THE MOTIVES OF SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH

whether of labor or of capital, which have proved so disturbing to modern life, that many have thought we must try to abolish them and return to earlier conditions. Many physical processes are known to be essentially irreversible and it would seem probable that the reversal of economic changes founded on scientific discoveries is not a hopeful undertaking. For the comfort of those who fear that the world is travelling in a direction that may stifle individual responsibility and initiative, I may add that there is no evidence yet of any such calamity as regards the activity of the scientist. If I am right as to the main motive of research and the test of the ultimate value of scientific activity, no serious failure of incentive is to be feared from any changes of social or political organization.

Fascination of the Work
Nor is there, I believe, any need to limit such statements to the scientist. Those who speak with authority on Art, Music, and Literature, tell us in no hesitating way that the great artist like the great scientist, is moved chiefly by the fascination of the work, and the lesser artist produces work of intrinsic value in proportion to the zest the work has for him. Whether the same can be said of all whose work is with the mind is too wide a question but it would seem probable that in the case of a great captain of industry or a great financier it is the game and not the gain that is the chief spur. How much the efficiency of intellectual work might be increased by the use of experts in practical psychology to advise the young men in the choice of a profession it would be difficult to say. There is, I believe, much to be done in this direction. As one who spends his time in helping young men to prepare for their life's work, I am inclined to think that the choice of a profession is far too haphazard a process and that only the

A NEW BLOOD-FOOD HAS BEEN DISCOVERED THAT WORKS WONDERS

SAID TO PUT NEW LIFE INTO PEOPLE THAT ARE RUN-DOWN.

For years doctors have been searching for a combination that would enable them to inject into thin blood the elements it lacked. This can now be done, and any weak-blooded person can quickly be made strong and well. Already a small army of ailing people has proved the merit of taking after each meal with a sip or two of water, two chocolate-coated Ferrozone Tablets. This is easily done, and even one week's use of this wonderful blood-food will prove how nourishing and strengthening and flesh-building, the treatment is.

Just think of it—Ferrozone uplifts the entire nervous system, removes the blood, makes it rich and red—gives the sort of aid that's needed in throwing off weakness and languor.

Tens of thousands enjoy the advantages of renewed health through Ferrozone;—if you'll only use it, you'll surely grow strong too; its beneficial action is noticed even in a week! You see it goes right to work, removes the causes of the trouble and then quickly makes a cure.

For those who sleep poorly and have nervous apprehensions, Ferrozone is a boon; it is a specialist in such cases.

Where there is paleness, poor appetite and languor, Ferrozone makes the patient feel like new in a few days.

In tiredness, nerve exhaustion, spring fever and debility, the power of Ferrozone is known from coast to coast and universally used with grand results.

Let Ferrozone build you up, let it win you back to robust health,—it will do so quickly if you give it the chance. Sold by all dealers. 50c. per box or Ferrozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

minority have the luck to find the work that would most appeal to their temperaments. Newton narrowly escaped being a farmer and several eminent English physicists have been professionally lawyers and clergymen. One of the greatest was a brewer.

Two Suggestions

Here, however, I must leave the subject of the motives of creative science or creative art. But in these remarks I have not been speaking without a proper regard for the purpose of our meeting today. The young men and women who are now graduating will go into various occupations for which their training here will have in some degree fitted them. That all of them may lead successful and happy lives is, I am sure, the earnest wish of all who have gathered here to speed them on their journey. As a slight contribution to that success, I will offer but two suggestions. Success in any line of work is largely in proportion to the pleasure derived from the activity. It is true that to all of us many parts of our work are less interesting than other parts. But I have no hesitation in saying that there is no intellectual occupation, no matter how commonplace, that cannot be turned into a source of pleasure by doing it well. Thus the man who does whatever lies before him with resolute zest and faithfulness can come to derive such a degree of pleasure from it that this enjoyment will form an incentive for further effort. One of the most regrettable failures in life is that of the man who dissipates large natural abilities in pursuing such a variety of different objects, many more or less frivolous, that he does nothing thoroughly and thereby loses all the zest of positive achievement, while the most marked success is often attained by men who do a few things so thoroughly that work becomes a continual pleasure and a continual incentive to further effort.

Public Opinion.

But I should be leaving the members of the graduating class with a wrong impression if I have seemed to suggest that personal success of a material kind is the only, or the principal object of life. Every man must aim at a livelihood that will release him from sordid anxiety, but this, after all, is but a means to some end. I shall not attempt now to consider the question of what that end should be, but I may add one reflection drawn from our most recent experiences. The world has in the past tried many devices for government, kingships, autocracies, ruling classes, and no one should belittle the aid that these have rendered in enabling men to act in concert. But, for better or worse, authority has passed into the hands of the average man, and, whatever the machinery of government, public opinion is the power behind it. We have recently seen the calamity that can come to the world from leaving the formation of public opinion in the hands of a selfish military class. It should be the duty of intelligent men everywhere to form dispassionate judgments on public questions, and then to take some active part in creating a sound public opinion, free from national jealousies, free from class suspicions, and as free from personal ambitions as imperfect human nature will permit.

Higher Education.

The education of youth is the nurture of the soul of the race. The lack of higher education does not threaten the individual with starvation of the body, but the community which does not provide for a liberal degree of higher education risks the decay of the spirit of humanity and progress in its midst. When there is no vision the people perish, and education is the development of that spiritual and intellectual vision without which man, with all his splendid endowment of latent powers has no higher collective aim than to exist for his brief day and pass away like the beasts that perish.

Old Institution.

This institution of learning had its first beginnings one hundred and thirty-five years ago. Founded by those who founded the province and at nearly the same time, it has, in its successive forms of Academy, College and University, served the province faithfully as a beacon light of learning on a hill. Those who have gone out from its halls have (in the words of a Latin poet) served as runners in the race to hand on the torch of life. Distinguished graduates like the present Governor and the present Chief Justice have served the province in its higher offices. Many others have helped to direct the educational development of the province as superintendents and teachers in its schools, legislators, clergymen, lawyers and many in other walks of life have led in the formation of public opinion. From a close acquaintance with a wide range of colleges and universities in several countries I have no hesitation in saying that no institution known to me anywhere has done more in proportion to its resources to advance the higher interests of the community which it serves. I believe that no agency in the Province better deserves increased support from public funds or from public spirited citizens and in no way could a wise generosity do more for the public good.

We must remember that every uplift increases the taxes.

Being good pays, but some starting and informing experiences are missed.

Why do we like to puncture others' vanity? It does us no harm.
