STOMACH DISORDER

ONLY 6 MONTHS TO LIVE
Read What B. B. B. Did for Him

Mr. Hans Kohli, Magnolia, Alta., writes:—"Some years ago I became very sick from stomach disorder, which the doctor told me had started from drinking bad water. I tried local doctors, but finding I got worse from day to day I went to a doctor in Edmonton. He told me that I must have an operation, and that if I didn't I couldn't live any longer than six months. I told him I had better die than live six months than be cut to pieces. I did not have the operation but returned home. No one was there to meet me at the station, because they did not know I was coming. I felt so bad I couldn't walk farther than 10 yards without resting. It took me 6 hours to walk 2 miles; the distance from the station to my home."

Some weeks later I read an advertisement about your Burdock Blood Bitters. After I had used one bottle I felt much better, and after using three bottles I was completely cured; therefore you see your B. B. B. has saved my life, and I cannot praise it too highly."

HIS SISTER, WITHOUT A DOUBT.

What a pretty girl Greyson's got hold of! exclaimed the envious fellow to his friend as they watched the skaters.

Yes, replied the other. She is certainly pretty. But I think she must be his sister.

Why?

Well as they were getting ready on the bank here I heard him ask her if she was never going to learn how to put on her own skates.

HOME RULE WAS CARRIED BY A LARGE MAJORITY

Important Measure Put Through the House by Lloyd George—

The United States Senate Told That England Would Exert

Every Repressive Measure Against Irish Secession—An American Precedent Cited.

London, April 2.—The British Parliament voted 348 to 94 in favor of home rule for Ireland this afternoon, passing the bill on second reading.

Premier Lloyd George, the only surviving war premier not only carried the bill through assaults from all sides of a parliament which was boiling with personal hostility toward him, but at the same time delivered smashing blows against his political opponents on the Asquithian and labor benches.

In the midst of the debate he turned aside and, stripping his words of diplomatic camouflage, trod boldly on delicate ground, advising the United States Senate, and even warning it, that England would exert every repressive measure against Irish secession, just as other American Senators in the past stood against the secession of the Southern States which proclaimed the Confederate States of America.

"De Valera voices the same plea in the same language as did Jefferson Davis. We are doing nothing more than the United States claimed for themselves," he continued, "and will stand no less."

Then he ended with an unexpected defence of the Irish viewpoint toward England and the Dublin Castle government—a defence which was better than any which came from the Irish benches—and an apostrophe to patriotism and union.

Asquith 20 Votes, Labor 44

As a result of this Herbert H. Asquith, the principal challenger of the Coalition's power, found himself followed into the division lobbies by a scant twenty of his own "we free" Liberals.

Labor mustered only forty-four of its sixty-four votes against the Premier. Only twenty-three Unionists persisted in the tradition which gave that party its name to follow Lord Robert Cecil. Only the Irish Nationalists mustered a total party vote against the bill. Thus the prediction was justified that the bill would pass substantially as framed and that the Premier chose the toughest problem possible and used it as an anvil on which to forge his new party—whatever its name may be. In so far as British politics are concerned only the control of party machinery and funds in the hands of the straight Liberal and Unionist organizations now menaces the Government in the bye elections.

Ulster for United Ireland

Sir Edward Carson the Ulster leader pledged that Ulster would not only make her own parliament work, but would work toward a union.

Lloyd George argued that the bill was the best possible to make in the face of actual circumstances. At the same time he put up the future peace of Ireland squarely to the Sinn Fein, calling on them to show the same spirit of cooperation as England and Ulster show.

"For a hundred and twenty years the British have refused to recognize the essential fact that Ireland does not want any dictation in her own affairs," he said. "Let Irishmen now work to the end that they do not make a similar mistake toward Ulster. Let them learn from the mistakes which brought upon Great Britain the state of affairs in Ireland in which the Government became absolutely dissociated—alien to the life and conscience of the people."

"It is not that Irishmen sympathize with murder. Their government comes from the outside and when they see murder they say: 'Well, that is the air of the government.'"

