THE COMING VOTE ON PROHIBITION IN SCOTLAND

Pussyfoot Johnson Causing Embarrassment to the Friends of Temperance in That Country—An Election to be Held in Every Municipal Ward—The Issue Defined and Expounded from Many Viewpoints.

Special to Daily Mail. Copyright 1929 by Cross Atlantic News Service. Glasgow, Scotland, Oct 16 (By Mail)—Mr. "Pussyfoot" Johnson is becoming an embarrassment to his temperance friends in Scotland. The suggestion that Scotland is being hustled into prohibition by "Pussyfoot" methods is so fiercely resented by patriotic Scottish water-drinkers that it is almost a case of his room being as desirable as his company.

"Mr. Johnson is not coming to us," said one of the assistants of Col. Kyle, at the offices of the National Citizens Council. "It is the Scottish Temperance Association's annual demonstration to which he is coming."

"You are apparently no teager to see Mr. Johnson," a reporter said. "Well, there's a difference of opinion," was the frank response. "Some people would welcome his help; others think we don't need him. We only want information as to the results of prohibition in the United States and how it was achieved. We can work this campaign ourselves."

He spoke confidently of the issue of the campaign in Glasgow predicting that more than half of the 37 wards would vote dry. Including grocers' licenses, there are 1700 licensed premises in Glasgow. Kelvin side ward has only one public-house, though 12 are licensed; Dennistoun has only 5 licenses altogether, 4 of them being public hotels.

Many Public Houses

At the other end of the scale, Gorbals has 128 public houses. Exchange ward 103, and Blythwood 102. However, the wards which it is predicted will go "dry" may be disposed Glasgow will be left as a crazy patchwork of prohibition and unrestraint.

The temperance advocates say the brewing and distilling trades are not interfered with and that there is no restriction on the wholesale trade. This means that a resident in a "dry" area who can afford a gallon of whisky or a cask of beer can snap his fingers at the restrictions while a poorer man is left to endure all the inconveniences. It has been naively suggested that poor families could combine for the purchase of a barrel but that does not settle the problem of who is to house it and control the tap.

The Election Issue

In November elections will be held in every municipal ward in Scotland where one-tenth of the electors have signed forms demanding a poll under the Scottish Temperance Act. The issue will be:

1. No licenses.
2. Reduction of number of licenses by one quarter.
3. No change.

The Scottish Temperance Act, passed in 1913, makes the following stipulations:

1. For "no-license" to be carried 35 per cent of the electorate must vote for it, and at least 55 per cent of the total votes recorded.
2. For a reduction of licenses a bare majority is enough, provided that 35 per cent of the electorate vote for it.
3. If "no-license" is not carried the votes for it are to be those for a reduction.

To Abolish Bars

The "no-license" resolution does not mean complete prohibition. In special circumstances liquor may be bought at inns and hotels for consumption with meals, but there will be no bars. Sales through wholesalers will not be affected and clubs are not touched.

The impressions of one Glasgow observer of the prohibition situation are contained in the following letter to the London Daily Mail: "As one who is concerned in the struggle brought about by the Scottish Temperance Act in Scotland, I have had some opportunity of estimating the strength of the forces on either side. A careful consideration of these convinces me that a very large number of the electoral divisions under the Act will go 'dry'."

"In the first place, there are nearly 300 of these areas which are already 'dry', since they are neither included in 'Villadom,' to use the Scots appellation for the 'black-coated' areas of settlement, or have landlords who believe that the public-house militates against the social amenity and market value of their estates."

"Since the utmost the anti-prohibi-

tionist can vote for under the Act is 'no-change' each of these areas must remain dry, whether it indulges in the expensive luxury of a poll or not. The teetotal organization will undoubtedly claim the total population of these areas as being on the side of "no-license."

There are, further, four very powerful influences, acting and reacting in favor of the no-license resolution under the Act.

"The first of these is that out of the twelve religious bodies which divide between them the adherence of Scottish worshippers, nine at least are avowedly in favor of prohibition. The three exceptions are the Roman Church, the British Episcopalians, and more doubtfully, the Established Presbyterian Church.

Well Organized

"The Church teetotal bodies are extremely well organized and combine an enthusiasm and religious fervor, amounting at times to fanatical intolerance, with a knowledge of human nature and the best method of handling human beings which is occasionally almost uncanny."

"They organize processions of specially trained and specially (ill-) clad children through the residential districts. These bear banners with such inscriptions as: 'Help the weans to save Daddy from the curse of drink'."

