Discount Period Will Expire on July 22nd

Lease of Land Comprising West End Dump Discharged—Duties of City Auditor to be Defined—Simmons Property to Be Offered For Sale—Other Business.

In committee Monday night in preparation for the regular June meeting tonight the City Council dealt with much business. July 22nd was fixed as the date of expiration of the tax-discount period. The contract for coal was awarded to Harvey Welton and that for hauling coal to Frank McMinimin. The Finance Committee was authorized to renovate and repair the Simmons dwelling and offer it for sale. The lease of Water lots in the West End held by the Smith Foundry Co. was ordered discharged. All members of the Council were present.

Simmons Property.

The only tender for the purchase of the Mrs. C. J. B. Simmons property in University Avenue which was taken over by the city upon default of payment under the Housing Act, was from W. A. Jewett C. N. R. locomotive engineer who offered $3,600 on terms under the Housing Act, the city to repair and renovate the dwelling, or $2,700 cash for immediate purchase.

Discussion ensued, the general opinion being that the prices offered were too low. The Finance Committee was authorized to renovate the dwelling and offer the property at public auction.

The sum of $4,500 was loaned on this property and lot. The city secured possession only after long litigation and the loss of money.

West End Lease Discharged.

A communication from the Smith Foundry Company stated that a new arrangement was desired with regard to the company's lease of the city lot in Queen Street West which was taken over at the time of the assignment of Gordon Scott.

This property is the land now being used as the West End Dump. Residents of the locality desire that the property be converted into a park.

Ald. Smith explained that the land was of no use to the leaseholder and the city for the past two years had moved toward having the lease cancelled.

After discussion it was decided on motion to discharge the lease of the Smith Foundry Co. in regard to this lot.

King Street Lease.

J. J. McCaffrey and T. V. Monahan applied for discharge of the lease of a lot in King street originally leased by them in 1920 as the site of Sample rooms.

After discussion this was referred to the Finance Committee.

The Discount Period.

Discussion ensued on the question of a discount period. June was objected to as too early. Finally July 22nd was adopted as the date for the expiration of the discount period.

Tenders For Coal.

Tenders for coal were opened. They were as follows:—Burpee Construction Co. per ton f. o. b. Fredericton, $5; A. H. VanWart & Son, per ton (Springhill coal) $7.65; Minto Coal Co. per ton f. o. b. Minto, $4.50; Harvey Welton, per ton f. o. b. mine siding, $3.80.

The tenders of Harvey Welton was accepted.

Tenders for Hauling.

Tenders for hauling coal were received as follows:—Jens Kolding, per ton, 33 cents; Frank McMinimin, per ton, 35 cents; Lee Hanson, per ton, 38 cents; John P. Delong, per ton, 40 cents.

The tender of Frank McMinimin was accepted.

Bills From City Auditor.

Accounts totalling $100 were presented by the City Auditor, H. G. Hoben for extra services.

Ald. Goodspeed inquired for what an annual salary was paid the auditor.

His Worship replied that this evidently was a case of the duties of office being poorly defined.

There was some discussion on the subject the opinion being expressed that the preparation of statements was of the regular duties of the City Auditor and was covered by his salary of $250 per year.

Ald. Smith said Mr. Hoben had been introducing a new system of accounting and that probably had some connection with his account.

Finally it was decided to have the Finance Committee confer with Mr. Hoben and reach a definite understanding with regard to the duties of his office.

Sewerage Ordered.

The Council was informed that A. C. Fleming, Sanitary Inspector, had stated that residents of Smythe Street were without sewerage and that the Board of Health had ordered their houses connected with the sewer. There was new sewer there and one must be supplied.

The matter was referred to the Water and Sewerage Committee.

KERMIT ROOSEVELT PAYS VISIT TO THE FORD PLANT; TELLS OF ADVENTURES IN THIBET

Ford, Ont., May 22—Kermit Roosevelt, second son of the late ex-President Roosevelt, visited the plant of the Ford Motor Company of Canada Limited today. In an interview he described some of his adventures with the James Simpson Roosevelt Expedition into Tibet and Turkestan from which he recently returned. Quietly, as though he were talking of something uneventful as a game of golf, he pictured the danger fraught trek across the roof of the world. He told of the long descent into a half-forgotten country and of a people who follow customs unchanged through two score centuries.

"No roads, no railways—not even an automobile," he added with a smile as he turned away from the reporter and caught the eye of Wallace R. Campbell, vice president of the Ford Motor Company of Canada.

