THE SINCLAIR DEAL HAS BEEN PUT THROUGH

St. John, June 12—It was learned here last night that the recent transfer of the property of the Sinclair Lumber Company to other interests has been consummated and that the actual passing of the property will not take place until next year, in order to permit the Sinclair Co. to manufacture last winter's cut.

It was stated on reliable authority that the sale of the property arises from the fact that during the last few years there has been notable changes in the lumbering policy in this province from that of manufacturing deals and flat lumber to that of converting into pulpwood.

It is stated that in order to keep pace with the requirements of the times the Sinclair Company would have been put to the expense of erecting pulp mills in order to cope with the present situation and as this would involve too great an outlay it was deemed advisable to sell when opportunity offered.

The transfer of the Sinclair holdings is complete, consisting of 219 square miles of crown lands and 9,000 acres of leasehold lands, situated in Gloucester and Northumberland counties, and all the mills and equipment of the company, including the residences. The sale was made to the Alderdeen Investments Limited.

BUENOS AYRES PAPER
STRONGLY APPROVES
ATTITUDE OF BRAZILThe Question of Permanent Seats Continues to Seriously Endanger the Work of the League of Nations—Should Eliminate the Creation of a Category of Superior Powers.

(Special to the Daily Mail by the British United Press.)

BUENOS AIRES, June 12—The important newspaper La Prensa, in an editorial today strongly approves Brazil's attitude toward the League of Nations. The question of permanent seats on the council continues seriously to endanger the work of the League, La Prensa declares.

It says that it is necessary to correct fundamental defects regarding the territory which the League covers and to eliminate the creation of a category of superior powers.

While such a classification exists it is only natural that some countries should continue to struggle to the highest places in the League, the newspaper argues.

Although American nations should maintain the basis of equality in the League, the editorial concludes, because traditions of South America are based on equality "against the principle of associations of allies".

FREDERICTON MAN TESTIFIED AT TRIAL

Roberval, June 11—Nearly five hundred people, drawn not only from the town of Roberval but from the neighboring parishes crowded the court room here today, the second day of the trial of Emily Sprague, charged with having poisoned her husband, Abraham Gallop, a New Brunswicker at L'Île Maligne on August 5, 1925.

The first witness today was Dr. D. W. Ross, of Fredericton, who testified that in conjunction with Dr. Abrahamson, he had conducted an examination of the body of deceased after its exhumation at Kingsclear, N. B.

"Gallop was a man around 50 years of age," Dr. Ross testified. He described the condition of the vital parts of the body following its disinterment. The lungs were black, and he had sent these to Quebec in addition to the heart, the liver and the stomach.

Cross-examined by Maître Rivard, Dr. Ross declared that the victim's lungs were in a state of degeneration and that the heart muscles were softened.

"I don't know if he had suffered from kidney trouble," said Dr. Ross. "The lungs were not congested."

Dr. Robillard, of Montreal, who was a physician at Roberval last August, in the employ of the Duke-Price Company, for which organization Abraham Gallop also worked, said: "On Aug. 6, last, about 10.15 a. m., Mr. Simpson and Fred Gallop, brother of the deceased, came to see me. They told me that Abraham Gallop was suffering from cramps and was enfevered. I attended him at 7 o'clock and saw that Gallop was dead. When I entered the house Mrs. Gallop said: 'You have come very late, doctor.' I examined the corpse and I noted that the extremities were blue."

To a question of the crown prosecutor, the witness said that two or three weeks after the death of Gallop his wife had come to him to get a death certificate, declaring that the death was from natural causes.

"I refused to give her such a certificate," said Dr. Robillard.
