STORY OF A MIRACLE WHICH TOOK PLACE IN IRELAND

Irish Political Troubles are Likely to be Further Embarrassed by the Supernatural — Strange Events at Templemore Which are Hard to Explain — Youth Had Visions of the Virgin Mary, it is Claimed.

By Hugh Curran, Staff Correspondent of the Cross-Atlantic Newspaper Service.

Dublin, September 17—The Irish political trouble, already complicated enough, is likely to be further embarrassed by the supernatural. That is the opinion of many concerning the reported manifestations at Templemore, a town in county Tipperary. Templemore was recently the scene of the murder of a police officer, Dist. Inspector Wilson. On the night of the murder, police and military broke loose and shot up and burned right and left by way of reprisal. The town hall was destroyed, and in its destruction, a military officer, Capt. Beattie, of the Northampton Regt. received injuries from which he died. A private soldier's incinerated remains were found amongst the debris.

It was following these happenings in Templemore that the disclosure came of strange events both in the town and in the neighborhood. These are hard to explain.

At the house of a small farmer at Curryheen, some miles off, lived a youth of 16½ years, James Walsh, a student at Roscrea Cistercian College. Very pious and of a wonderfully impressive demeanor, this youth was stated to have had visions of the Virgin Mary who appeared to him in the garb of a nun.

On one occasion she informed him that the miracle of Louraine would be repeated in Ireland and that he would be the instrument of making it known. On a further occasion the Virgin appeared in the house where he resided and on the floor chalked a spot, and at her request the youth brought a spade and dug a hole in the shape of a heart. From this shot up a volume of water and instantly religious statues which were in the house came of their own volition and ranged themselves around the spring. Walsh himself fell prostrate and remained for some time. Then a remarkable thing happened. Blood was seen to be oozing from the eyes and noses of the statues. The happenings were soon noised abroad and people came in crowds to observe the phenomena and to carry away the water.

Some of these figures were removed into Templemore to a house of a man named Dwan, and it is claimed that their presence saved the town from total destruction on the occasion of the military reprisals.

Crowds began to visit the house of Dwan and in order to accommodate the people and give them opportunity to see for themselves the statues were placed on a table. All could see for themselves the blood then congealed on the statues.

Then other wonders followed. Cures of confirmed invalids were reported. These excited the whole neighborhood to a tremendous degree and the report spread over the whole south of Ireland. On Sunday thousands of people came into Templemore from all parts many even from Dublin. They brought with them the halt, the lame and the blind, all in the hopes of receiving a miraculous cure. Quite a number of cures are reported.

One newspaper correspondent assured me that he saw one person, an apparently hopeless invalid who had not walked for years, get up and walk about. An ex-soldier named Monaghan proudly tells how he was invalided from the army two years ago from gunshot wounds in the leg. He was badly shaken by the rioting some days before in Templemore. He crawled from his own house across the road to Dwan's and the boy Walsh applied the crucifix to his leg and after a shock and great pain, he found his leg better and he ran back to his own home where he was joyfully received by his wife and mother-in-law. His leg, which was painful to touch, was now quite natural and without pain.

A youth who had not been able to walk for years except with crutches had the use of his limbs restored and his delighted father smashed up the crutches before the assembled multitude, many of whom took pieces for souvenirs. At least a half-dozen such cures are already reported.

Amongst the country people, there is no doubt that these remarkable happenings are associated with the political unrest which keeps everyone especially in the country towns, in a state of extreme nervous tension. They regard them as an intervention of providence. They believe that, were it not for Divine interposition, the town of Templemore would have been burned up in the recent trouble.

A people who are deeply religious and who are so much excited as the Irish now are by all that is happening around there, can hardly fail to be moved by events so mysterious and weird. Templemore for the time being will become a sort of Mecca for the suffering in body, and no less will it be the objective of those whose patriotism is no less strong than is their religious feeling.

It is interesting to note that Roman Catholic priests of the town maintain an attitude of strict detachment regarding the miracles, although some of them who visited the place and saw the results could not help being astonished.

"Poland needs soap," And she will need lots of it if she expects to wash all the Russian prisoners she has captured.
