LIMEHOUSE POLITICS.

The saner Labor leaders in Great Britain are beginning to realize how greatly the actions of the Radicals are damaging the party. Their own lack of resolution is partly responsible. Mr. Thomas, for example, tells an audience at Weymouth that "a general strike by the very nature of things must fail." Yet he yielded, however reluctantly, to the demand of Cook, the secretary of the miners' union, that it should be declared. Mr. MacDonald was equally opposed to it, though he identified himself at a critical moment with the demands of the strikers. He now realizes how thoroughly the attempt to hold up the Government was resented by the public and how injurious has been the effect of the abusive language of the wilder spirits in the House of Commons.

Cook evidently believes that the Government will for the settlement of the miners' grievances will be accepted by most of them; he is already threatening to resign if they agree to the eight-hour day. But they have now been out a long while, their families are suffering, and they see no prospect of better terms. Moreover, the intervention of Moscow, with funds to prolong their resistance, has put them in a false position. It is safe to say that only a small proportion of them sympathize with the Bolshevik idea of Cook. Nor is the Labor Party as a whole, despite its leaves of Socialism, lost to all sense of patriotism. Mr. MacDonald's rebuke of his ill-mannered followers in the House of Commons was a significant episode. It showed that respect for the traditions of British politics which one would expect from a former Prime Minister.

Mr. Lloyd George is less judicious. Though he has postponed his trip to Russia, he evidently believes that he can strengthen his hold upon the nation by aligning himself with Radicalism. That he may smash the Liberal Party in the process appears to give him no concern. Seven leading Liberals in Leeds have just gone over to the Conservatives, and many others are likely to follow if the Asquith group does not regain control. But if he could manage to combine the Liberal rump with the Laborites, he might become again politically dominant. One obstacle to this ambition is the profound distrust the Labor leaders feel for him. But he might draw away the men whom Mr. MacDonald felt compelled to rebuke. His best Limehouse manner would undoubtedly impress them.

A WISE DECISION.

An Ottawa despatch in referring to Liberal plans and prospects in connection with the pending election says:

"There will be a concentration of forces in the ridings where there is a good fighting chance, and money will not be wasted on hopeless situations."

There is a lot of sound political sense embodied in the above and it is to be hoped that the Liberals will adhere to this plan and spend no money on "hopeless situations." If ever there was a hopeless situation for the Liberals it is the constituency of York Sunbury. In the election of October last Mr. R. B. Hanson, K. C., was elected by a majority close to six thousand. The people who voted for him nine months ago are ready and eager to do so again and to oppose his return would simply be a waste of ammunition. There are constituencies in New Brunswick where the Liberals at least have a fighting chance but by no stretch of the imagination can York-Sunbury be looked upon as one of them.

The editor of a well-known church magazine, preaching a sermon to college graduates, says the end of the world is nearing. He beseeches them to hold up the torch of truth in the dusk of the eventide of this fast-fading work. There are always preachers to preach the end of the world. There always have been. Just why, nobody knows. Look about you with your best powers of observation and you should see that this world is only in the making—not in the ending. It is a challenging world because it isn't made and it isn't done.

Forty-eight per cent of the students who attended the Kansas State Agricultural college were wholly self-supporting last year. Fourteen per cent of the rest earned part of their way. Look into the records of nearly all colleges and you will find that the stars in scholarship and athletics both are usually those boys who are working all or part of their way through. What we have to work for we appreciate, make the most of, profit by. Students are not the only ones who fail to take seriously the opportunities that come easily.

Premier Meighen is hard at work at Ottawa preparing his cabinet. The personnel of the new administration will soon be announced and on Friday the Premier will fire the opening gun of the campaign at a Conservative rally at Ottawa.

No doubt the most tiresome conversation is one between parties who have just completed the same course in becoming an interesting conversationalist.

Another odd paradox, as revealed by written history, is the manner in which man begins to relinquish liberty about the time he acquires independence.

Returned from Rome.

Rev. Dr. J. Henry Milligan arrived here today having returned after almost two years absence in Rome where he studied at the Canadian College. He received the degree of Doctor of Canon Law after his course. Those who were students spent hot weather in Switzerland. In vacation they visited the Holy Land and Egypt.

Montreal, July 12—Signatures were affixed recently to the thirty-year lease between St. James' United Church and the St. Catherine Realty Corporation, Limited, providing for the erection of a commercial building in front of the church and rental for stores and offices. Operations will start next week on the new building, which must be completed by Dec. 1.

According to the terms of the lease, St. James' United Church will receive over $1,000,000 for the use of the property in the thirty-year period. The rental is $30,000 yearly for the first ten years; $35,000 annually for the next ten years and $40,000 a year for the final ten years, making a total income of $1,010,000.

POINTERS ON PRESERVING AND STORING EGGS

(Experimental Farms Note.)

The economical housewife will take advantage of the season of heavy production and consequently low priced eggs to put by a supply of eggs for culinary purposes for use during the season of high prices.

For this purpose there are a number of preservatives that are satisfactory, but the two outstanding ones are "waterglass" and "lime water".

Waterglass is an excellent preservative but it does a great deal of its popularity to the fact that it can be readily procured at any drug store in convenient form.

Lime water is a much cheaper preservative and experiments carried on by the Experimental Farms have shown it to be equal, if not superior, to waterglass. For a number of years the Experimental Farm at Cap Rouge has been conducting tests in the storing of eggs. Some of the eggs are shipped to the Central Farm each season for examination and it is found that those preserved in lime water are best.

When eggs are to be held in a commercial way, cold storage is an essential. The guarantizing process is one that is becoming increasingly popular. For a number of years the Central Farm has been carrying on tests with this process and the results obtained warrant its recommendation to commercial packers.

Literature on the preserving of eggs for domestic purposes or on guarantizing will be sent on application to the Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.