"Then we have the new women voters. These are being assiduously canvassed and urged to vote 'no-license' for the good of their own families, the reputation of their own area, or, more altruistically the salvation of those less worthy than themselves."

The second influence on the side of 'no-license' is that of the very considerable section of the community who have always desired prohibition.

Next we have the very large number of drinkers, moderate and otherwise, whom the selfishness of some of the publicans has bitterly offended. These are resolved to 'down' the publican in order to teach him a lesson regardless of the consequences to themselves.

"Finally we have the revolutionary elements, who will act in any way likely to promote discontent and strife and who, having been told that prohibition caused the Russian revolution are resolved to try 'no-license' in the hope that it will help on a Scottish revolution."

DISCLAIMS CAVE MAN MAXIMS

Paris, Oct. 23—Blasco Ibanez, the Spanish author finds that the "cave man" stuff still pursues him, even though he has crossed oceans and journeyed thousands of miles from the place where he was reported to have said that husbands should use force in compelling wifery devotion.

In talking with a reporter for The New York Herald he said: "The publicity I received as a result of that newspaper article has been worldwide," adding that when he was in Mexico an aged Spanish there praised him for his wisdom and asserted that whenever he disputed with his wife he never failed to repeat the Ibanez maxims.

Senor Ibanez blamed a Philadelphia reporter's imperfect knowledge of Spanish for the quotation which has given him greater fame than anything he ever wrote.

"I was dining with friends in a club and noticed a reporter who was listening attentively," he said. "I happened to remark that the man of today was little changed from the prehistoric male who left his cave in the morning to seek a deer or a bear for his mate, the only difference today being that the wild animals man seeks are the dollars with which he proves his devotion to his wife."

"The reporter heard the word 'prehistoric' and naturally concluded I had advised cave man methods in the family life."

"The fact is," Senor Ibanez said, "I will die with thousands of partisans and millions of adversaries because I was accused of saying something I never said."

There is a difference between being in favor of large families and having one of your own.

MRS. TURNER IS STUDYING BABY HYGIENE

"My dear Mrs. Turner" said the family physician, "I can only repeat what I have said so many times—that not only must we see to it that the child properly assimilates its food, but equally important, that the waste products are properly eliminated. Infant—or Child—hygiene plays an immense part at this day. The proper feeding of children is today an exact science and it has brought with it the knowledge of how to keep the child's alimentary tract in the proper condition. Have you noticed how many physicians now specialize in children's diseases? Those men have at their command all the treatises on the maladies of infancy and childhood. Naturally they have the advantage over the general practitioner. But, do you think the specialist has more success in treating the children than has the physician who brought them into the world; who day in and day out sees them, watches them and notices all their little individual peculiarities? The specialist comes in as an outsider and has to learn of these things. The family physician knows them."

"One of the best known physicians in this country puts the matter of sanitation of the alimentary canal into a terse sentence—'Clean out, clean up and keep clean.' Surely what is true about the grown-ups is still more so in regard to children. The grown-ups can think for themselves. But the baby? Ah! you get the point? Food that may suit one child may be absolutely unfit for another, the ice-cream cone, the tempting watermelon, the ever to be desired green apple, these and many more cause the wee, which may be soother by remedies that cannot be given to the infant or small child, such as Castor Oil. For years and years, in my own family as well as in outside practice, I give Fletcher's Castoria and I know of scores of other physicians doing likewise. You ask why? Well I have had nearly thirty years experience with it, that is why. Experience teaches. You, Mrs. Turner are still young and have only your first baby to worry over and because his little stomach is out of kilter you are scared. Now, just do as I tell you. Give him Fletcher's Castoria as directed, and you will find that your boy will be very comfy."

"But Doctor" broke in Mrs. Turner, "are you sure there's nothing injurious in Fletcher's Castoria?" "Why my dear Mrs. Turner right on the wrapper of every bottle you will find the formula. And since you are of such an inquiring turn of mind, if you will some day come over to my office I will read to you what the text books say about those ingredients and explain it to you in every day lingo."

The doctor's candid talk convinced Mrs. Turner that Fletcher's Castoria was the remedy for her to keep in the house and any other mother who takes the trouble to ask her physician will receive the same advice.

THINGS ARE COMING DOWN.

With grateful heart we welcome back The season when it doth betide We can go home and get a snack Of mother's doughnuts freshly fried.

THE WILD WEST

Little Willie had listened attentively while the Sunday school teacher told how Pharaoh made Joseph's brothers rulers over many cattle. "Now," she asked, "Can you tell me what Pharaoh did for Joseph's brothers?" "Yes," replied Willie, "he made cow-boys of 'em."
