OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

PETTICOATS

For evening and afternoon wear nothing is more serviceable than a crepe de chine petticoat. And the especial point of economy about this sort of petticoat is that you can have it made from old materials, to a large extent.

If you have any old light colored crepe de chine frock you can surely find enough of it that is still sound for the foundation of a petticoat. Wash and iron it and then design it. If you must buy new lace and have plenty of the crepe, take a good deal of the trimming consist of bands or diamonds of tuck crepe, inset between lace insertion. Net bought by the yard, and cut in stripes, some of it tucked if you wish, can also be used instead of lace for much of the petticoat's trimming. In fact, the only lace you need buy is enough to go around the bottom edge. You can even do away with this if you follow a certain dainty late model. It is made of crepe de chine, banded with net. At the bottom is a band of plaited net, three or four inches wide, with a half-inch hem of the crepe de chine, applied by machine before the net is tucked.

Even a dark crepe de chine petticoat would be useful to wear with dark frocks. You can dye the lace you use with one of the easy dyes to match the material. In the case of a light colored but faded crepe de chine, you can likewise dye the fabric into a darker shade.

One kind of a snob is the man who makes you believe he throws his straw hat away at the end of the summer.

One gets the notion, from observation, that old-fashioned happiness is about as good as the modern styles.

Some men used to get married in order to acquire a cook. Now some women get married so they won't need a hired girl.

YOUNG BANK CLERK WAS ACQUITTED

Amherst, Oct. 13—Much interest centered around the session of the Supreme Court which began this morning. The opening was of special interest owing to its being the first setting of Judge Mellich, in Amherst.

Following the addresses the Grand Jury was summoned and sworn in.
His Lordship then proceeded to address the Jury explaining the five criminal cases contained on the docket and instructing on the finding or not finding of a true bill in the indictments of the various counts.

In the case of the King vs. Nathan Osborne, the final scene was of a dramatic nature. Osborne, a youth of twenty-one was accused of stealing $158 from William Latta of River Herbert. Osborne, an employee of the Bank of Nova Scotia, was at the time, in the branch at River Herbert. Latta claimed he presented money in payment of a draft for which he received no receipt, subsequently the bank demanded payment of the disputed amount. Then it was that Latta preferred the charge against Osborne, the teller. The case as argued in court was conducted by Mr. Hanway, representing the Crown, and Mr. Milner, the defense.

Judge Mellich in addressing the jury made it plain that the question to be decided was not whether Latta paid $158 to the teller, but whether Osborne stole $158 from Latta.

The jury after being out a half hour returned a verdict of not guilty. The jury's verdict brought forth a scene seldom witnessed in a Supreme Court.
Immediately following the pronoun-cement of the words "Not Guilty," the silence of the court was broken by an applause left no doubt as to the popularity of the verdict. On order being restored, the prisoner was released.
Then the crowd flocked about him, and his many friends shook hands and others kissed him, leaving the court.
Osborne boarded a car and whisked away, thus terminating a sensational court episode. Young Osborne has since his indictment, been on bail, be-

What are Peps

Peps provide a new treatment for coughs, colds and lung troubles.
