A VERY OLD QUESTION
HAS BEEN REVIVED AGAIN

Should Women be Required to Obey Their Husbands?—Senators of France Would Oust the Word From Its Place in the Napoleonic Code—The Term is Obsolete, But it Still Has Many Friends and Supporters.

(By Lydia Kingsmill Comander, Staff correspondent of C. A. N. S.)

London, Aug. 22.—(By Mail) The old question wives should be required to "obey" their husbands has come up again. Some time ago advanced Clergymen of the Church of England proposed to drop the disputed word from the Prayer Book. Now the Senators of France want to oust it from the place it has long held in the French Civil Code, the famous Code Napoleon. So obsolete as it may seem in this day of self-supporting voting women, little old "obey" still has some friends.

Capt. W. B. Maxwell, the novelist, emphatically defends it. "If I were a Frenchman," he said, "I should be strongly against the alteration of the law which makes the husband protect his wife while enjoining on her obedience to him. That exactly fulfills desirable conditions, and works extremely well."

"Neither the business of the office nor that of the home could be conducted with any chance of comfort if the two partners maintained an equal authority."

Lady Sydenham was equally decided in favor of wifely "obedience."

"It is a religious vow in the marriage service," she said, "and I think the French Chamber would be very wrong in changing the law in that matter."

"The wife should be in subjection to the husband. It makes for happiness."

Lady Bland-Sutton said, "Perhaps I shall be unpopular in my view, but I certainly hold that the wife should obey the husband."

"One must be the master, and it is much better that the man should have the authority."

"I have generally found that if the wife makes up her mind to take second place, it makes for a very much happier home."

"It does not mean that the wife should 'obey' in the dictionary sense of the term, but merely that there never can be an equality of sex, and the husband should have the responsibility of authority."

An Actress' Views

Miss Lena Ashwell the well-known actress takes the opposite view, and gives strong and up-to-date reasons for her position, she said:

"I hope that the reform which is being courageously proposed in France will be accepted, and that the women will in forms and ceremonies be recognized as the equal human being with man, which she, in fact, is."

"There are always people in favor of man's domination, of putting women in a different category from man."

"I hold that, as they are both human beings, they have a right to co-operate with each other. Father and mother or husband and wife generally agree on principles."

"There is only one way to run any house, and that is with husband and wife in sympathy and in co-operation, neither having authority over the other. Unless you have got that you can make laws until you are blue in the face, and you will never get people to obey them."

"How absurd for the law to demand that the wife shall obey her husband, seeing that it cannot be enforced. In how many cases does it seem a mockery that the woman should have to make that solemn vow when its absurdity is patent?"

"In the religious ceremony, the marriage vow places the woman in an adverse position in respect of the man. Why? They are equal beings, and why should the woman be made to promise something which she knows she cannot do? If the man told her to do something that was wrong, must she obey him?"

"If people argue that the word 'Obey' does not mean that the husband is everlastingly to order his wife about, what is the use of employing a word that does not mean what it apparently does?"

"No; let us be rational in our use of forms and ceremonies, and not make them farces by employing languages which, in fact, does not mean, and is not intended to mean, what the dictionary tells us it does."

"It is true that many women are temporarily subject to their husbands, but that is not because they are women, but because their wills are weaker than the husbands."

"But how often, on the other hand, does one find the woman mentally the dominant partner, and the one better fitted to counsel and lead? Yet she has promised to 'obey' her husband."

"In all cases let us promise what we can perform, and not differentiate between two people because one happens to be a man and the other a woman, and say to the latter, 'You, because you are a woman, must obey him because he is a man, whether you are intellectually or physically his superior or not.'"

"Rather would it be better to say, 'Let us both agree.' If there were more agreement and sympathy and less 'obeying'—to say nothing of dictating—there would be far better results forthcoming from the state of matrimony, and a happier home life, as compared with our present over-crowded divorce courts, for the man and woman of today."

COST OF CHORUS GIRLS GOING UP
AND SOME GET $100 A WEEK

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—With the new theatrical season about to start, Broadway, as usual, is complaining of the dearth of chorus girls and the high cost of the young women of the ensemble, who nowadays make as much, and in some cases more, than their brothers and sisters of the drawbar.

The chorus girl of today in a Broadway musical show, if she is good looking enough and can ear clothes and attract the tired business man to the theatre several times to see her rather than the show, demands and in most cases receives $75 for her six nights and two afternoons a week.

Others draw only a paltry $50 or $60, while some exceptional show girls get as high as $100, producers assert.

One Broadway manager, asked about the reported shortage of girls this season, said: "Yes, we are having the usual hard time getting girls who can wear clothes, sing, dance a little and who have real good looks. If we could cast our chorus for $50 a week we should feel lucky indeed. It's getting to be a great game. They have all kinds of opportunity to go ahead, play small parts and get out of the chorus, but you won't find one chorus girl in a thousand that will try to advance. They get better money than the average man does in everyday work, and they seem to be satisfied."

"One of the big dramatic successes of last season, when it opened on Broadway, did not have a single member of the cast, which was large, receiving more than $100 a week. I can name, offhand, any number of exceptional chorus girls who have the looks, wear clothes and lead numbers, who receive their $100 every Saturday afternoon and the general public has never heard of them, or probably never seen them, save in an ensemble number, and admired some gown the girls were wearing. It's a great life—the high cost of the chorus."

THE McMURRAY BOOK AND STATIONERY COMPANY, LTD.
SNAPSHOTS DEVELOPED AND PRINTEDA TAILOR MADE MAN

"A Tailor Made Man." Harry James Smith's great comedy will be presented by The Klark Urban Company, at the Opera House on Wednesday, Sept. 8. This play ran for a year at the Cohan and Harris Theatre, New York, and was considered by press and public to be the best comedy of recent years. The Klark Urban Company carry an entirely new stage setting for the play and give it a fine production. The story tells of a young tailor's apprentice, who "borrows" a customer's dress suit and goes to the leading social function, of the year, on sheer nerve and becomes a social favorite. The play while a comedy, has an occasional line of pathos, that will bring a tear to your eyes. Seats on sale Monday.
