IF THE NEED BE THERE.

Forty-seven years ago Thomas A. Edison first demonstrated his discovery of electric light. It was not a very good electric light, judged by present-day standards. The principle of it was all right, but the correct material had not been found. The carbonized thread sealed in a glass bulb from which air was excluded, would burn but a few hours.

But even this poor demonstration was recognized as a very good beginning. The greatest claim it had to promise was the need for it. Everyone could see at once how desirable such a method of lighting was, and that popular understanding and demand were all that were needed to insure that inventors would perfect the thing that had been discovered.

Today the airplane and the airship are somewhat in the experimental stage. Those who believe in them and are striving to improve them think it necessary to make demonstrations and tests to prove to the people their practicability as means of transportation.

But the hope for the future of these agencies lies in the fact that they are needed. They already are sufficiently demonstrable to prove that they will do what other means of transportation cannot do and never can be made to do. That fact will create the demand, and the demand will encourage inventors to bring the flying craft to perfection.

Mr. Edison fortunately has survived to witness the triumph of many of his greatest schemes. On the anniversary of his first showing of the electric light, he said: "No one can tell where experimentation in the various fields will lead. Much has been done, but much more remains to do."

The achievement of inventive genius warrant the prediction that wherever some great and apparent need exists, some way will be found to satisfy it.

JAYTALKERS.

The term "jaytalker," which some one has coined, bids fair to be as serviceable in the cause of public safety as has been the word "jaywalker."

Students of traffic problems, when they meet in Detroit next week, are to consider the case of the "jaytalker."

The jaytalker may sit in the driver's seat or in one of the other seats. If he is the driver, he becomes so absorbed in hearing himself talk that he forgets to keep an eye on the road ahead. He may even turn around to the back seat to deliver his oration. Clearly he is not so wise as he would be thought.

Often, however, the fault is not the driver's. The passenger beside him, or those in the back seat, are completely oblivious to the fact that the driver must keep his attention on the task in hand. So they constantly talk to him or in a manner sure to draw him into the conversation.

Inattention of the driver is the direct cause of many accidents. Drivers and passengers who indulge in too much talking thereby invite disaster. Jaytalkers are as much in peril of their lives as jaywalkers.

St. Thomas Times-Journal: The death of Hon. Charles S. Myman, one of the leading business men in London, Ont., and Minister of Public Works in the Laurier Cabinet, will occasion regret among people of all shades of opinion in this district. Gifted with a strong frame and the will to win, he achieved success in athletics, business and politics. He not only merely succeeded; he triumphed in all three spheres, being the type of man who not only had the physical capacities for hard work, but the mental equipment for success as well.

An Omaha florist is arrested for stealing from a grave the flowers he had sold for the funeral. He is a mean thief—and yet his defense has some sound reasoning in it. "The woman is dead," he said, "and can't appreciate flowers any more." Few of us will steal flowers from a grave, but many of us would do well to remember that dead people can't appreciate flowers. Wives and mothers and daughters—grandmothers too—can appreciate them now.

The monthly business circular issued by the Canadian Pacific Railway recalls that not long ago Roger W. Babson, recognized as a great authority on business conditions, said that while many young Canadians had been going to the United States, "there are many splendid opportunities in Canada for men and women with the right purposes, motives, and ambitions," adding: "Were I a young man today I should be inclined to go to Canada."

M. Lutsch, Austrian inventor, has made a pair of wings and a motor which may enable every man to do a bit of flying. It's a great idea. Wings won't make men and women angels—at least they won't make men angels. It's a step—or a flight—in the right direction. Our biggest job is to provide our own Heaven by our own acts. Perhaps some day we shall even provide our own wings.

The death of a fishery officer under very suspicious circumstances in Kent County is a matter which ought to be thoroughly investigated by the authorities. There seems to be little doubt but that this man was the victim of foul play and the guilty parties should be sought out and given the punishment called for by their atrocious crime.

Mussolini is a foxy boy and evidently a close student of human nature. Every time he puts into effect something hoi polloi doesn't like he counterbalances it with an order that is bound to prove popular with men, as, for instance, when he ordered women to go without hats.

Professor Knight Dunlap of John Hopkins says "the man who uses tobacco is more likely to go along in his work with even production in amount and quality," interrupted from time to time by those who wish to borrow a pipeful.

A Porto Rican grass, said to be much more effective than moth-balls, is called "cus-cus." Its name is supposed to have been suggested by the remarks of a gentleman who found his overcoat decimated by moths.

The New England judge who decided that at least one egg is necessary in a custard might have gone even farther and ruled that there must be a clam, or section thereof, in the chowder.

The record of the new national typewriting champion is 7,920 word in one hour, but probably very few of them were double-jointed effects like "Sesqui-centennial."

One of the year's big radio favorites has been "Just a Cottage Small by a Waterfall." What looks like a cottage small by a waterfall is usually a power-house.

"Spinach is good for the nerves," says a spinach fanatic, "good for the digestion, good for the teeth and good for the complexion." And pie is good to eat.

The Pittsburgh councilman who thinks fishing is "the nearest thing on earth to doing nothing" has simply never got himself involved with a 25 lb. salmon.

There's this about it: People who live in glass houses don't have to go to the basement occasionally to see whether they left that light on.

Whenever a small college licks a great university, it is just a practice game.

Every time a man tries to kill himself because a girl won't marry him he proves that she was right.

One thing that can't be done with the large surplus of cotton is to pad prices.

A very good safety rule for hazy drivers is never to turn into a side street until you come to it.

Way down South in the land of cotton, old times there when cotton sold for 36 cents a pound are not forgotten.

No town seems "narrow" to people who behave themselves.

Simple Application that Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes blackheads. There is one simple, safe, and sure way to get them out, and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of peroxide powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts, and every blackhead will be gone. Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make larger pores, and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of peroxide powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

So live that you won't care if hell isn't abolished.

If the weather bureau talks in its sleep our guess is that it says "probably showers."

Young Jiddu Krishnamurti says he is never going to get married, as if he knew anything about it.

There are not many men like Dean Inge, and absolutely none that could get as much publicity out of gloom.

"October days are sunny," sings a poet. Yes, when there are no clouds October days are wonderfully sunny.

Every owner of a big league ball team expects his manager to win a pennant. Sad days! There are not enough pennants.

Yearning to get back to Germany and denied that privilege the former kaiser knows that he didn't win the war.

Dr. S. Parkes Cadman writes: "That which is piffle to one man is provender to another." There is something to remember; it may make us a bit more charitable in our views.

PUBLIC OPINION

LIVING IN THE "NOW."

Editor, Daily Mail,
Sir,—

As a reader of your paper, I have been greatly interested in criticisms of the flapper. I say, "Three cheers for her; may she live a long and happy life!"

Since childhood every member of our family has lived in the present, enjoying life as they went along to the extent of their means and even more so. But let me say in this connection that $10,000,000 when you are 80 will not buy you the pleasures that $1,000 will when you are sweet and 20. And so those who get any happiness out of money must do it by indulging themselves in all the luxuries that they can afford as they go along.

It is every man's and woman's bounden duty to set apart enough money to secure him or her against being dependent in old age, but after that they are wise if they enjoy what they have in the present instead of waiting to buy nuts with it, when they have no teeth to crack them.
