

THE TORTURES OF RHEUMATISM

Happily Stopped When He Began To Take "Fruit-a-tives"

8 OTTAWA ST., HULL, P. Q.

"For a year, I suffered with Rheumatism, being forced to stay in bed for five months. I tried all kinds of medicine without relief and thought I would never be able to walk again.

One day while lying in bed, I read about "Fruit-a-tives" the great fruit medicine; and it seemed just what I needed, so I decided to try it.

The first box helped me, and I took the tablets regularly until every trace of the Rheumatism left me."

Maybe the reason a man in a new suit never looks like the fashion plate of that suit is because his tailor would not be a tailor if he were as artistic as the artist who created the fashion plate.

A man spends his youth turning on the electric light of sentiment and the electric light of sentiment and basking in its radiance—and then is shocked and astounded when he touches the "live wire" of love.

LENINE AND TROTSKY ARE SLAYED BY MAXIM GORKY

The End of Bolshevism in Russia Believed to be Near at Hand—Popularity of Gorky is Enormous—Speaks Plainly of Conditions as They Exist Under the Bolshevik Rule—Better Things in Sight.

Copenhagen, Nov. 15.—The news from Russia overshadows everything else and no one here doubts that the end of Bolshevism is near. Maxim Gorky, whose unselfishness and real interest in the welfare of the masses no one ever has doubted, appears to follow in the footsteps of Maximilian Harden in Germany and to have become the "enfant terrible" of the Bolshevik party. His popularity in Russia is so enormous that neither Lenin nor Trotsky dare touch him, ill though he is, when from his bed he hauls them over the coals. His latest Philippic is published in the Moscow paper "Pravda", which has just reached here.

"Everything," he says "is now the property of the people but this property is being destroyed more and more from day to day. The houses are being ruined costly furniture is being used for fuel and priceless works of art are lost but do we produce anything, or do we carry on any work worthy of a free people? No, we work without soul without energy! Through our lack of foresight and sense of making work fruitful we waste the resources of our state. Of course, that is really hardly worth mentioning, particularly for us who claim that we want to regenerate the world through a new order of society. But have our present masters, who are incapable of working themselves and who do not wish to work, the slightest claim to call themselves educators?"

"These same matters will perhaps in a very near future not even have a pair of trousers to put on. I do not think the workers of Europe are inclined to be very much impressed by these men. Revolutionary socialism is undoubtedly something exceedingly beautiful, but nevertheless we must work. All we have done hitherto is to create an atmosphere of laziness and criminal carelessness. Never have we worked as poorly or dishonestly as at present. To be true, lack of proper nourishment and the physical weakness resulting from it is partly the reason but in the main it is due to our utter lack of the sense of responsibility."

It is of interest to notice that so great is the influence of Gorky that each of his attacks upon Soviet government and its leaders meets with an immediate response, and the effect of the article quoted above has the birth of a very strong opposition, within the very circle of the staunchest supporters of Lenin against the policy of the dictator. The object of this opposition is to compel the Soviet government to adopt a very moderate policy.

The position of Trotsky, it is said is greatly threatened, since the majority within the Central Executive Committee has come strongly against him. The majority now maintains that an evolution in moderate direction will facilitate the endeavors to bring about a friendly understanding with the Western powers and accelerate the regeneration of Russia.

Trotsky himself, in the meantime, storms and rages worse than ever. In a speech he has just made to the commanders of the Red armies, he said:

"The entire capitalistic world has now formed a league against the Soviet government. We are passing through a most critical time. In all the wars Russia has fought our chief enemy has always been France and I want to hammer it into your minds that France is now preparing a great blow against us at Odessa, Novorossosk and Nikolajew. It is more than likely that French troops are going to land and capture our cities. Our country is impoverished and bleeding from a thousand wounds, but we swear that we will fight until we have swept back every hostile force."

The Russian paper "Volja Rossia" gives a dreadful description of the

POISON TRIAL IN WALES IS ATTRACTING WIDE ATTENTION

(By Hugh Dryden)

London Nov. 23.—Hardly in the history of great British criminal trials has more interest attached to a case than is now being taken in the coming arraignment of Harold Greenwood, a prominent lawyer, of Kidwelly, Wales, who is accused of poisoning his wife. The trial is to take place at the little court house in the small county town of Carmarthen, where all the hotels have been completely booked up, and an army of reporters will invade the town. A specially augmented telegraph service has been installed, and it is expected that between 60,000 and 70,000 words will be put on the wires each day of the trial. The famous counsel, Sir Edward Marshall-Hall will defend Greenwood, while the prosecution will be in the hands of Sir Marjory Samson, the leading Welsh criminal lawyer.

The universal interest in the case is due not only to its sensational circumstances but to the high social position occupied by the parties. Greenwood was a Justice of the Peace for Carmarthen County, and he and his wife had a very large circle of friends in local society. Large numbers of these have been pulling all possible wires to get the privilege of a seat at the trial but the tiny court house will not hold a tenth of them.

The dead woman, who was Greenwood's first wife was a sister of Sir Vansittart Bowater a former Lord Mayor of London. After her death Greenwood married another woman whose friendship for him had caused the first Mrs. Greenwood much uneasiness.