He declared that if the Irish people were asked what kind of a Government they wanted the majority would declare emphatically: "We want a republic and Irish independence!" At the same time he declared that there was no use talking about self-determination in Ireland.

"Self-determination," he said "does not mean that every part of the country, which has been acting together for a hundred years, should have the right to say: 'We mean to set up a separate republic.' There must be a limit to the application of any principle or otherwise it might be carried into every locality in every country in the world."

Pleads With Sinn Fein

Premier Lloyd George referred to the union within the empire. "Between Scotland, Wales and England there is union which is standing the test of death," he said. "There is no union with Ireland. Therefore I appeal for this bill. It is the one possible means to confer on Ireland a Government from within a one possible means to effect a union between the conscience of the people and the Government."

"Success in this depends on the Sinn Fein population in the South of Ireland. If they make a generous effort to use the machinery provided to avoid injury to Ulster and to England, I am sanguine that the bill will bring about a union of conscience and law and a union with the empire."

The Premier asserted that no one had accepted the plan of former Premier Asquith. As to the suggestion for a constituent assembly the Premier emphasized that the previous Irish convention had failed and asked if it were likely that the assembly proposed by Mr. Clynes would be any more successful. Since any proposal which Irish opinion would by a large majority accept would not be accepted by any party in Great Britain, Mr. Lloyd George declared, therefore the Government must exercise its judgment for the United Kingdom and the whole empire in order to come to the wisest conclusion possible. The Premier reiterated his declaration that the Government plan held the field because it recognized the fact that the House would not satisfy Irish opinion in its present state without destroying the essential unity of the kingdom.

There were certain powers which might be conferred upon Ireland when she settled down to an established union and accepted partnership with the United Kingdom, said the Premier, but if they were given at the present they would only be wasted, to the harm of the union and of herself. It would be placing dangerous weapons in the hands of an infuriated people. The Premier concluded by saying he believed the bill would result in bringing about the union of the north and south, union with Protestants and Catholics, union with Great Britain and Ireland.

Carson Pledges Loyalty

Sir Edward Carson's speech—although he began in a vein which showed all the old bitterness and religious hatred—now scathing, now pathetic—was an appeal in behalf of the Ulstermen and their loyalty to the United Kingdom, and he ended with a generous promise to take the south of Ireland by the hand under the terms of the bill, which Ulster was forced to accept or raise another rebellion against the 1914 act. He promised that Ulster would make every effort to cooperate with the South in the council for all Ireland.

Sir Edward said he believed that the Irish murders were committed "not by my countrymen, but by ill-conditioned Americans," misled by Sinn Fein propaganda, which he exclaimed pointing to the Government, "you are doing nothing to counteract."

The Ulster leader declared he deplored the fact that Ireland would give up her representation in the Commons because every injustice committed toward Ireland was inflicted before the union and not since, and none of them would have been possible with the present representation of Ireland in the Imperial Parliament.

To the drugstore fast she scampered—
Her face was red, her fingers blue;
Swift she went, her feet unhampered,
Seeking succor of the flu.
She minded not the wintry breezes,
But fought on with all her might,
Shouting loudly between the sneezes,
"Kerchew shall not ring tonight!"

FAINT AND DIZZY SPELLS WEAKNESS AND SHORTNESS OF BREATH

You can generally tell when the heart is affected by the faint and dizzy spells, the shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensations, weak, sinking, all-gone feeling, chinking sensation, etc.

Many men and women become run-down and worn out when otherwise they could be strong and healthy if they would only pay some attention to the first sign of heart weakness.

No remedy will do so much to make the heart regain strength and vigor, regulate its beat and restore it to a healthy and normal condition as Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. C. A. S. Drake, Paris, Ont., writes:—"I have used on towards the second box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and find they have done me good. I had those fainting, dizzy spells, once in a while, and also weakness and shortness of breath, and would become so choked up at times I could hardly sleep without sitting up in bed. When walking too fast I would have to stop and try to catch my breath. I feel a lot better since I have used your pills and know that they have helped me wonderfully as I have improved very much."
