A REPUBLICAN LANDSLIDE

The presidential election in the United States yesterday resulted in the return of Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, republican candidate over Governor James W. Cox of the same state by an enormous plurality. Returns from the far west are still incomplete, but it is safe to say that of the 531 votes in the electoral college he will have at least 300, and perhaps 350. The Democratic candidate, as is always the case, carried the solid south but the states of the east and middle west went for Harding in some cases by enormous majorities. In Maine, Massachusetts and New York the Republicans made a clean up and they had equal success in the large states of Illinois and Pennsylvania. Ohio, the home state of both candidates went into the Democratic column four years ago, but yesterday it switched over to the Republican side and gave Senator Harding an overwhelming majority. Even the great city of New York, the stronghold of Tammany, was carried by the Republicans by a majority which will be not less than 100,000. Returns from the western states are likely to increase rather than diminish the big lead which Senator Harding now has over his democratic opponent.

It seems certain that the Republicans will be in control of both the Senate and House of Representatives for the next four years. In fact this has already been conceded by the chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

The victory of Senator Harding will not create a great deal of surprise. He put up a clean campaign and seems to have been the favorite from the start. Governor Cox was never looked upon as a strong candidate and he was further handicapped by the unpopularity of the Wilson administration.

The president elect is a native of Ohio and is a journalist by profession being the editor and publisher of the Marion Star. He was born on a farm near Blooming Grove, and yesterday observed his 55th birthday. In his youth Warren lived the life of a farmer boy, attending the village school until he was fourteen years of age, when he entered the Ohio Central College of Iberia, from which he was graduated. As editor of the college magazine he first displayed talents for journalism. He was obliged to stop school now and then in order to earn money so that he might complete his college course. At one time he cut corn at another painted barns, and later, helped to grade the roadbed of a new railway. At the age of 17 he taught a village school and played the horn in the village brass band.

At odd times during his early years he worked as a printer, and in time he became an expert typesetter, and later a linotype operator. Mr. Harding is a practical printer and a pressman, and excels as a make-up man. The lucky piece he has carried throughout his career as a senator is the old printer's rule he used when he was sticking type.

Mr. Harding has twice represented the 13th senatorial district of Ohio in the State Legislature, and he has served one term as Lieutenant-Governor. In the 1914 elections Harding was elected United States Senator by a majority of over 100,000, running 73,000 ahead of the next highest on the ticket. In the Senate he was a prominent member of the Foreign Relations Committee. Senator Harding married Miss Florence Kling in 1891.

Melbourne Argus: There is an interesting theory that a great war is always followed by an increase in crime. Life in the field, with its hideous sights and grim duties, is supposed to breed in a certain small proportion of the combatants a contempt for human life, and when demobilization takes place there is a period of lawless violence. It must be admitted that there is a certain amount of evidence in favor of this theory. In Great Britain there has been an almost unparalleled series of murders during the last year or so, and many observers are disposed to think that something in the nature of a crime "wave" is sweeping over Australia.

Cincinnati Times-Star: Mankind has ever been engaged in a quest. The golden grail, the fountain of youth, the passage to India, the North Pole—the list is myriad that in succession have lured the Argonauts of the ages. But perhaps the most interesting, if not the most exciting, is the quest of the missing link, which will bind the chain of the evolutionists into one continuous concatenation. The naturalist eagerly examines the skull of man or beast, exhumed from the earth after centuries of repose, to see if he can bridge the chasm that lies between man and beast.

Sydney Bulletin: A matter of which the N. S. Wales Government is inordinately proud is its invention of the Rural Bank, which, being rural, will pitch its camp, of course, in the bosky glades of Sydney. But, really, this invention, under a multitude of names, is almost as common as mud. Some time before the war little Bulgaria had 120 of them. Germany has had them for 150 years, and they are numerous even in Poland. Sometimes they are State-owned, but in the majority of cases they are local and co-operative, with no city element about them.

The Republicans, who were swept into power in the United States yesterday after being out of office eight years, are the high tariff party of the United States. Senator Harding has promised to reform the tariff and no doubt when congress meets in March there will be changes brought about which will have considerable influence on the trade with Canada. Commodities such as wheat, cattle and potatoes now enter the United States free of duty, but if the Republicans carry out their pre-election pledges there will likely be a change.

It is estimated that 30297 American cars visited the Province of Quebec this year as compared with 18105 in 1919. They averaged two hundred a day and came from twenty eight states. A reasonable estimate of the amount expended by the visitors in actual travelling expenses is $8,000,000, and it is believed that a similar amount was spent in other ways.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux in a speech at Berthierville on Saturday predicted a federal election in the near future. The government's policy of interfering with the food market he characterized as dangerous and pointed out that the French revolution has been given its final impulse by the government seizing the grain crops and forcing up the price of food.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Football weather—raw! raw! raw!

And every man is afraid of something—if it isn't anything else it's a woman.

Many a fellow will never be happy until he can loaf all the time and still have a payday.

Some men boast that they have radical minds when they really haven't any.

A bride doesn't want to take a honey moon where she has to do the cooking for fear it will spoil everything.

Get this. The popular mind rarely becomes inflamed. It is the unpopular mind that encourages the hungry squirrels.

One reason so many people are disappointed with matrimony is that it is hard to make human nature, masculine or feminine, jump through a hoop.
