MUTT A BIG BOOB JEFF JUST A SIMP

Bud Fisher Tells Something About the Evolution of His Two Famous Characters—Explains Why They are So Popular—Not Funny, He Says, But Samples of Amusing Humanity Easily Recognized by the Public.

(Philadelphia Bulletin)

As some men have fame thrust upon them, Bud Fisher had the "Bud" wished on him by a small sister, and Bud he will be to the end of the chapter. He was duly christened, after the manner of most infants, but the "H. C." which he acquired at the cere money has become obsolete except for legal purposes, such as the signing of the contracts which are said to bring him a net income of $250,000 per annum, a sum which even a steel or oil or sugar magnate would not regard as inconsiderable in a year as salary, much less a newspaper cartoonists. For as all the world knows, Bud Fisher is the creator of those famous characters which daily amuse the readers of the newspapers, "Mutt and Jeff."

Born thirty-six years ago in a small Illinois town, Bud went to San Francisco and started newspaper work after he had undergone a preliminary education in the Chicago schools and the University of Chicago. In 1907, he had the inspiration which has proved so lucrative to himself and so entertaining to millions of persons throughout the world. Then it was he first drew a Mutt picture, and a month later introduced the "big" fellow to his little pal, Jeff. Since then the partnership between the two has been unbroken. Now, Mr. Fisher lives in New York.

A friend writes of him: "He is an odd little fellow; cocky, assertive, self-confident, and aggressive, yet, strangely enough, he is one of the few men who possess a good mind, one that is capable of seeing both sides of any question if he wants to do so."

Let Mr. Fisher, however, do his own talking. He has an article in a magazine all about himself and his philosophy of life. In the course of the article he says:

"There are only three things necessary to win success, no matter whether your ambition is to be a waiter or a bank president: The first is determination, the second is the power to concentrate, and the third is willingness to sacrifice present comfort for future success."

"Forget that whine about 'force of circumstances' and 'environment.' There is no such thing as any force of circumstances that will prevent a man from making good his ambition, if he goes through with those three rules. You can make up your mind to that, if you are going to get to the top, you have got to do a lot of sacrificing, whether you draw pictures or make pickles."

"It was when I was knocking around San Francisco that I got an ambition to be an artist. It was a passing idea, like becoming a prize fighter; but before it wore off, I happened to draw Mutt, piking along trying to beat the races. Mutt was a hit with the readers of the paper. And the thing he did for me was to concentrate my ambition upon being an artist. I dropped all my other ambitions and concentrated upon Mutt. To do so I had to study human beings."

"Mutt is a big, simple-minded boob who is always trying and always blundering. The great majority of people like Jeff much more than they do Mutt; but Mutt always has been my pal and friend. Mutt is trying and making mistakes, just like the rest of us, and he is a rough worker at times. People like Jeff because he is smaller and almost every person in the world is for the little guy against the big one."

"Ever since I started to draw Mutt and Jeff people have knocked them hard. Thousands of them say, 'I can't see anything funny about them!' They're right there's not anything funny about Mutt and Jeff, and things they do are not funny. I cannot remember any one Mutt and Jeff picture that stands out as being very funny, although many of the series have been more popular than others. But the fact is people laugh at Mutt and Jeff. Most of them do not stop to reason out why they laugh. It is this: They have become well acquainted with both of them. They know that Mutt is a big ignorant boob and that Jeff is a prim little self-satisfied simp. The things that Mutt and Jeff do are funny because they are just the kind of things that fellows like Mutt and Jeff would do. That is my job—trying to figure out what men of that kind would do."

"There is another reason for the success of Mutt and Jeff: When I determined to make them my fortune for me—which I did as soon as I saw the public liked them—I decided on one thing, and that was never to play the small time. By that I mean that I determined to make them appeal to everyone—high-brow, low-brow, man woman and child."

"At first I floundered around, appealing chiefly to the people interested in horse races. I found that would not do at all. The great majority of comic artists, writers, comedians and others who depend upon public favor for their success, make a big hit with a small class. But I figured that if Mutt and Jeff appeared to everyone, the value to me would be much greater. At that time I did not know much about what people like; in fact, I did not know much about human nature, anyway. So I determined to find out what kind of people like certain things. I started reading psychology and studying."

"People say, 'He ought to be in jail, taking money for drawing that.' They are astonished when they hear the flattering tales—usually exaggerated—of how much Mutt and Jeff earn for me. They figure that the work is not worth it. They do not figure however, that Mutt and Jeff have become a habit with a whole lot of people. I discovered that the idea of certain things appealing to certain classes is bunk. The high-brow sense of humor does not differ much from the low-brow. I discovered that what appeals to a kid will not hit his mother or father."

