HOTELS OF THE FUTURE

Since Joshua's spies sought out the promised land and put up at the Rahab house in Jericho mankind has been speculating on the necessary qualifications of an ideal hotel, says the New York Herald. In the Middle Ages hospitality was still regarded as a duty and provision for travellers was regularly made in monasteries and baronial halls, but with the growth of a more complex state of society travellers were not content to rely on the church or the landed gentry for their food and lodging. Inns sprang into existence where the traveller could order what he wanted without offending his host's feelings and where he could refresh body and spirit in company with other wayfarers. Fast-food staff insisted that he be allowed to take his ease at his inn, and posterity has very generally sympathized with him. But in the busy life of New York few people go to a hotel to take their ease, and it is perhaps natural that the idea of hospitality should have yielded before the more pressing demands of modern convenience.

The latest authority on hotel life, according to the Herald, prophesies that within a few years hotels will no longer be considered as mere eating and sleeping houses but as the backbone of our civilization. They will constitute in themselves complete civilized communities, offering stores and shops of all kinds, lectures, concerts and employment bureaus to provide both mental and physical work for transients. Above all, personal service will be entirely supplanted by an elaborate conveyer system capable of satisfying every legitimate want.

It is a bold conception and there may be some hotel proprietors who will live to see it realized, but does it represent the very perfection of the inkeepers art? Times have changed since the Canterbury Pilgrims clattered out of the courtyard of the Tabard Inn under the charge of the proprietor, but human nature remains much the same. The ideal hotel of the future will be the one in which mine host has not been relegated to the background by modern conveniences and where the human equation still counts. In the country especially in New England, there still lingers a proper sense of proportion, and the ideal hotel is the one not with the most automatic machinery but with the most hospitably inclined proprietor.

In commenting on the work of the Ontario Legislative session which closed last week, the Toronto Globe says:

"The Government's program was not such as to arouse party spirit or invite the reproach of class legislation. Certainly there was no overreaching by the Farmer members in the special interest of the rural community. The most notable increase in departmental grants was made not for

THE TORTURES OF RHEUMATISM

Happily Stopped When He Began To Take "Fruit-a-lives"

8 OTTAWA ST., HULL, P. Q.

"For a year, I suffered with Rheumatism, being forced to stay in bed for five months. I tried all kinds of medicine without relief and thought I would never be able to walk again.

One day while lying in bed, I read about "Fruit-a-lives" the great fruit medicine; and it seemed just what I needed, so I decided to try it.

The first box helped me, and I took the tablets regularly until every trace of the Rheumatism left me."

agriculture, but for education. Two measures urged particularly by the Labor group—minimum wages for women, and mothers' pensions—were merely overdue installments of social reform which commended themselves to nearly the whole House."

Hon. Mr. Roberts is endeavoring to interest the Rockefeller Foundation in public health work in New Brunswick with good prospects of success. Dr. Heiser of the Foundation was in St. John yesterday looking over the situation and was dined at the Union club. He expressed his appreciation of what was being done in New Brunswick and expressed the hope that some means might be found by which the Foundation could render assistance.

One of the absurdities of the tax on so called luxuries is manifested in the case of the brands of shortening used by people of moderate means. There is a manufacturers and wholesalers tax of one per cent while leaf lard used by people to whom money is no object escapes the tax. It is presumed that Sir Joseph Flavelle and other pork barons are interested in the lard business and the government evidently desires to lend them a helping hand.

It is interesting to know that nearly three and one half million dollars was expended in New Brunswick under the war appropriations act during the last year of the war. A list of the local people who helped win the war by selling supplies to the government will be found in another part of this issue and makes interesting reading.

The City Council last night decided to extend the water system on Government Lane. This is a good move and should help materially to solve the housing problem. There is plenty of vacant land on Government Lane which should now be quickly taken up and utilized for building purposes.

His Gracious Majesty King George V. will enter upon his 56th year tomorrow having been born on June 3rd 1865. His Majesty's loyal subjects in every part of his world wide empire will join heartily in extending congratulations and good wishes.

There isn't anything quite so permanent these days as the spot on your vest that you once could afford to remove with gasoline.

Some wives keep themselves so busy planning something for their husbands to do around the house that they haven't time to finish their own work.

Our little backyard radishes, standing shoulder to shoulder and row upon row, may not reduce the cost of living, but we expect them to have great moral influence.
