THE BANK OF ENGLAND
NOT IN PROFITEER CLASS

The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street is Carrying the Debts of the Nation at Two and One-half Per cent—Higher Interest Rates Have Been Rejected—Soldiers Guard this Reliable National Financial Institution.

Despatches from London indicate that the famous old Bastille of finance—the solid, massive pile that houses the Bank of England—may be replaced by a modern banking structure. Other "reforms," too, may displace with some of the ancient usages of that ultra-conservative institution which to this day clothes its messengers in salmon-colored, swallow-tailed coats, flaming scarlet waistcoats black trousers and high silk hats.

The porter in crimson and gold lace still keeps watch in the entrance way. Thirty-six soldiers stand guard every night and have done so since 1780. This picturesqueness may always remain.

But some administrative changes to meet changed business conditions since the armistice appear probable. However, there is no thought of amending the purpose for which the Bank of England was established, namely, to serve the British Government and the British people. This was made plain at a recent shareholders' meeting.

Reject Increased Profit Plan

The question was raised whether it was fair to the stockholders not to have the bank take advantage of present opportunities to increase its earnings and pay larger dividends, particularly in view of the handsome profits returned by other British banks. The Governor responded that public service was the first aim of the Bank of England. There was applause—and no further inquiry about increased dividends.

Since 1834 the bank has regularly carried over $50,000,000 of the British national debt—carried it at 2½ per cent. interest since 1892. By a credit system, it assisted the Government with advances of more than a billion dollars during the war.

How the bank won its prestige as the most powerful of banks, and why it is today a tower of strength in England's struggle for recovery is told in "English Public Finance," a study by the Bankers Trust Company of New York. The Bank of England does not acquire its standing because of its resources.

Even its large capital and surplus of some £17,800,000 (about $89,000,000) are exceeded or closely approached by those of several of the London joint stock banks, and far surpassed by those of American Federal Reserve banks.

The bank's great influence is due to its possessing virtually the sole

HOW IT LOOKS
ON THE SIGN

(New York Sun.)

"It gets my goat," said Jim Harrison, who owns a garage at Old Forge in the Adirondacks, laying down his brush and admiring the sign he was painting. "It gets my goat the way the people who come up here for the summer think they must talk through their noses and say 'By Heck!' and 'Gosh!'" and things they never say at home, to make us understand.

"That's why I'm painting this sign—to show them how foolish that stuff looks in print. Then maybe they'll stop it." And he showed his sign:

TOOT YER HORN! MEBBE
SOME ONE'S COMIN'

His two friends nodded approval. And there was a reporter there as well who hadn't ever said "By Heck!" and who says he never talks through his nose because he's Irish; and when that same reporter was taking a ride as a guest with some New Yorkers in an ornamental touring car between Old Forge and Big Moose a week later he spied Jim Harrison's sign decorating a tree at a turn in the road.

And the young flapperish daughter of the family spied it, too, and called "O Mamma, how quaint:

"Toot Yet Horn! Mebbe Someone's Comin'!"

"It's just the way they talk, too Mammy!" She was delighted with the local color. And the reporter says he sat back hard and let her go right on. "Any reporter," he thought "could have told Jim Harrison that his stuff was too deep for general circulation."

bank and no voice in its management. This private ownership dates from the organization of the bank in 1694.

A board of directors, self-electing, insulating a governor and deputy governor, manage the bank. The deputy governor always becomes the governor and usually the oldest director, who has not been in office succeeds as deputy governor. It takes about twenty years from the time a man is first elected a director until he arrives as it is called, "at the chair."

The bank has its own provident society to promote life insurance among its large staff and payment of annuities to their families. It has a well appointed library and reading room, retains its own medical officer for the benefit of employees, and the staff is managed on a civil service basis. Young men entering the employ of the bank frequently spend their lives in its service.
