WHO NEEDS DAYLIGHT MOST?

To those who think that daylight saving is a device of the plutocrats who want to play golf, let it be suggested that the boss plays golf whenever he wants to. The time clock isn't much of a drag on his inclinations.

The time clock does, however curb the employee's zest for the out of doors says the Chicago Tribune. What human prefers to remain inside until early dusk when he may be out absorbing the full measure of the summer sun?

Daylight saving means nothing in the golf program of the millionaire. He can close his desk whenever he feels moved. Daylight saving does mean something to the paid worker.

FAIR HEROINE.

What's that decoration Miss Peach-er is wearing?
The D. O. Medal.
What do those letters stand for?
Distinguished Osculation. She kissed recruits during the war.

because it lets him out into the sunshine an hour earlier.

The opponents of daylight object to "tampering with nature" and "meddling with Father Time." Daylight saving is neither. The twenty-four hours of the cycle remain the same. Council ordinances cannot disturb the precision of the second hand. Daylight saving is simply the desire of a great many persons to rise an hour earlier—same clock, same nature—and quit an hour earlier so that they may enjoy their parks and gardens and drives and golf courses and picnics.

The rural population enjoys the out of doors always. The city worker spends most of his life within four walls. An hour's compromise ought not disrupt either form of society.

Eggs must fall much lower to look like friends of an earlier day.

AN AMERICAN OFFICER WHO IS OPPOSED TO A BONUS

Declares That the Soldiers Who Went Overseas Only Did Their Duty—Protests Against the Proposal to Give a Cash Bonus to Unwounded Soldiers—All Men Should Have Been Put on the Same Basis at the Outbreak of the War.

Lieut. Col. Charles S. Bryan of New York contributes the following letter to the New York Sun and Herald on the bonus question:

As a recently discharged volunteer in the A. E. F. who spent nearly twenty-three months in France, most of which time I served with the French army, and also as a member of the American Legion, I beg to protest most emphatically against any plan that contemplates giving a money bonus to the discharged unwounded soldier for his services in the late war.

Totally false ideas and a mistaken sentiment have spread abroad on this subject and those favoring such a plan seem to fail to realize that these men have done but their duty the duty that is incumbent upon every male citizen not only of their age but upon every man who is physically fit to serve and defend his country against an enemy, as he would defend his wife and children against an assassin, and surely for the latter no man should expect a bonus.

Such a plan as is indicated from the press despatches from Washington is not only unreasonable and would be a piece of pure graft, but it would be unacceptable to those who place patriotism and self-sacrifice for country above personal gain and I am glad to say there are many thousands who share this view.

The disabled and incapacitated should be well provided for in any event, and those who can show that by reason of their service they have suffered unduly financially should be aided in "getting on their feet," not however, at the expense of the already overburdened taxpayer but at the cost, if possible to the highway-men in labor's ranks and the dishonest profiteer, who measured their patriotism by the amount of their wages and graft wrung from this nation and its allies at the moment when the foundations of our civilization were at stake.

Had this Government on the declaration of war called to the colors the man power of the nation between the ages of eighteen and forty-five and put all on the same relative basis the man who worked in the factory or elsewhere would not have received five times the pay of the man who wore the uniform, and the high-handed methods of labor and the complaints of the soldier would not have occurred; but because of this error then it hardly seems reasonable that Congress is warranted now in committing a second error in order to equalize the consequences of the former one.

Our men have received the highest pay given in any army and have endured but a few months of hardships of actual fighting, namely, from the late spring to the fall of 1918. The French soldier, who bore the brunt of the war for over four years and held back the horde of barbarians until we could get ready, received but five cents a day as compared to a minimum of over a dollar a day for his American ally, the majority of whom had one of the most beneficial and instructive experiences of their lives.

Efforts such as this to wring from the nation billions of dollars for a service that is incumbent upon all who call themselves men, instead of fostering in the country a feeling of admiration and affection for the soldier and sailor for his patriotism and self-sacrifice tends rather to create the impression that, like the grafter and the profiteer, his patriotism is but a matter of dollars and cents.

The men who served their country have won a priceless heritage and one that most of them are justly and truly proud of, but to reward the able-bodied of them for having done their duty, by a money bonus, would not only be an act of unwarranted extravagance with the people's money, in excess even of the pension steal, but a lasting stigma on the patriotism of the American soldier of the great war.

GRAND OPENING OF VAUDEVILLE

AT THE OPERA HOUSE
NEXT TUESDAY, 6TH INST.

Three Shows Daily—Afternoon 3.15, and Evening 7.15 and 8.45—Five Splendid Acts and a Two Reel Serial Story—A Mammoth Program.

Tuesday April 6th will be a red letter day in the entertainment history of Fredericton. For years our citizens have been clamouring for a real Vaudeville show such as the larger cities have, but it was impossible of accomplishment. Now conditions have changed and Mr. F. G. Spencer, the lessee of the Opera House, has found it possible to place Fredericton on a Vaudeville circuit, and if the patronage warrants we can look forward to seeing first class Vaudeville every Tuesday.

To make the new departure profitable capacity audiences are essential, and it is to be hoped that our amusement lovers will not fail to appreciate the endeavors of the new Opera House Management.

I want to be an optimist
And see things always happen
But it is pretty hard sometimes
When everyone is scrappy.
