POLICEMAN FOUGHT MAN ON A ROOF

Crown of People Watched the Fierce Struggle Far Above Street—Had In-ulted a Woman.

New York, Oct. 15.—At Sixth avenue and Fifty-sixth street about 1.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon stood Patrolman Martin Gill, who in the war was one of America's bravest soldiers and has at home the Distinguished Service Cross, the French Military Medal and the Croix de Guerre, symbols of what he did in France as a member of the 165th Infantry—the old Sixty-ninth.

To him ran a young woman, so excited she could hardly speak. "A man has just insulted me" she said breathlessly to the policeman. "He has run in there," she added, pointing to the hallway of the apartment house at 989 Sixth avenue. She then gave what she said was the man's address.

Gill sprang into the hallway. Then he heard footsteps ahead of him, patterning up the stairs. Gill followed two steps at a time. As he stepped from the top landing to the roof a man leaped at him and grabbed his throat. The attack was so sudden that Gill fell to the roof with the assailant clinging to his windpipe.

Unable to loosen the clutching fingers, Gill reached for his pistol, but his strong armed adversary caught the weapon and forced it toward the policeman's head. Gill, applying all his strength, lurched to one side and he and the other man rolled over toward the edge of the roof at the rear of the apartment house. At the same time Gill managed to press the pistol outward until it no longer pointed at him.

Hung Over Roof's Edge

As rain had been falling when Gill came on duty he had on his raincoat and rubbers. The flapping raincoat handicapped him in the struggle. The wrestlers kept rolling until they reached the roof's very edge. Their legs in fact projected over the edge and Gill's rubbers pried off in the combat, fell to the pavement of the court.

At the windows of the Great Northern Hotel and other buildings near by men and women, startled by the sound of the scuffle, screamed when they saw the wrestlers apparently about to fall over the cornice.

But James McQueeney, a seaman in the navy, had rushed up to the roof of 102 West Fifty-fifth street, where he lives. In a jiffy he raced across the roof and jumped from it to the roof where Gill and his would-be murderer were alike in peril of death. McQueeney caught Gill's shoulders and pulled both men back, just as they were about to slip off.

Gill's opponent still clung to the policeman's throat, half strangling him, until Gill succeeded in lowering the pistol so that it pointed at the other. Then Gill fired. The bullet merely grazed the skin. His fury increased, the stranger clasped Gill's throat with both hands, sinking his nails into the flesh. Gill fired again and the man rolled over dead. The second bullet had penetrated the stomach and seemingly severed the spinal cord.

Gill was so exhausted that he had to

To Continue in Public Service—

The Navy League of Canada Needs $760,000

Since the money must come from the people, explanation is due to them of the need for it. The work of the Navy League is:

To Continue the Sea-Conscious Spirit in the People and in the Government.

To enlighten people upon the importance of the sea; so that Canadian products may be shipped, through Canadian ports, in Canadian ships, officered and manned by trained Canadians.

To Continue the Sea-Conscious Spirit in the Schools.

As a Merchant Navy is the first step to sea power in any nation, so is the seed-sowing of fundamental national ideals in the schools, the first step to national greatness.

To Continue Training 2,000 Canadian Lads for the Sea.

The continuous training of over two thousand Canadian lads, in the Boys' Naval Brigades of the Navy League of Canada, is to-day having an effect upon our maritime future.

Since May last, sixty of these lads have completed their training and passed into the Canadian Merchant Navy. Fifty more have gone to England to man the new ships of the re-organized Royal Canadian Navy.

Under the guidance of Experienced Sea Minds, it is being planned to give chosen lads from the Boys' Naval Brigades an ocean-going education second to none, so that Canada will have efficient master seamen.

To Continue to Relieve Distress of Canadian Merchant Sailors.

After this year the League expects to cease asking for funds for the relief of the Canadian dependents of Merchant Sailors who were killed on Active Service. With the trust funds now in hand, together with the sum set aside in the Budget, to be raised by public subscription, it should be possible to establish an endowment, the income from which will be sufficient to provide these dependents with a pension equal to that granted to the dependents of Naval men killed on Active Service.

As many of these dependents are young children, the endowment must continue for a number of years, until the children become self-supporting.

To Continue Upholding Every Sailors' Home, Institute and Sailors' Welfare Society in Canada.

The Navy League seeks to make life comfortable for our sailors when ashore. After all, Canada is their home; and the home, while they are here, of the sailors of other lands.

The Navy League endows, maintains or assists in maintaining every Sailors' Home, Institute and Welfare Society in Canada. And every dollar subscribed for the maintenance of these Homes and Institutes will be money well invested and redound to our national prosperity.

These objects can only be achieved through an organization representative of public responsibility and outside party politics.

The obligation is apparent, simple, easy! Borne in proportion, from coast to coast, the weight is felt, but not the strain. The public expect this work to continue and to be maintained by public subscription "until it yields the true glory."
