CASTORIA

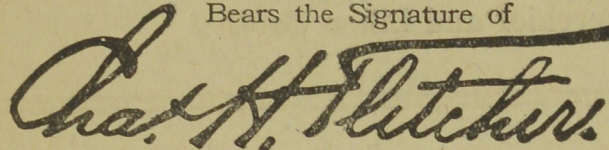

Fletcher's Castoria is strictly a remedy for Infants and Children. Foods are specially prepared for babies. A baby's medicine is even more essential for Baby. Remedies primarily prepared for grown-ups are not interchangeable. It was the need of a remedy for the common ailments of Infants and Children that brought Castoria before the public after years of research, and no claim has been made for it that its use for over 30 years has not proven.

What is CASTORIA?

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic and Diarrhoea; allaying Feverishness arising therefrom, and by regulating the Stomach and Bowels, aids the assimilation of Food; giving healthy and natural sleep. WINTER CLOTHES.

While the colors for daytime are somewhat sombre, we may indulge in the most beautiful vivid shades for the evening. This does not mean, however, that our evening frocks are all to be of gay hues. The liking for black and white has apparently taken a firm hold. Stately and beautiful dinner gowns are in carefully wrought out combinations of black and white.

For daytime much use is made of broadcloth, velours and serges. For the more elaborate clothes there are moire, brocade crepes and chiffons and heavy ribbed silk. There is a revival, too, of stiff, old-fashioned white satin.

Some very pleasing effects are obtained by the use of the wrong and right sides of satins and brocades. A favorite method of combining the two is in inverted box pleats, allowing the wrong side of the satin to show in the pleats.

Bright colored tulle and chiffons are seen in quantities in the evening. The most adorable little dancing frocks are made of vivid shades of tulle in combination with black Chantilly. Colored velvet and black satin are strikingly combined in evening frocks of a more formal character.

CLEANING UPHOLSTERY.

To remove marks made on leather upholstery by leaning the head or resting the arms on it use the following.

Boil half a pint of linseed oil, let it stand until nearly cold and then stir in half a pint of vinegar until it is well mixed. It may then be bottled. Pour a few drops on a piece of flannel and apply to the leather, then polish with a soft dust cloth.

If you have stains of ink on the carpet or rug do not despair. Do not use oxalic acid or the color will come out. Soak up what ink you can with blotters and then bring forth a can of condensed milk. Dilute with water and pour it over the spot while it is still wet.

CARE OF BRUSH AND COMB.

One cannot be too careful of combs and brushes. They should be kept absolutely clean. They should be washed once a week and laid in the sun to dry. The brush and comb should be first washed quickly and then dipped in a solution of boric acid and then laid in the sun.

If the backs of the brushes are silver or other metal, they may be cleaned by dipping the bristles in a solution of ammonia and water. After this run hot and cold water alternately over this part of the brush, shake it vigorously and put it, bristles down, over a rest of some kind to dry in the open air.

If the bristles of the brushes have lost their stiffness or elasticity, treat them to an ammonia and salt bath. First wash them in hot water to which ammonia has been added, and then dip directly into water to which salt has been added. Dry the brush with the bristles up in the open air.

DENOUNCING PUBLIC WASTESpecial to aDaily Mail. Copyright 1920

(By Lydia Kingsmill Commander)

London, Dec. 18.—For some time the women of England have been demanding public economy and denouncing Government waste. Now the men in despair over constantly rising taxes are turning to the women and appealing to them to check the orgy of spending which seems to possess all governing bodies.

At a conference representing nearly a thousand city and town councils throughout England half of which have women members the tenor of all the speeches was that women and women alone could check the extravagance that is menacing England.

Fill your local councils with women members—let them inspect and examine and retrench and contrive to their hearts' content—then you will have real economy at last! Such were the suggestions of speaker after speaker, and the men were even more emphatic than the women.