Kermit Roosevelt served during the war with the British forces in Mesopotamia. As a gunner he took part in many engagements on the banks of the Tigris and he was present when the Turks surrendered Baghdad to General Maude. He was reticent regard his own part in the campaign for to him it was no more than an interlude in a life of adventure. He spoke freely, however, of the fighting, and of the invaluable part played by automobiles in the desert. He recalled, too, that Canada played an important, if indirect part in the campaign.

"A great many Ford cars were used in the armored car detachments," he said. "I believe all of these were manufactured here in Ford City. They proved tremendously valuable as tenders to the heavier ears and to us they appeared practically unbreakable.

"In certain sections of the country there were bogs which gave the heavier cars a good deal of trouble, but they presented little difficulty to the Fords. When a driver found himself mired he simply collected any natives in the vicinity and made them roll the car over until it was on firm ground again. The cars were undamaged even after this treatment and functioned as well as ever."

As soon as the war was over Kermit Roosevelt planned new adventures. He journeyed through Arabia, and then he decided to explore Tibet, Southern China and Turkestan. It was thought that this country, largely unknown to white men, would prove fruitful ground for scientific and ethnological research. On the trip Roosevelt was accompanied by his brother, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt.

"Our route lay through the Himalayas," he said in describing his journey to the writer. "To cross the mountains we were compelled to take a pass nineteen thousand feet above sea level. It was difficult going for we had to carry with us not only guns and equipment, but food for ourselves and the pack animals. The ponies suffered a great deal because of the altitude and we lost many of them."

"They began to die off at comparatively low altitudes and as we pushed on towards the top of the world our situation became increasingly serious, for every day a greater burden was put upon the few animals which were left. Fortunately we lost none of our native bearers, although some of them suffered from mountain sickness."

"The natives had a curious way of treating sickness in animals. When a horse showed signs of weakness an incision was made between the eyes and if it began to bleed there was a fair chance of recovery. It meant that high blood pressure induced by the rare atmosphere was being relieved. If no bleeding took place then the natives knew the case was hopeless, for internal hemorrhage had forestalled them."

After a hazardous journey through the Himalayas the explorers skirted the Taklan Makan Desert, in Southern China and reached Aksu, a small town at the foot of the Thian Shan Mountains. Fortunately, game was plentiful, there was food in abundance and they were able to obtain new pack animals. After passing through Kurgan they travelled up the Aksu valley to the Thian Shan Mountains, where they hoped to find both big game and valuable specimens.

The journey up the Aksu valley proved to be exciting beyond their expectations and two native bearers had miraculous escapes from death in the course of a single day. At a point in the route the cavalcade had to cross a river swollen by floods. Kermit Roosevelt was riding with his brother in advance of the party and the two men made the crossing easily. Looking back from the far shore they saw one of the bearers, mounted on horseback, pitch forward in mid-stream. Even as they watched his horse disappeared beneath the racing waters and almost at once the man was carried away by the flood.

Theodore Roosevelt dismounted and jumped into the torrent, but he was unable to wade far enough out to help the unfortunate bearer. Kermit galloped along the bank, followed by the remainder of the party. Three hundred yards down the rock strewn river both man and horse were buffeted into shore. The horse was dead, but by some miracle the bearer had escaped even serious hurt.

"During the whole expedition," said Kermit, "we did not lose a single man, although there were plenty of narrow escapes."

There was to be yet another narrow escape on this particular day, for a few hours later a second man was carried away with his horse in crossing a ford. Fortunately, Theodore Roosevelt was near at hand and he succeeded in rescuing him.

In the Thian Shan Mountains the party found plenty of big game and the first ibex fell to the gun of Kermit. After a successful hunt the expedition pushed on to the east.

"Southern China is an amazing country," Kermit Roosevelt declared in speaking of their experiences after leaving the mountains. It seems to be apart from the rest of the world. On three sides the country is bounded by mountain ranges and to the north lies the Gobi Desert. Even the poison of Bolshevism, which is found from Afghanistan to the China coast, has not seeped in to this primitive land. The people live happily, for they have a strong governor who prevents dissension by cutting off the heads of the dissentients."

After collecting as many specimens as possible and making a topographical and ethnological survey of the district, the expedition returned to civilization. When asked where he would adventure next, Kermit shook his head and smiled. "I'm not sure," he said. "I get little time to spare these days."
