INHABITANTS OF THE SAAR VALLEY STOP GRUMBLING; NOW FAIRLY WELL SATISFIED

(By Edgar Ansel Mowrer in Chicago News.)

Saarbruecken, Territory of the Saar—There is peace in the hearts of the Saarlanders. And the first time since the end of the war they have almost nothing to grumble at. To be sure they are still politically and fiscally separated from Germany. But they are comparatively better off than the German workmen, and there is no unemployment in the Saar valley.

They are still governed by a commission appointed without their approval by the league of nations. But since the president of the commission is no longer M. Rault, the Frenchman, but the Canadian, George Washington Stephens, they must need judge the government as the commission objectively, as government in itself, instead of condemning all the commission's acts in principle, as was presumably the duty of patriotic Germans so long as a Frenchman was in control.

The weightiest decisions are still taken by majority vote in the commission, and the majority is "French"—that is, it comprises one Frenchman, one Belgian and one Czechoslovak. But George Washington Stephens sits in the castle of the former counts of Nassau, and in him the population have great confidence.

Even Roechling is Happy.

Besides, after the conversations between Briand and Stresemann at Thoiry, it is no longer so certain a duty of good Saar patriots, entirely German as they are, to hate all Frenchmen. Among the points mooted at Thoiry was the return of the Saar territory to Germany in the more or less immediate future, without waiting for the plebiscite in 1935. (The French are entirely aware that, short of a miracle, they will not obtain five per cent of the votes of the people.) Therefore the Saarlanders breathed freer; their fight as Germans was about over and they were free to think again as Saarlanders, with a particular viewpoint and personal interests.

Even Hermann Roechling, the great industrialist, the unbowed German oak who alone defied the French government and administration of the coal mines and managed to keep his industry intact—even Hermann Roechling, whose breakfast is Frenchman and who, almost unaided carried on for years the Saar propaganda against France and against the league, began to smile and consider that the time had come to collect outstanding debts and consider the future.

The formation of the continental steel cartel, in which special provision was made for Saar interests, completed the process of pacification. It was shown that the "big fellows" in both France and Germany could agree about something and possibly work together. There appeared a chance that the Saar, as a frontier country, might come to serve as a hyphen and no longer as a dash between two great peoples. Overnight the political conversation of the Saar valley changed.

The Saar Expects Reward.

Up till now the Saarlanders have served Germany; from now on the fatherland's politics are expected to serve the prosperity of the Saar. The Saarlanders have remained German under great pressure; they have deserved well of the fatherland. They admit it. What more natural than that the fatherland should reciprocate by constructing in all grateful haste the ship canal linking the Saar with the Rhine and Moselle?

The French military occupation still remains, in defiance of the Saar constitution—an illegality the league of nations has never had the courage to order removed—but it is really almost invisible. The French, bested in argument after argument, have taken refuge in what is probably the truth—namely, that their generals will not consider an evacuation of the Saar territory so long as the Rhineland beyond is occupied and the chief line of communications runs this way. But the presence of the military is so lightly felt that in a public meeting a few days ago the assembled multitude demanded the right to possess a sending station and radio receiving sets, as well as to be served by air lines between France and Germany, which does not show a very subdued mentality.

As a matter of fact, though in public the Saar citizens are shouting as loudly as ever for immediate return to Germany, there are reasons for believing this to be something a great many of them do not want.

RABBITS AND MICE CAUSE BIG LOSSES

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Not a year goes by that there are not numerous complaints of heavy loss of fruit trees due to the ravages of mice and rabbits. Injury from mice is comparatively easy to control. The succulent bark of the young tree is particularly tasty to them in the lean months of winter, but as they are under the snow and do not climb the trees, some means of protection will prevent their damage. Ordinary building paper does very well, not the tarred, but the plain grey building paper. Cut this in strips 6 inches or 8 inches wide and tie around the trunk of the young trees, banking up around the bottom with a little earth. A better and more permanent way is to use wire protectors, made from either galvanized wire of a fine mesh or from expanded metal lath. Cut this material into strips about 18 inches high and 18 inches or so wide to allow for expansion of the tree, and fasten with small pieces of wire. This material will last several years without replacing, and insures adequate protection against mice and against rabbits as far as the material reaches, but rabbits have the faculty of getting on top of the snow and chewing the branches above the snow line. This makes protection a rather difficult matter. There is not any really good treatment for rabbits, but the following poison has met with some success and is worth trying: white arsenic, 1 part; corn meal, 3 parts. Mix thoroughly and spread about the area to be protected. A repellent which has also been used with varying success is as follows: unslacked lime, 20 pounds; flowers of sulphur 15 pounds; water 40 pounds. Apply this to the trunks with a brush.

His Father Dead.

Mr. Peter Barrett, a well known citizen of Truro and father of Mr. George J. Barrett, of Saint John, formerly of this city, died on Thursday morning aged eighty-five years. He was a native of Cornwall, England.

NEWFOUNDLAND MAN CHOSEN AS RHODES SCHOLAR

Sackville, N. B., Nov. 18—Announcement has just been made that Mr. Cecil J. Reynolds, of Lower Small Point, Nfld., a graduate student of Mount Allison University, has been appointed Rhodes Scholar for Newfoundland in 1923 after having passed with honors the preliminary, intermediate, junior and senior associate examinations in Newfoundland. His record was such that he was awarded the Jubilee Scholarship, $1,500 in value, the highest scholastic honor obtainable in Newfoundland. His record at Mount Allison has maintained the high standard shown previously, and in 1926 he was awarded the B. Sc. degree. Mr. Reynolds is again registered at Mount Allison and expects to secure the B. A. degree, with honors in English, in 1927.

Mr. Reynolds makes the third Mt. Allison man recently appointed to scholarships at Oxford, as K. B. Palmer, B. A., was appointed Rhodes Scholar for New Brunswick for 1926, and R. L. Betts, B. Sc., the I. O. D. E. scholar for New Brunswick for 1926, elected to study at Oxford. Mr. Reynolds further makes the fourteenth Mount Allison man to receive a Rhodes Scholarship and the fourth Newfoundland Rhodes Scholar who was educated at Mount Allison.

BRUNETTES MAY PUSH TO POPULARITY

London, Nov. 20—The world-wide authority of the slogan "Gentlemen prefer blondes" just received a vivid illustration in a sentence handed down by a court in Wies-Oppenheim, Baden Germany. A local burgmaster imposed a fine of 50 marks for embracing a blonde, but only 20 marks for the same offense against a brunette. What is apparently a methodical German attempt to give the controversy a definiteness it has hitherto lacked is, however, seen as having Machiavellian intention by partisans of the thesis "Why not brunettes?"

The German court's decision is interpreted in these quarters as a kick against the taunts of foreign publicity agents, and is really intended to provide an opening through which brunettes may rush back to popularity.

BRITAIN'S QUEEN HUNTS FOR A ROYAL CRADLE

London, Nov. 20—Queen Mary has been ransacking Buckingham Palace attic for the family cradle which has not been used for many years. It is for the use of little Princess Elizabeth, the Queen's only granddaughter.

Cradles, such as those which have rocked the Prince of Wales and others of the royal family, are never cast aside.

The princess, who arrived in April, will be a guest at the palace during the four months' Australian trip of her parents, the Duke and Duchess of York. The princess will have a great big room to herself, next to that of her grandmother. The baby's apartment is some distance away from the suite of the King, however, who is not altogether a sound sleeper. While he is very fond of his granddaughter, he shudders at the thought of hearing a baby cry at night.
