SOCIAL COWARDICE

There are many people who, facing with courage every kind of ordeal, shrink from confessing that the thing they desire, whatever it may be, "is too dear," says the Montreal Gazette. And not to confess it keeps the prices up. The manufacturer, the retail merchant, banking on average human nature, offer a confection calling, in its preciousness, for a high price. There is a struggle between desire and financial ability. In nine cases out of ten desire conquers sense; and the high cost of living gets another boost.

When Brown, next door, gets a car, which he ostentatiously parks close to the front step, Smith feels that, whatever happens, however poorly he can afford it, whatever desperate measures may be resorted to, he must also possess a motor car rivaling that of his neighbor. That is what still further keeps up the high cost of living. There are men and women who, at the call of duty, would face danger and sacrifice but who would rather face a cannon than say "It is too dear; I cannot afford it."

Half the misery of life is due to social cowardice. Half the heart-burning is due to that diseased vanity which insists upon making a larger spread than the income will warrant. Half the unhappiness of life is due to the slavish imitation of those "above the salt."

The swagger display, in the case of the outstanding citizen, breaks the heart of his neighbor, until he is able to match it, no matter what sacrifice he has to make. This kind of vanity is more commonly associated with women, who care more for petty distinctions of position and clothes, which are hall mark of prestige, than do the men, who are mostly indifferent to it and who only yield, when they do yield at all, to social fripperies under conjugal pressure.

But this is the point—until sensible people can say "It is too dear," the manufacturer and the dealer will continue to offer "scrumptious" confections, the high prices will be continued and vanity will be fed, and an unwholesome state of things will demoralize the economic world.

New York Herald: The white elephant of the American merchant marine is disabled on the biggest and most profitable day of the circus, and the United States Shipping Board, owner of this monster, the liner Leviathan, formerly the Hamburg-American Vaterland, would no doubt be thankful for a practical suggestion on the best way out of the situation. Unlike her two gigantic contemporaries the White Star Olympic and the Cunarder Aquitania the Leviathan is temporarily unfit to do her stunt of carrying passengers in the limited, exclusive transatlantic travel just now at its zenith.

A gentleman writing the Charlotte-town Patriot from Nova Scotia says: "Well, the Liberals swept the Province Tuesday. The Tories are nowhere they are dead and disorganized. The Union Government killed them in this Province especially and I believe throughout the Dominion as well. The great Sir Robert Borden is responsible for it all and when he realized where he landed them he threw up the sponge. I do not think Premier Meighen will do much better. He cannot stem the tide and the people are sick and tired of the combination."

The Chautauqua performances were brought to a close yesterday and the Barracks Square once more has a deserted appearance. It is understood that arrangements have been made for a return visit next year. The Chautauqua entertainments are high class, and so far as Fredericton is concerned they appear to attract many people who do not usually patronize theatrical performances. The visit to Fredericton this year as in previous years was a financial success and the guarantors will not be called upon to make good their pledges.

Halifax Chronicle: Although Government control of food was not a success in Canada, where producers are fighting to keep prices up, it has worked well in Great Britain. Nearly all food is cheaper there now than in Canada, and the British Government has decided to retain control for another two-year period. Britain's task of recovering her pre-war trade balance makes it advisable to restrict imports and to buy through government agencies.

There are 72,679 more automobiles in New York State today than a year ago. Up to July 1, $7,400,000 from car and chauffeurs' licenses had been received at the office of the Secretary of State. It is predicted there will be 600,000 cars in the state within the next few months.

Bay City Tribune: The man who, believing in one faith, refuses to grant the same right to a neighbor is so narrow-minded that he not only injures himself, but he does the state harm. No state can be built up on religious or other prejudices.

At Plainfield, N. J., Monday, Alfred F. Knauss, three years old, lost his life in a strange accident. He was playing in an unused cemetery with his two brothers and a sister, and one of the boys stood on a tombstone to pick cherries. The tombstone fell and the child was crushed beneath it.

La Patrie: Today is the part of wisdom to respect the liberties—the liberty of thought and the liberty of action. Party leaders can have no better guiding rule than toleration.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Salt—to be exact, ONLY salt—remains a fair shake.

What does it profit a man to overwork, that he may gain enough time to take a short vacation?

Doctors advocate calories and vitamins too much for them to be regarded as appetizing.

There come times when almost every married man wishes his wife had taken a course in domestic science.

Wonder what the citizens of any town that has a proposed new union station talk about after the station is built.

If every man is looking for the best of it, the supply of the best is always greater.

Farmers are the only men who can "help each other with their work."

Lettuce is cheap but what good is it? As scenery one head of lettuce will last a week and as food—but lettuce isn't food.

When anything is relegated to a dark corner in the attic it's a safe bet that its useful days are over.

Hammocks must have gone out of style because people wouldn't endure the plague of having their legs "go to sleep."