It was not until the first wife had been dead twelve months that local gossip became so pointed and circumstantial that the police were obliged to obtain a Home Office order for the exhumation of the body. The post-mortem examination revealed nothing suspicious and the doctors certified that death had been due to "natural causes."

The body was reinterred and the incident was closed officially. But the voice of scandal was not stilled. Again rumors became rife concerning quantities of patent weed-killer purchased by Greenwood for his garden, all of which was not used for horticultural purposes. The situation became so unbearable in time that a second exhumation was ordered. This time traces of arsenic were found. An inquest and a police court prosecution followed Greenwood being committed for trial. That was six months ago—an unusual interval to elapse in the course of British justice, which as a rule is swift and relentless. The long period, covered by all the circumstances of the case, from first to last, is one of the most extraordinary features connected with it.

This year's corn crop, which is spoken of as marvelous, is the result of work. The farmer didn't strike at a critical time and call it a "vacation."

Canada Still the Big Game Hunter's Paradise

Although thousands of moose, deer, bear and caribou have been killed in Canada during the past few years, big game is still plentiful throughout the Dominion. Many fine moose heads are secured every fall in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick by hunters from the United States, but guides, game wardens and Hudson's Bay Company trappers estimate that the natural increase exceeds the kill.

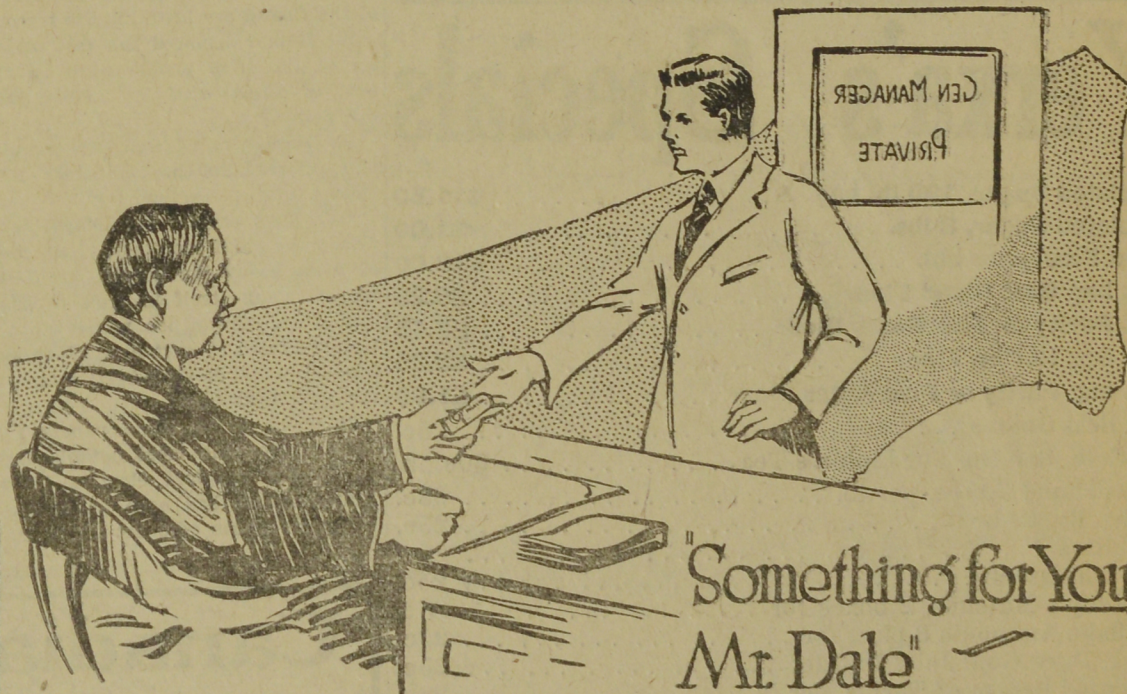

Last season Sam Smith and his son Albert led a party of sixty Indiana hunters from Fort Wayne to the big game section of Maine along the Canadian Pacific. Each member of the party so promptly got his allotment of game allowed by law that the hunters returned home ten days earlier than they intended. Albert Smith had the rare fortune to shoot a white deer, a fine buck with well grown antlers.

In Canada the range of sport is a wide one. There are moose, caribou, deer and black bear in Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and in the Canadian Rockies there are mountain sheep and goats, grizzly, brown and black bear, moose, caribou, deer, wolverines and mountain lions.

The bull moose of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec are noted for their size, and a wounded moose charging the hunter will give him all the thrills he wants. In the Canadian Rockies "Old Silver Tip," the solitary grizzly, charges down hill like an avalanche, but the expert hunter knows how to stop him before he gets too near. Two of the prized heads to be procured in the Canadian Rockies are those of the mountain sheep and mountain goat. Both are wary and wonderful climbers as well, but the hunter with good legs and good wind can get a shot at them. A favorite sport in the Canadian Pacific Rockies, and particularly in Banff and vicinity, is hunting big game with the camera—in which no hardships are involved, as hunting with rifles is forbidden in the National Park. Big game animals roam in groups through the woods and along the trails and roads, and often like to stand on some ledge of rock or prominent place to observe passers-by.

In the zoological garden and in the enclosed park at Banff there are many varieties of wild animals available for photographers. Some of the most treasured mementoes of the Canadian Pacific Rockies brought away by visitors are snapshots of big game animals.
