baden-Powell expressed great satisfaction. "The Opening," he said, "went almost too well. The boys are apt to feel that they can relax after such a fine effort. It might have been better if the first performance had been a bit ragged. The Duke was very much impressed. He said it was an eye-opener."

"What has come out of the conference for scout officials?" I asked.

The Chief replied: "It was decided to establish an international office in London. It will be supported by contributions from the different national scout organizations. No hard and fast rules are established. Through this office all will co-operate informally until experience points the way to more complete organization."

The Jamboree which continued from July 31 until August 7, was full of variety and surprises, and included everything from an Exhibition Competition of Patrols doing metal work, shoe-making, carpentry, wall-papering, cooking and gardening, to an elaborate programme of boxing. In the Annex to the Main hall at Olympia, interesting exhibits of the results of the Boy Scout training were made. One of these special exhibitions was a Zoo. Each troop was encouraged to protect and feed the birds and animals in its own district and for those troops which had pets, a part of the Annex and yard attached was fitted up as stables to encourage the boys to bring animals to the Jamboree. Some of the animals seen were "Mary, the baby elephant, and her chaperon the camel; two llamas and four miniature thoroughbred Icelandic ponies.

There was also a miniature rifle range which was entirely controlled by the boys. An astounding variety of demonstrations which prove the practical value of the scout training were seen at Olympia. Among these was a model colliery operated by the Scouts.

From beginning to end the Jamboree was a vindication of the stated aims of the organizations: "To help Education Authorities in their effort to make good citizens by filling in the chinks that may be left open in the ordinary school education and yet should be filled in if we are to get the best kind of citizens."

THE $10,000 A DAY MAN IS DISCOVERED

(New York Sun.)

Arthur T. Walker, New York's most mysterious and recent millionaire, who was recently left $50,000,000 in the will of Edward F. Searles, was captured today by reporters for the first time. Mr. Walker was seen for a brief moment as he was about to enter his office at 71 Broadway and refused flatly to talk to reporters.

"I know who you are," he said as soon as he saw them approaching. "You're reporters. I have nothing to say. My private business is of no interest to the public. Yes, I object to answering any question."

With that he hurried into his inner sanctum. The newspaper men gave it up.

Mr. Walker had been lunching with a friend whose name could not be learned. In spite of the fact that he has now an income of $10,000 a day, he was plainly dressed in a gray suit, brown shoes and a straw hat. He seldom lunches with any one, and the man with whom he dined today is said to be one of the few so favored.

At the offices of the Globe it was said that nothing had been heard from Mr. Walker. Both the publishers of the paper, Jason Rogers and William Shillaber, were out of town and no statement was made.

It is said Mr. Walker will continue to occupy the small two room flat on the third floor front of the reconstructed private dwelling at 25 pierpoint street Brooklyn, in which he lived as a clerk for Edward F. Searles, by whose death he received a fortune.

In fact, acquaintances of Walker—for he appears to have no intimate friends in this city—agree that the wealthy old railroad man, who died in Methuen, Mass. ten days ago, selected a splendid man to guard his fortune. It will be virtually impossible, for the hardworking subordinate to spend one-half of the immense income he now receives, they say.

Although both Walker himself and Lewis L. Delafield, co-executor with him of Mr. Searles's estate, refuse to discuss the reason why the shrewd financier left $50,000,000 the bulk of his estate to his New York agent, these acquaintances believe that without question it was the hardworking thrifty qualities of the man that insured preservation of the old Mark Hopkins fortune which led him to take this step.

Estimates place the salary of Walker before he became the heir of the Searles fortune at $5,000. Never known to his office associates or others as close-fisted, he was, however, never extravagant, and it is doubted if he spent an approximation of his income. Now, with an income that in a day doubles that of his yearly salary before there seems little question that like Searles he will add to the fortune left him.

GIRLS WERE CREMATED

Dundalk, Ireland, Aug. 27—Two sales girls and one salesman were burned to death in stores of two Protestant Unionist tradesmen in Dundalk early this morning. The buildings were set on fire, and likewise the homes of the owners of the stores were burned. Other clerks in the stores were able to make their escape, but the fire spread to adjacent property, including the Ulster Bank which was damaged.

The assertion is made that the fires were started in reprisal for the destruction of property of Catholics in Lisburn and Belfast.