"I am one of those," said Sir William Glyn-Jones, in the course of an address on the subject of economy in local government, "who believe that there is not half enough 'contrivance,' planning to save, in local government. It is the women who continually contrive at home, that thinks of economy. A man never turns his own overcoat, but a woman often turns her gown. Therefore when in the council of a small place the matter arises of a new uniform for the hall porter, who is there to suggest the renovation?"

"Nobody even says 'Let's look at it' The clerk has initiated the account as one of the usual items, and away it goes. I believe that a woman, inexperienced in local government, could effect immediate economies."

"In 979 councils," said Sir W. H. Dickinson, "there are 479 women members, but that is not enough. Women are more economical than men, and are able to practice economy intelligently and successfully. Some people think economy is privation, some that it is niggardliness. It is neither. It is a wise and careful use of resources economy is a virtue in which women excel. It is, too, the great need of our country and every country today. Women helped men to save the country in the war. They can be the principal power in saving us now from bankruptcy."

HOLDUP IN NEW YORK HOTEL

New York, Dec. 18.—Three robbers two of whom carried revolvers and the third a blackjack, held up Owen G. Linthwaite of Red Bank, N. J. president of the New Jersey Motor Sales Corporation and H. L. Worley of Newark, N. J. and their wives in Linthwaite's room, on the second floor of the Hotel Astor, at 44th st. and Broadway, last night. The men took jewelry and money. One of the robbers was caught and the jewelry recovered. The others escaped.

The three men, their faces masked with handkerchiefs, burst into the room as the part of four sat, conversing. Swinging a revolver back and forth, the first robber ordered the men and women to put up their hands. While one man stood guard at the door the others ordered Mr. Linthwaite into a bathroom and Mr. Worley against the wall.

The robber guarding Linthwaite went through his victim's pockets and took $92. They secured $67 from Mrs. Linthwaite of her jewelry, a pendant bar pin, two diamond rings and a bracelet.

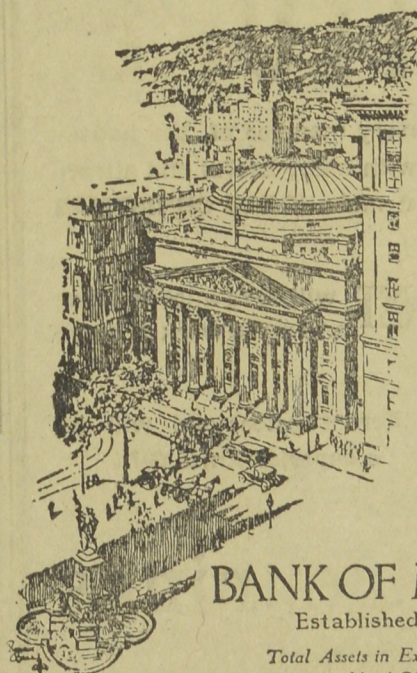

Linthwaite turned on the robber who was searching him and knocked the gun from his hand. The women screamed and the guard at the door rushed at them. The cries were heard in other rooms, but brought only shouts for quiet. One of the women failing to get a reply to her efforts to telephone, smashed a window and the glass nearly struck a policeman in 44th st.

The officer ran into the hotel and up stairs where he discovered the two men and women struggling with one robber. The others had fled.

THE EARS OF YESTERYEAR.

Where are the ears of yesteryear
That once were worn by my Ladye
Faire?

Ere puffs unnumbered came to rear
Their waving stretches; we could spare

Some sundry sampels of false hair,
So we could once more vision clear
The shell-like organs pink and bare—

Where are the ears of yesteryear?

One by one do they disappear,
Our cherished treasures, who can say

What tomorrow may bring, what fear
Shall loom like clouds across our way.

Into the past our joys estrap,
Wine and two and three-quarters beer;
In ghostly sackcloth soon we'll pray—

Where are the ears of yesteryear?

L'ENVOI.

Perchance 'tis penance for sinful past.
We're so denied in this wheeling sphere;

But still the questioning follows
fast—
Where are the ears of yesteryear?
