THE FUR INDUSTRY IS RECOVERING FROM COLLAPSE

Speculators Have Been Wiped Out and an Improvement is Now Expected—Canadian Fur Auction Sales Company Has Passed Its Dividend—Another Auction to be Held Some time in the Month of January.

Montreal, Dec. 27.—If it is permissible to use the phrase John Moody of New York employed in an address before the Financial Club of Montreal in referring to general business conditions and applying it to the fur business, it would seem quite appropriate at the present time, namely, that the fur industry early last spring had "prosperity but no prospects," whereas now it has not prosperity but has prospects. The passing of the preferred dividend by the Canadian Fur Auction Sales Company this past week was not pleasant news for its shareholders. The situation that induced the directors to discontinue the regular preferred dividend for the time being was the result of a temporary collapse of the market for pelts all over the world. Last March the initial auction sale of this company brought the highest prices ever paid for furs in the history of the industry as far as it is known. The result was that at the time the company was in an unusually strong position with large profits assured on the skins they had bought and a large sum paid through commissions on consignments of furs. Within one month the situation had changed and the subsequent auction sales of New York and St. Louis showed a weakening market in prices considerably below those of the high mark obtained at Montreal. Since that time the demand for furs has dropped off to such an extent that in many cases the prices mentioned are 50 per cent. below what they were at the auction and often these are only nominal quotations. One of the chief troubles was the serious extent to which speculators had accumulated large stocks of skins, buying at one auction, passing on to another and again to another, with the price going up each time and the accumulated stocks growing larger and larger with comparatively little distribution among the fur manufacturers of the country. When the banks pressed for liquidation the structure collapsed.

Lost Through Failures.

This might have had little effect on the Canadian company had it been able to "clean up" after the auction. As a matter of fact, failures followed amongst a number of dealers who had bought here, and the company found itself in the position of having to take back large quantities of furs that it had sold or disposed of on commission. In most cases it had paid the consignors the full amount realized at the sale, less commissions expecting that it itself would be able to secure the payments from the consignee. In some cases little more than 25 per cent. was paid and probably in some cases none at all, if the credit of the purchaser seemed to warrant it. Furs that had to be taken back were either held for higher prices or disposed of at a considerable loss, which wiped out the profits made by the company at the time of the fur auction last March. It thus left them in the position pretty much of starting over again, but at least they will start on a much more substantial basis as far as the industry is concerned, as most of the speculators have been wiped out and the business would appear to be back again in the hands of the more legitimate dealers.

Only 15 Per Cent Regular Catch.

Probably the most constructive factor in the rebuilding of the industry again, and a natural one, is the small catch there will be during the coming winter. One year ago almost fabulous prices were guaranteed the trappers; this winter prices are so low that only about 15 per cent catch is looked for, his will tend to make it much easier to absorb the stocks on hand.

Another Auction in Montreal.

The Canadian company is planning a fur auction in Montreal on January 31, a couple of weeks after New York has broken the ice. St. Louis will follow Montreal, and by that time it is hoped steady buying power will have come in to support the market. The retailers are cutting prices deeply, as well as the fur garment manufacturers, so that stocks of made-up goods are being liquidated fairly well.

NOTORIOUS PRINCESS STILL LITIGATING

Special to Daily Mail. Copyright 1929 by Cross Atlantic News Service.

(By "Rienzi")

Rome, Dec. 27.—Princess Louise of Tuscany, whose escapades formed a standing chapter of the "Chronique Scandaleuse" some years ago, has been heard of again. She is the divorced wife of the Crown Prince, now ex-King of Saxony, and her later marriage with a music teacher named Toselli was dissolved years ago.

She now wants Toselli to account for a sum of 42000 lire ($8,400) which she left in her former husband's hand when they separated to defray the expenses of their child's education. Toselli states that with the Princess' consent he left the child under the care of his mother, who had given the child the very best attention.

During the hearing Toselli asserted this case had only been taken to court because the Princess wanted to have the child under her charge. The money had been applied for the purpose for which it was intended. He declared he was at a loss to account for the Princess' sudden tenderness; she had not hesitated to leave six children behind in Saxony. The Princess wants the father to be deprived of his parental rights over the children, for whom she wishes the Court to appoint a guardian.

AMERICANS ARE GREGARIOUS SAYS IAN HAY

Special to Daily Mail. Copyright 1929 by Cross Atlantic News Service

London, Dec. 28.—"Ian Hay" (Major Beith) the popular novelist who recently visited the United States, drew some comparisons between Americans and Englishmen at a public dinner in Manchester.

"The American is a gregarious animal," he announced, "But everyone knows that the Englishman's real ambition in life is to get a railway compartment to himself."

"The American has no pronounced aversion to publicity, but an Englishman has such a dread of being accused of 'side' that if you detect him in a generous action he hastens to assure you that really he was actuated by the basest motives."

In England the head of the firm shuts himself up in a hutch of his own and although six clerks may have to work together in an office, the ultimate object of each is to attain honorable confinement for himself."

Turkish women are now showing their faces, and they may adopt short skirts next. Whoever it was that defined life as a fleeting show had vision.

ADVERTISING INCREASES THE HEIGHT OF A MOUNTAIN

HOW MANY PEOPLE know the names of the highest mountain peaks in the world?

FOR INSTANCE, "Kinchinjinga" is the name of one of the highest mountains in the world. It is 28,156 feet high.

PIKE'S PEAK is only 14,108 feet high—but it gets credit for being higher because it is advertised.

ADVERTISING will bring many unknown things into prominence during the coming years.

NOW IS THE TIME, when so many articles and commodities of trade are flooding already overstocked markets, for the man with goods to sell to let the people know all about it.

THE BEST WAY to let the people know is to advertise in the newspapers.

YOU HAVE SEEN THIS in the Daily Mail—let the public know what you have to sell through the advertising resources of this newspaper.
