BRITISH OFFICER TO HUNS A PREHISTORIC MONSTER

Capt. Stevens Starts for Rhodesia in Quest of a Prehistoric Animal, on Whose Head a Bounty of Five Million Dollars Has Been Set—Says He Has Little Hope of Capturing the Strange Animal Alive—Is Known as the Thunderbeast and Is Said to Weigh Twenty Tons.

London, Jan. 31—The Smithsonian Institute expedition into Africa having come to grief in a railway accident, Captain L. B. Stevens, M. C., left England for Rhodesia, Christmas week in quest of the mysterious, prehistoric monster said to be lurking about the swamps and on whose head a bounty of $5,000,000 or thereabouts

Captain Stevens says he will not be exactly disappointed if he fails to find or bag this twenty-ton "thunder beast," as he has other objects in view in going into Africa, one of them being rare butterflies, but as he happened to be going in that direction he added a few trifling implements to his harmless looking butterfly nets and is now ready for all comers in the jungle. His equipment consists of one Mannlicher-Schönauer rifle, one repeating Winchester rifle, one twelve bore double barreled shotgun, one .45 Smith & Wesson revolver and a dog.

Captain Stevens frankly has little hope of capturing the dinosaur alive—and to hear him talk, not a great deal of confidence about finding him at all.

"It is not quite clear," he said, "whether the Smithsonian Institute wants the beast dead or alive, but from the conflicting accounts of him he would not appear to be the sort of creature that could be led away to America on a string."

Needless to say, there is a great deal of skepticism here about the existence of this enormous animal whose age newspaper speculation has set down as possibly not less than that of the world itself. He and his existence have been the subjects of rumors since 1903, and that the earlier reports had some foundation upon fact is attested by the recent evidence from two Belgian big game hunters, who report sighting a huge beast of terrifying proportions and attributes.

Tears Way Through Jungle

Mr. Gabelle, one of the Belgians, says his party caught a glimpse of a huge beast rending his way through the jungle verdure, which defied zoological analogy. He says it was in the general shape of a lizard, probably fifty feet long, with a thick tail like a kangaroo's, a hump on its back and a terrifying horn on its snout. The monster was said to be covered with scales, which were covered with great blood red spots from which radiated pale green stripes.

From that description this jungle terror has been dubbed "What-Is-It?" From the evidence at hand the jury of commentators seem to be unable to agree as to whether it is a brontosaurus or triceratops, a disagreement that only heightens the controversy. One expert writes to the press: "The animal in question cannot be a brontosaurus, if the illustration in H. G. Wells' book, 'Outlines of History,' are correct. The illustrations show a very different creature from the descriptions in the newspapers of this one. What this one really appears to be is a triceratops only that animal has two horns."

Another zoologist heaps scorn on the entire idea, asserting that while he believes these are undiscovered animals living in the heart of Africa he doubts that a dinosaur or any other primeval beast exists anywhere today.

"The period in which they lived," he writes "is incredibly remote as man counts time. Their bones are found in the strata of the Eocene period. The brontosaurus was remarkable for his very small head and small brain cavity. His whole skull was no larger than his neck bone. The name means 'thunder beast' and one species was well over fifty feet in length and weighed probably twenty tons or more."

Thinks Animal Living

On the other hand, Mr. Hamlyn, a well known English naturalist and collector tells the press that there is such an animal living in the heart of the unexplored jungles, if not great numbers of them. During his stay in Africa he heard the story from so many different sources, he says, that he is convinced there is some truth in it.

"Fifteen years ago, when collecting in the Transvaal, I heard an interesting story of a monster, half snake, half, beast. My informant, of the Rhodesian police who patrolled near Barotseland, said he had approached within a hundred yards of it while it was lying asleep on the border of a swamp. It was he declared a hundred feet long and its strange appearance so frightened him that it awakened and glided into the swamp before he could raise his gun. It travelled noiselessly and with great speed.

"The country round about was quite unexplored. My friend told me that I was the first to whom he had mentioned his story, as he was afraid to tell his comrades because they would have laughed at him.

"Once again when I was on the French Congo seaboard I heard fearful stories from the native hunters of the monster. I also heard the same stories on the way to the Belgian Congo, where the present so-called brontosaurus is supposed to have been seen. When you hear stories from three or four widely different sources I believe there is some truth in them. You must remember that if you travel to Fernan Faz and Sette Cama and go up into the interior, most of the country has never been explored. What creatures live in its vast mysteries we do not know. Whether the so-called brontosaurus is a prehistoric survival or not I would not care to say. I firmly believe the creature exists, but I believe it is an unknown creature of more modern descent.

"What I don't believe," said he, "is that the Smithsonian Institution, or any other organization, has offered anything like a million pounds for this

A SICKLY WIFE NO FIT MATE FOR ANY MAN

GIRLS AND WOMEN SHOULD LOOK WELL TO THEIR HEALTH AND STRENGTH.

Never before was physical health and vigor so highly esteemed and so eagerly sought for as today.

No man finds happiness in a sickly wife, and the woman who wishes to enjoy the pleasures of life should spare no effort to maintain perfect health.

Is your daughter growing up strong and sturdy? Has she strength to drink in greedily all the pleasures that youth so zealously seeks—or is she compelled to use the street car instead of enjoying the delightful exercise of walking—does she after the ball arise exhausted, indifferent, and perhaps irritable?

When strength and vigor can be so easily maintained by Ferrozone, when the glow of health is so quickly brought to the cheeks and elasticity refreshed and vigorous, or is she extolled to the step, it is plainly a mother's duty to see that Ferrozone is on hand to assist her daughter back to health.

Upon the wake of Ferrozone quickly follows a stream of rich, nourishing blood which imparts that power and surplus energy so earnestly desired by those in ill-health.

Stop and think what this means for your daughter—certainly a great deal.

Every growing girl and young woman derives enormous benefit in many ways from this nutritive, vitalizing tonic.

It is specially suited for young women and is a guarantee of health and regularity as long as it is used.

beast. Ten thousand pounds would certainly be enough for something that you could only stuff when you got it."

He was asked what one should take with which to trap or kill such an animal. He replied he could not say, but "certainly not a dog." He thinks the best way is, once on the scene to employ natives who know everything about hunting and only need direction.

"The brontosaurus, or whatever the creature is," he said, "makes use of its legs and its body—it glides. I should imagine it is a very dangerous creature. But that it is not all a fairy tale I am certain. I have been there, and I have talked with natives who will not pass a certain boundary into an 'evil land' because of the huge monsters which live in its remote solitudes."

OUIJA BOARD IS BLAMED FOR BROKEN HOME

Atlantic City, Feb. 4.—Too much devotion to the ouija board and attendance upon spiritual meetings was given by Fireman Harry B. Yard in the Chancery court as the reason he wanted a divorce. He alleged that when he was ill his wife neglected to attend to him because of her communing with the supernatural world, and he was compelled to call in his mother. The wife did not appear to defend the case.
