A NEW SERVICE

The Daily Mail takes pride in announcing that it has secured exclusive rights in this territory for the publication of the entire mail and cable service of the London Daily Mail, the greatest of the more popular English newspapers, and the most important of Lord Northcliffe's string of newspapers.

Arrangements have just been completed between W. Orten Tewson, founder of the Cross-Atlantic Newspaper Service, and Lord Northcliffe, for the London Daily Mail's news and feature services in Canada and the United States.

The Daily Mail as one of the clients of the clients of the Cross-Atlantic gets this great foreign service in addition to the present carefully selected and specially copyrighted cable service of the Cross-Atlantic.

Lord Northcliffe in his announcement made from the office of the Times, another of his great Dailies, says: "Mr. W. Orten Tewson is authorized by me to state that the Cross-Atlantic Newspaper Service has the privilege of publication in the United States and Canada of the News service of the Daily Mail before any other American news agency or journal."

"This announcement is extremely gratifying to us of the Cross-Atlantic," Mr. Tewson cables The Daily Mail. "It should be equally so to all our clients and their readers. The Mail's news service is internationally famous. The Mail itself was founded by Lord Northcliffe and is the pioneer among the English journals of its type. It is Lord Northcliffe's pride. He lavishes huge sums on it and its news departments that it may be the leader of the English journals. What The Daily Mail did during the war is journalistic history. What it is going to do in the collection of the news of the world is what makes the Cross-Atlantic so jubilant at securing the privilege of distributing this service in the western hemisphere."

WHERE TRICKERY FAILED

During his lifetime Joseph Elwell, New York society gambler, went to great pains to clothe himself with an air of romance and mystery and distinction.

He created the belief that he moved through life, dallying with the cards and ladies and race horses with fashionable discrimination. But after he was murdered it was discovered that he was not a brave knight errant after all. It was found that in reality he was a mean, unscrupulous, dishonest parasite who preyed on the weak and unsuspecting under the cloak of gentility. He lived like a Nabob, but bootlegging was only one of the many unsavory schemes with which his mind was busy. He looked like a fashionable, but after he died it was discovered that his hair and teeth were false. He made love delightfully, but once in his toils the object of his passion paid dearly, often in cold cash. He gambled with extravagant carelessness, but it has been found that he used marked cards and swindled his friends.

Everything Elwell did and all he appeared to be were false. He cheated and bluffed and tricked his way through life and his system was well-nigh perfect. The only thing he neglected was to arrange some way of deceiving Death when that grisly terror came to unmask him.

tion of the province voted dry. The hope of the wets that the urban centres would destroy prohibition did not materialize. The province voted as a unit in favor of real, as opposed to pretended, prohibition. New Brunswick voted more than two to one for the enforcement of the dry act. The vote was such a definite and unqualified endorsement of strict prohibition for the province that the question must be accepted as settled for all time to come as its supporters contend.

The late Major General W. C. Gorgas, who died recently in London was one of the greatest benefactors of the human race. He was one of the leaders in the modern science of sanitation which eradicates the causes of diseases and strives not merely to cure the sick but to preserve unimpaired the health of the sound. His work in ridding Havana, Panama and other tropical countries of the yellow fever plague was not only of untold benefit to the human race but was a great victory over prejudice, ignorance and inertia. General Gorgas was a splendid type of American and future generations will bless his memory.

On account of the heavy wind which prevailed the international yacht race scheduled for Saturday had to be postponed. It was feared that if the race was sailed under the conditions which prevailed there might be a loss of life on the challenger. What will probably be the final race of the series is being sailed this afternoon. Sir Thomas Lipton is confident that the Shamrock will win the cup.

The death of Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt the New York millionaire, who passed away recently in Paris, was due to heart disease. The disease according to a statement given out, was caused by excessive smoking, it being his habit to dispose of a box of cigars daily.

The management have notified the officials that the National Trotting Association rules are to be rigidly enforced and excessive scoring is to be eliminated, bad actors being given a specified number of chances and then allowed to take care of themselves while drivers scoring ahead of the pole horses or otherwise delaying the getaway will be promptly penalized.

A conscience needs exercise to keep it in a healthy condition.

JAS. P. MURRAY GIVEN 6 MONTHS IN COUNTY JAIL

Words of Advice from Magistrate—Prisoner's Home and Family in St. John—Two Children.

James P. Murray, who pleaded guilty to uttering a bogus cheque in payment for a five-passenger car he had bought from James W. McCoskey, of Boistown, was sentenced at noon today to six months in the York County jail. Murray appeared in court very much the worse for wear. In response to the questions of Police Magistrate Limerick he stated that his name was James Peter Murray, and that his wife and two children were living at his home in St. John. He said also that he had last been home at Christmas. He admitted having appeared before in the Fredericton court.

Imposing sentence, His Honor said that it was time that Murray stopped roaming about the country getting into trouble, and devoted some attention to his wife and family. Six months in jail would give him an opportunity to think the matter over.

BACHELORS OF CALIFORNIA TO BE SAVED

(New York Sun)

California bachelors, widowers, divorced males and woman haters generally are to be saved. British and French women are to be the angels. Los Angeles alone is to get 100,000 British and 50,000 French women, if the idea of the "Pall Mall Gazette" is put into effect. The London newspaper says:

"The United States has a surplus of men. England and France have a surplus of women."

"If things remain as they are a million women in England have to be come old maids."

"Prof. Paul Carnot of the faculty of medicine in the University of Paris recommends a great international matrimonial bureau, and that the Allies do as they did with their money and men in the great war—pool the sexes, so as to bring the surplus of women into the vicinity of the surplus of men. Nature will do the rest."

"There is great need in Los Angeles Cal., for women. A hundred thousand English women and about fifty thousand French women would be welcome and useful."

"With a population of 500,000 there are about 70,000 women earning their daily bread."

"The California enthusiast has special reasons for advocating a great exodus of English and French women to California. It is desired to reduce to a fraction the German element, which can best be done by a preponderance of people of other nations. It is desired to admit the Gentile host to equalize the Jews, who are now crowding into California in great numbers."

"An aggregation of lovely women coming from England and France, marrying the citizens of California, would be a godsend to the State, and at the same time save those women from lives of solitude, unsatisfied yearnings and despondency."

"Many protective laws are on the statute books in California, protecting women from the rapacity of capital. Their pay cannot go below a minimum fixed by the State, their hours of labor are specified and in the rural districts where it has been the custom for the wealthy orchardists to treat the help worse than cattle, regulations demand the proper housing of the toilers and their protection from the multifarious insects that ever inhabit a semi-tropical climate and revel on the human epidermis. (Californians, who assert their only pestiferous insect is the flea will object to that line.)"

"In California no woman need fear the danger of marrying an inebriate for the manufacture of such has been totally discontinued in this country."

"All women have to look out for are consumption, insanity or fits in the family of the suitor. It may be also pointed out that in case of mesalliance it is extremely easy to obtain a divorce and in many cases liberal alimony thus greatly ameliorating the mental wounds inflicted in the case of an unfortunate marriage."

And anyway, it might be added. Reno is just across the line from California.
