THE CAPITAL OF MEXICO IS A CITY OF GREAT BEAUTY; AZTEC MONUMENTS GRACE THE STREETS

The departure from Guadelajara for Mexico City is made amidst indescribable confusion. The station is a disgrace and an antiquarian relic of interest perhaps to a railway archaeologist. The fares are reasonable but excess baggage is costly. I had heard much of baggage being stolen, but while a number of my pieces had been lost for nearly a week, they showed up in good condition even though I had no claim checks or even a tag of identification, writes F. L. Hoffman in the Boston Herald.

A little Spanish goes far, provided one does not attempt to hold a conversation after the model of a guide book. A single word accurately pronounced will do the business in many cases. If one exactly knows what one wants, very few words are sufficient, never omitting "muchas gracias, señor." With this should always go a smile, for harsh language in this country defeats its own purpose.

Many Speak English.

It is amazing how many Mexicans, even of the lower element, know at least a little English. Of antagonism to Americans I have experienced none thus far. Everyone I have come in contact with has been friendly, patient and considerate. The most trying aspect of life here is the waste of time, which is incredible.

Yet, work is often done with exceptional dispatch. Some laundry which I left one day was promptly delivered in excellent condition early the next morning. A coat was repaired within a few hours. Films are developed within 24 hours and at reasonable cost. Taxi rates are cheap and the drivers know the town. All in all my experience has been a pleasant one.

The beauty of Mexico City is beyond my power of adequate description. The only city in my experience with which it can be compared is Paris. Washington, which is perhaps still more stately, is cold. Mexico City has the warmth of most of the Latin American cities and the colorful aspect of a varied native life.

Entrance Shabby.

The entrance into the city is shabby and at first depressing and bears no comparison to the Gare Lazare of Paris. But soon one passes down magnificent avenues lined with marvelous trees and embellished by a succession of fine monuments in marble and bronze. The monument to Juarez is of classic out-lines comparable only to one of the masterpieces of the "Glory that was Greece."

Every now and then one catches glimpses of architectural remnants of Mexico's marvelous historic past. Much, no doubt, has vanished, but much remains and is being well preserved. The cathedral alone would be worth a visit from the land across the border. Its interior is possibly overdone but powerfully impressive. Nearby is the National Museum, with its famous calendar stone of the Aztecs and the not less infamous relic known as the sacrificial stone, which shows the groove down which the blood of countless victims of cruelty and lust must have run up to the time of the conquest.

One is lost in amazement at the grotesque conceptions of art, beauty and religion in the thousands of idols and monumental remains.

City is Modern.

Mexico City today is thoroughly modern. Its business streets will bear comparison with any similar city of its size. The crowds in the centre of the city appear well dressed and happy. There is little visible sordid poverty, for which one must go to the outskirts. Beggars there are, but not many. Everywhere men, women and children peddle lottery tickets, the gains from which to the state go far to support a host of invaluable charitable institutions. One of these is the General Hospital of truly magnificent design and admirably perfect in matters of equipment, down to the latest medical aids to diagnosis and treatment. Everything is free, clean and readily accessible.

Marvelously beautiful patios and gardens afford abundant opportunity for rest in the open air to convalescent patients. The city may well pride itself on this most exacting test of its advances in modern civilization. The lepers are cared for admirably in a separate and well arranged building. There were some 300 at the time of my visit. One leper mother was having her non-leperous child with her, which is an inexcusable oversight.

Eye Delighted.

Everywhere the hungry eye is delighted with the glory of the bougainvillea, which blooms the year round and adorns the humblest home as well as the forbidding garden walls of the rich. Everywhere also one can catch glimpses of beautiful patios adorned with rich tropical foliage and cages of birds of bewildering variety.

The patio is perhaps the best expression of the secluded home life and reserved nature of the Mexican of whatsoever degree of culture. One may easily see the interior beauty of the patio from the outside, but an iron railing and gate preclude entrance. What lies beyond remains a mystery unsolved.

The cost of living is high, reaching New York standards wherever Americans are the patrons. Dining car charges are outrageous and the food is mediocre. One of the most famous and highly regarded eating places is Sanborns, where most tourists go for breakfast at high noon. The food is most excellent and of a rare savory taste, while the charges are moderate. Sanborns is the famous House of Tiles of considerable historic and artistic interest. No one here needs to suffer from the peculiar vagaries of typical Mexican dishes except by preference. If well cooked and in a sanitary manner, some Mexican food products are delightful, while some are atrocious.

Hotels Good.

At the better class of hotels, one hardly realizes that one is in Mexico, but away from the beaten track one is in very truth up against and faced by the necessity of dry bread and beans. Tortillas and frijoles are to be had everywhere and at all times. Of excessive drinking on the part of the natives I have seen very little, but the same cannot be said of visiting Americans.

If some of the American business houses know how their managers and employees spend their time and money, there would be a long list of whole sale dismissals. There are, unhappily, too many Americans in this country who had better be out of it, at least for the good of Mexico. They look superciliously down upon the natives, who far too often exceed them in every element of genuine culture.

