

Hunting With Guns as Accessories

By the time he has gathered all his equipment and impedimenta around him the average man preparing to enter the woods with the idea of game hunting begins to wonder, first of all how he is going to carry it all, and then just how much of it he really needs. Eventually he sets off with the bare necessities of the trip, minus most of the paraphernalia he intended to take, but one thing he will not leave behind—his camera. It may get in his way sometimes, but as a rule he finds it indispensable. Without it he knows that he will be unable, probably, to support his claims as to big moose shot or ferocious game encountered.

As a matter of fact quite a noticeable number of those entering the Canadian woods during the last few years have been known to carry guns rather than cameras as accessories. A great deal more skill and bush lore is required to enable one to secure a shot with a camera than with a rifle, the chase is even more exciting and the end, without entailing any slaughter, produces quite as much thrill. This will be readily acknowledged by the true sportsman.

Reproduced above are some of the closing season's most interesting shots. The doe was got within range after three days hunt out of Ste. Jovite, Quebec. She was not the largest animal seen, but she made the best shot. The moose which is seen leisurely sharpening its teeth was caught in the Kipawa district of Ontario, while the other faced the camera in the waters of the Tobique, Nova Scotia. The buck cleaving the Lake of the Woods shows what may be obtained in the way of "action" photographs.

BANK MANAGER, FORMERLY OF WOODSTOCK, TELLS OF WORK
AS HEAD OF BOARD OF TRADE

(Financial Post.)

On his record of accomplishment, E. W. Jarvis, manager of the Bank of Montreal, was recently re-elected president of the Chatham Board of trade. What are the benefits of an aggressive board of trade to the community and what are the benefits to the president, and to his bank, when he happens to be a branch bank manager? I felt that there were many managers who would ask these questions and so put them to Mr. Jarvis—and his answers are the basis of the following article.

Many other bank managers are, like Mr. Jarvis, lending their energies to activities for the betterment of the communities in which they are located. It would be interesting to have news of what they are doing and their opinions as to how they can make the most effective use of their time and opportunities in community work. Or perhaps there are managers who believe that they can make the best use of their time by sticking to banking proper. An exchange of views is always valuable. This department provides an opportunity. Let's hear from you.—J. W. T.

You ask me two questions, first, what our board of trade has been doing for the benefit of the community. Second what has been the effect of my efforts as president on the prestige of the bank.

In reply to the first, a board of trade's function being recommendatory, not legislative, it is necessary, to give them weight, that its recommendations be carefully considered and passed almost unanimously.

Our success during the past year may be contributed to the following:

Energetic work of all our committees, especially industrial, tourist, road and publicity, and our secretary.

Careful consideration of every subject brought to our attention with doubters encouraged to express their views in order that both sides may be heard. In some instances a qualified member has been asked to investigate and introduce a subject.

Special committees have been carefully chosen, not at, but after meetings and appointed only after those chosen have consented to act.

Friendly co-operation with our city council and city manager. Having one of the most effective, if not the most efficient city administration in Ontario, this was easy.

Splendid support from our newspaper, the Chatham News.

Our endeavor to instill a spirit of optimism into the minds of our citizens and not only to bring desirable industries to Chatham, but also to aid in the development of the fertile surrounding country which contributes so much to our prosperity.

Attendance at meetings of associated boards of trade, tourist associations, etc., and support of work of general as well as local interest, thus establishing friendly relations with surrounding communities.

The Results Obtained.

It is impossible to distinguish what is due to this year's effort, for those of years ago may be bringing results today, while those of today may bear fruit years hence; but the year has been characterized by the establishment of several new industries, a better feeling among our citizens, more active employment, better trade conditions and the return of many who left us in former years.

In regard to your second question, to tell the effect on the Bank of Montreal's business would be a breach of confidence, and to speak of prestige accruing to myself must be left to others. Observation, covering several locations convinces me that wise endeavors to promote the public interest are always appreciated and tend to assist the business of those giving their energies to the work in a proper spirit. If citizens generally gave more attention to showing material appreciation of good work on their behalf, it might induce more to give their time and thought not only to boards of trade but to city councils and public work generally.

It is impossible for anyone to benefit the community without benefiting himself and his business, but success in such work always depends on what one is willing to give. He who undertakes it for what he can get for himself will not go far.

For the future, we aim to eradicate the pessimistic spirit that is holding Canada back, and for the attitude of the spoiled child who wants everything he sees, without being content to wait until he can earn it by honest toil, to substitute the spirit of those forefathers who found here a dismal swamp, infested with ague and malaria, and cheerfully and diligently, with joy in their lives and courage in their hearts, have hewed and dug out of it the most fertile part of Canada, every trace of climatic disease eradicated, leaving all the advantages and comforts, the extent of which their descendants seem to only half appreciate.

GIRL WEDS LOVER AFTER
150 DAYS SPENT IN HIS ROOM

Lowell, Jan. 12—The marriage to-day of Raymond A. Barnes and Miss Gertrude A. McCluskey is expected to cause the dropping of criminal prosecution and put an end to the most amazing romance ever brought to the attention of police and court officials here.

Hidden away from her relatives the girl was kept for 150 days in the room of her sweetheart on Pollard street, Billerica, unknown even to his mother, according to their statements to Judge Thomas Enright.

Detected by Neighbor.

He prepared and brought her meals to the attic room, which he kept locked. When they went out together at night the girl climbed through a bedroom window and went down a ladder. She climbed up the ladder on returning while her shiek like lover went up the stairs. This continued since last August until a neighbor detected them.

Arrangements were made to issue a waiver of the five-day law today so that they could be married at once. The boy and girl were charged with an offense against public morality in the district court, but it was intimated that his would be dropped after the ceremony took place.

The girl at first charged her 18-year-old sweetheart with having kept her prisoner. She herself is only 18. Under questioning by the police and Judge Enright she changed her story and admitted that she had been a willing prisoner.

Girl Disappeared.

They had been sweethearts for two years, both agreed, and had planned to marry, but relatives on both sides objected because of religious differences. It was then that they determined to thwart their folks. Last August he girl disappeared from her home of her aunt, Miss Theresa V. McCluskey of 61 Central street.

Barnes was questioned but denied knowing where she was. Neither did his mother, his four brothers and a sister. All the time the girl was under their roof, the lovers declare. Letters to the girl were sent to the home of her sister, Mrs. George Conway, and Barnes got them there stating he was to forward them to Swampscott, where he said the girl was employed.

One night a neighbor saw the girl descending a ladder from the attic room and the secret was out. She notified Mrs. Lucy J. Barnes the boy's mother. Officer William H. O'Brien, who was called, insisted upon placing the case before the district court.

Relatives on both sides, after hearing the story, decided it was useless now to further oppose their marriage.

Veal Potpie With Dumplings.

Place in a saucepan two pounds of breast, of veal, cover with cold water, add one diced onion, two sliced carrots, half a cup of diced turnips and two stalks of chopped celery. Simmer slowly until the meat is tender it has cooked for one hour. Take out the meat, thicken the gravy with a little flour, return the meat and lay over the top small dumplings. Cover the saucepan closely and boil gently for 12 minutes. Dish the meat and dumplings on a large platter and pour the gravy over them.

"So your wife is an interior decorator?"
"I'll say so. You oughta see her stuff a goose."