"So I worked out a scheme which I have followed ever since. Mutt and Jeff do something one day that will tickle the women; the next day the kids; the next day I try to give the old man a laugh. If Mutt hits Jeff across the face with a fish. Father says, 'That isn't funny.' Mother sniffs and looks away without a grin. But the small boy yells. The next day Mother gets a laugh. And finally I squeeze a grin out of Father. After a while it gets to be a habit."

"That and not the pictures themselves is the secret. It was the thing I started working for from the first. And work is the right name for it. Many persons tell me how easily the thing has been done. Usually they say 'Pretty soft for you.' They do not know how much work it has been."

"It had been hard work; desperately hard at times. There have been days when ideas simply refused to come. Sometimes they come like a flash. At one time, when they would not come I used to quit, throw up both hands and go and stir around the town. I didn't keep that up long, however. I found it best to buck into it and fight it out. It is more work to make a bad picture than to make a good one. I'd like to say that the best ones are product of hard work and sticking to it, but it isn't true. When one has to work, and work and struggle to get an idea, it usually is just fair. The good ones come like a flash and are easy. But I get more satisfaction out of a mediocre one that is the result of fighting it out than I get out of the easy ones."

"Probably more people have told me the pictures were rotten than have said they were good or funny. It is human nature to do this, and I never have minded it in the least. In fact, if people didn't knock me I might get worried. The one thing any man should fear is being nothing. If they boost you, fine! If they knock, all right! But if they ignore you—good night!"

"Maybe you have no idea how many persons think they would make great comic artists. The number is approximately the entire kid population of the world, and about twenty per cent of the adult citizens. The truth is that twelve years ago in New York there were just three men who stood out in that line, and I butted my way among them and made good. Since that time not one has developed—and every editor in America, has been looking for one, day and night. There are hundreds of course who make good livings, but never get beyond that."

NEW WAY OF BUILDING FENCE

St. Catharines, May 8—The Buy-a-Board campaign in this city is progressing splendidly. Its object is to get lumber enough to fence in the new Athletic Park, and a board costs 50 cents. TRUTH CRUSHED, ETC.

The man and girl sat under the palm outside the ballroom. "Is your love true?" asked the girl. "As true," the man answered in low passionate tones, "as true as the delicate flush on your cheek."

"Oh—ah—sn't—doesn't the band play nicely?"

A guest may be as glad to go as the host is to have him go.

TELLS JUST WHY HE KEEPS ON USING THEM

QUEBEC MAN GETS RESULTS FROM DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Mr. H. Dinelle Suffered from a Complication of Kidney Troubles and Tells How Dodd's Kidney Pills Helped Him.

Cheneville, Que., May 7th (Special)—"I suffered for eight years from diabetes, neuralgia of the heart and rheumatism."

"A year ago I commenced to take Dodd's Kidney Pills."

"My health is very much improved." In these three concise sentences Mr. Hyacinthe Dinelle, a well-known and highly respected resident here, tells why he recommends Dodd's Kidney Pills. Mr. Dinelle is still using Dodd's Kidney Pills. He believes that his troubles are caused by sick kidneys and that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the remedy he needs.

Sick kidneys are the cause of many serious diseases. When the kidneys are not right they fail to do their full work of straining all the impurities, all the seeds of disease, out of the blood. There can be no pure blood if the kidneys are wrong. There can be no good health unless the blood is pure.

Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills are not the sovereign remedy for sick kidneys.

You Pay only the Same Duty on Red Rose Orange Pekoe Tea as on the Very Poorest Tea

Before the war there was no duty on tea.

To-day there is a duty of 7 cents a pound on tea brought from British possessions, and one of 10c. a pound on tea brought from other countries, regardless of the quality.

If it were levied on the value of the tea, as is the case with other goods imported into Canada, the duty on a pound of Red Rose Orange Pekoe Tea would be about double that levied on common tea.

But the duty on a pound of this fine-quality, mountain-grown tea—Red Rose Orange Pekoe Tea—is the same as that on a pound of the very poorest tea.

This is one of the reasons that this tea of extra quality—as well as our standard, well-known Red Rose brand—is so much better value than ordinary teas.

You pay less duty.

This situation is appreciated by tea lovers all over Canada. There is a greater demand for fine-quality tea to-day than before the war. And our NEW fine-quality tea—Red Rose Orange Pekoe—is already enjoying a brisk demand.

Try it. Sold only in our new package—the waxed board carton.