Not the least surprising matter of interest is the frequency with which one meets natives of every degree who are fairly, if not fluently, familiar with the English language. Even the newsboys and the shineboys are apt to address the visitor in a few broken words of his native tongue. Extreme courtesy prevails everywhere toward the American who tries to find his way about, falling back upon the usually absurd phraseology of the guide book.

Policemen Helpful.

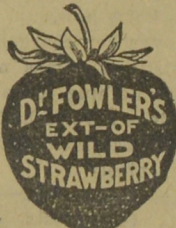

A policeman will go half a block out of his way to assist a bewildered stranger to safely reach his destination. If there is any risk of life and property, I have not observed it. At the banks one may see any number of men calling for a huge bag of silver dollars, chiefly for payroll purposes, and carry the bag openly through the streets. If this took place in New York or Chicago there would be another crest in the proverbial crime wave. It is said that there is much crime of which the public remains in ignorance, but I don't believe it.

The mortality records of the federal district reveal no unduly large number of deaths from homicide. A lot of my baggage was lost on the way from Ixtlan to Guadelajara, but it all arrived safely, though untaged and unlabeled. It had been lying for days unprotected at a way station. Likewise, if there is unfriendly feeling towards Americans it has not come to my attention. Everyone has been most kind and considerate, even to the extreme.

The Mexicans are a very proud people and they have just reasons to take pride in their achievements. They have to weld into a nation a mass of widely varying racial types, complicated by a hopeless racial intermixture and by every standard of fairness they have succeeded far better than might have been anticipated.

"Where do flies go in the winter?" "Hard question! I haven't found out what becomes of the Florida real estate booms in the summer."

When The Babies Are Cutting Teeth THE MOTHER SHOULD USE

During baby's teething time, the bowels become loose and diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cramps, etc., manifest themselves; the gums become swollen, and cankers form in the mouth.

This is the time when the mother should use "Dr. Fowler's," and, perhaps, save the baby's life.

Here and There

Vancouver—All passenger records for outgoing ships to the Orient from the Pacific Coast up to the middle of August were shattered when Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Russia sailed for Yokohama, August 19, with a passenger list of all classes of 517 in addition to many members of the diplomatic and government services returning after vacations.

Diwan Bahadur Sir T. Vijayaraghavacharya arrived recently from London on Canadian Pacific liner Montcalm at Montreal, en route to Toronto where he will open the National Exhibition at Toronto. The Knight with the lengthy name gets over the difficulty for Canadian lips by stating that it is quite proper to address him as "The Diwan." He may tour other Canadian cities on leaving Toronto.

Banff Springs—"The last time I visited Banff was over 30 years ago and the trip this year has been a most wonderful revelation," said Brigadier-General H. S. Birkett, of Montreal, who stayed at the Banff Springs Hotel on his return from a trip to Alaska. This coincides with the opinion of Morley Roberts, famous English novelist, who after a forty year absence from the West, took part in the last Trail Riders expedition early in August.

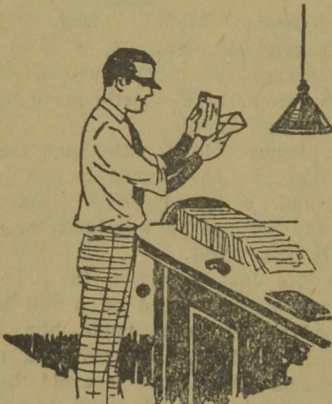

Calgary—This city had an exciting moment recently when the Most Honorable the Marquis of Salisbury, leader of the British Conservative party in the House of Lords was made an Indian Chief of the Sarcees and given the name of "Eagle Plume." The ceremony was conducted with all solemnity, His Lordship kneeling on a blanket to receive the honor and being at the same time presented with a handsome beaded buckskin vest and gloves.

Beating the train to the crossing is always a risk in favor of the train but when a motorist halts his car and waits until an engine is almost alongside him before he tries to get over, then the risk becomes an absolute certainty—against the motorist. This was the case recently in Toronto where a car was signalled to stop by the watchman at a crossing, obeyed the signal, and then decided he would still try and get over. Fortunately there were no injuries and the only sufferer was the automobile.

Pictures of Gertrude Ederle's swimming of the English Channel were sent aboard Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Scotland at the last minute at Southampton and then passed to a waterplane near Anticosti and by it delivered to airplanes at Rimouski, thus beating other pictures speeding to New York on ocean liners by a full twenty-four hours. This is regarded as one of the cleverest and speediest methods of reaching this continent from Great Britain that has ever been successfully accomplished.

Members of the Empire Parliamentary Association, numbering twenty-one delegates from the Parliaments of the United Kingdom and the Irish Free State arrived in Canada recently on board Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Scotland. They travelled across the Dominion from Quebec to Vancouver, stopping en route at Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. They sailed by S.S. Aorangi from Vancouver, August 25 for Sydney, Australia, where they will attend the Association Conference to be held in September and October.

BLUNDERS

WHY IS THIS WRONG?

One of the many annoyances that the postal service has to contend with is the receipt of bundles of carelessly sealed letters, many of which are stuck together. Since letters can be run through the cancelling machines only one at a time, all those stuck together must first be pulled apart by some postal employee. This may result in mutilation of the addresses or in placing the letters to one side until other mail has been handled.
