MORE NEED OF CAUTION.

Although the motoring season is not very far advanced, accidents in which persons are maimed or killed are occurring at a rate to suggest that the present summer may easily become the worst in automobile history.

How can this be prevented?

There will be more cars on the road than ever before; many new drivers; many experienced drivers who take pride in their ability to skin through with half-inch margins.

Must there be, for such reasons, a higher toll of death and injury?

The answers to these two questions depend upon the desire and determination of the people as a whole, meaning the individuals who comprise the people, and especially those who operate cars. There is no device of law or supervision which can make safe roads. It is a personal matter. It calls for genuine self-control; in place of letting the car run away with one's wits. It calls for constant realization that the result of one fool meeting another fool is apt to be fatal. It calls for adoption of the motto, "Better Be Safe Than Sorry." It calls for less hair-brained, hair-breadth driving, and for keeping a margin of a few feet, or a few miles-per-hour, between this world and the next.

Sure it is fun to drive fast. Few will deny this. But the fun is hardly worth the cost of a single human life, either one's own or another's.

No one who drives after nightfall has any right to go so fast that he cannot stop within the range of his lights. Always there is the possibility that an obscure object, such as an unlighted car or a person in dark clothing, will be seen too late.

There is no substitute for individual caution. Without this motoring fatalities will mount up until our highways become veritable slaughter houses.

Kindergarten children in a crowded section of New York, told to draw a picture of the sky, made little triangles or squares. The teacher said the sky is like a bowl. But the sky is not a bowl to children who never see but a patch above a roof. Pity the children who never have a real look at the sky and who never heard of horizons. Pity many others of us whose sky is like a teacup, whose horizons are pulled in clear to our eyebrows. Knocking out old horizons and putting in new is one of life's main jobs.

Nineteen thousand farmers' wives, in a vote put on by a Chicago organization, says the flapper school teacher must go. They want the old-fashioned school marm. The flapper teacher is probably called by that name because she has bobbed hair and wears clothes in style. She probably knows more about adapting children to the needs of a new world than the old-fashioned school marm. These farm wives who have gone on record are unable to see that the world has changed.

Fame comes in various degrees: An Illinois farmer who died recently is remembered principally because he raised the cow that started the Chicago fire.

There are limousines in this country large enough to accommodate almost as many passengers as a flivver coupe on the way home from high school.

"If all the world's a stage," remarked the exasperated father to his flapper child, "you're certainly made up for it."

Many a dear thing who considers herself above working for wages will toil at bridge an entire afternoon to bring home a 75-cent celery dish.

The men's wear stores are showing a union suit which fastens with only one button, which must be a keen disappointment to the laundries.

A common criticism of these radio-photograms is that the camera appears to have been set up on a motor cycle with the engine running.

High Handed: An expression used by statesmen to describe the action of the opposition in passing the measure before it is talked to death.

The reason mother scolds little Johnny for tracking real estate into the house is because she doesn't think of him as a realtor.

Soon the doors of educational opportunity will be closed for the summer. How the children dread it!

A piano is that large dark piece of furniture behind which the indolent husband flicks the ash from his cigar.

The bride takes a fiendish delight in inviting all her enemies to her wedding.

Civilization also consists of selling the savage a gun and going to war to get it back.

In the governmental land, Europe seems to be going in more and more for the one-man top.

Has anyone discovered where flies and channel swimmers keep themselves in the winter time?

A man is as dull as his point of view.

A plea for farm relief, old style, was a prayer for rain.

It's a good plain to tell the truth when it doesn't hurt.

No man is so selfish as to want to keep all his popularity to himself.

"Some of the girls," remarked the Man on the Car, "seem not to feel at home with their legs."

When only members of the family are present at the evening meal it is supper. One guest makes it dinner.

Optimism is what makes a man feel that he can hide a bald spot as large as a saucer with fifteen hairs.

Realtors will be disappointed to learn there is not enough land at the North Pole in which to drive a stake.

Mussolini's inability to turn back the flood waters and keep them from descending upon Italy may lose him votes the next time he orders himself elected.

BOY SCOUT ENTERTAINMENT.

Gillwell Beads and Neckerchiefs Presented to Those Qualified.

The Boy Scout entertainment at The Parish Hall last evening was very successful. The large audience present enjoyed it from start to finish. Fred Barnes, District Secretary, acted as chairman and an excellent programme was carried out opening with the Wolf Cubs' programme which was interesting.

There also were Boy Scout stunts and games by the St. Ann's Troop which were very interesting, the rope work being unusually good. The Rover Scouts then put on a one act play which was particularly good.

During the evening several scouts were invested and presented with the Gillwell beads and neckerchiefs. Le-Baron Bull was invested by the District Treasurer E. W. Spurr, who in turn invested Rev. A. F. Bate, Fred Barnes, Andrew Douglass, John Fitz-Randolph, John Cain and Alex McRea, all of whom had attended the winter course and the Gillwell camp last summer. The ceremony was very impressive and instructive.

The entertainment closed with the usual camp fire and song in which about sixty boys and men took part. The entertainment was good and a credit to the Boy Scout Movement.

Arrived from Milltown.

Mrs. Frank C. Murchie arrived from Milltown, Wednesday and joined her husband, the Chairman of the New Brunswick Liquor Commission, who is registered at the Queen Hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Murchie intend to occupy the cottage adjacent to the Liquor Commission's headquarters and warehouse. The building which was occupied last year by Hon. J. F. Tweeddale when Chairman has recently been renovated and painted and presents an attractive appearance.

COAL STRIKE MAY BE OF LONG DURATION

Barnsley, Eng., May 26—The prediction that the British coal strike will be a long and serious fight was made today by Herbert Smith, president of the Miners' Federation, in the course of a speech here.

"If we don't fight now, our children will damn us for not doing so when we had the opportunity," he said. "If this is my last fight, I will resist to the end any reduction of wages or any longer hours. All that the miners want is a fair deal."
