THE COST OF RAISING A CHILD TO MATURITY IS FIGURED BY THE UNCLE SAM AT SUM OF 7,200

Taking a family of five, consisting of the mother, father and three children, having an annual expenditure of $2500 as a basis, the bureau of labor statistics of the Department of Labor just issued a summary of a study on the average expenditure required to bring a child through the period of infancy and adolescence when he is being fitted to take his place in the world, according to the United States Daily. The summary follows:

In consideration of the expense involved in the rearing of a child, the first item to be considered is the cost of being born. The first cost varies greatly according to the economic status of the parents and even among people of the same class, particularly those in moderate or poor circumstances, there is much difference as a result of racial customs or the degree of intelligence exercised in apportioning expenses among the different items of the family budget. Numerical estimates of the cost of childbirth, therefore, represent only a rough average about which the cost, in individual cases will range.

Birth Cost Put at $150.

The minimum cost of maternity care given by a general practitioner either in the patient's home or in a hospital ward is said to be around $150, while better care, including a semi-private room, can be obtained for about $100 more. The services of a specialist increases this minimum to between $400 and $500. Treatment by midwives and the outdoor hospital service cost considerably less than the minimum hospital care. In 1924, 80 per cent. of the births in New York City were attended by physicians and half of these took place in hospitals.

In round figures, therefore, it is estimated that the average cost of being born ranges from $200 to $300. Although this is not a large outlay when considered in relation to the mean length of life, which is about fifty-five years, it is an item which has to be met at one point of time and does impose, therefore, a considerable burden upon families of moderate means.

Expenses For Food.

The cost of food is the next most important item in building the human machine. Here, also, conditions vary according to the economic and social status of parents. In computing the average expenditure, the study of Prof. William F. Ogburn, which was based on the scale of relative food consumption for persons of different ages prepared by the Bureau of Labor Statistics has been used.

Computed on the basis of a family (of three children and mother and father) having an annual expenditure of $2500, it is estimated that the total cost of food for a boy from birth to age 18, would be approximately $2400 and for a girl $2330. Making allowance however, for a somewhat higher consumption of food per adult male unit established by a similar study by Raymond Pearl, the total cost of feeding a child from birth to the eighteenth birthday is placed at $2500, or one year's total expenditure for the family as a whole.

The next item in the account is the cost of clothing and shelter. The expenditure for clothing is an individual concern, while that for shelter (including such elements as housing, fuel, lights, household furnishings and upkeep) covers joint expenses which have to be considered as a whole. Estimates of expenditures for these items are based on the cost of living study published in 1924 by the bureau of labor statistics. The cost of clothing for the boy up to the age of 18 is placed at $912 after deducting $20 for clothing during the first months of life which was included in the estimate of the average cost of being born; the clothing expenditure for the girl, after making the same deduction, is estimated to be $1002.

Cost of Housing.

It is probable that the man with the white collar job will choose the more expensive place to live, while the artisan and skilled laborer will be more inclined to seek a cheaper dwelling. As the second of these social classes is the larger, it is given greater weight in estimating the expenditures for the shelter. It is assumed, therefore, that out of an expenditure of $2500 a year from $40 to $50 per month is spent for a four-room apartment, or, fixing an average of $45, the rent bill would amount to $540. For this amount spent for rent there would be two bedrooms, combined living also contain a folding bed, and in some cases a bathroom.

Apportionment of this and similar items on a satisfactory basis among the different members of the family is difficult, but for want of a better method the cost has been distributed so that in the course of eighteen years each child is charged with about one-sixth of the family expense for shelter. The total rent for this period would be $9720 and the share for one child $1620. This figure does not allow for fuel and light, the family cost of which is placed at $100 per annum, or $30 for each child during the eighteen year period.

On the same basis of a one-sixth share in the expense for each child the cost of furniture, household, equipment and upkeep during the eighteen years is estimated to be $351. The total cost of the various items included under clothing and shelter during the eighteen years is $3327 for a boy, and because of the somewhat greater expense for clothing, $3417 for a girl, or an average of about $3400 for both sexes.

The remaining items to be considered on the cost side of the account during the formative years of the individual are the expenditures for health, recreation and sundries, and for education. The annual cost of putting a child through the elementary schools in New York State has been shown in a study by the American Council on Education to be $107, and through the secondary schools, $200.

Including $100 for a year's attendance at kindergarten the total cost of a complete grammar and high school education is $1750. These figures are somewhat higher than for the country as a whole, however, owing to the lower standards in some sections. All children do not complete both grammar and high schools, but the minimum time for school is in almost all cases, seven years, so that the average cost of schooling is considered to be approximate $1100.

The cost of health items, such as the services of physicians, dental care medicines and hospital and nursing care is estimated to be $284. Recreation costs for the period are fixed at $130, insurance at $54 and sundries at $570.

YOUTH CHASES A BALL OVER CLIFF, LIVES

London, Eng., Aug. 24—A narrow escape from death was experienced by a young holiday maker, Archibald Jefferies, of Camberwell, while playing at ball with friends on the smooth stretch of grass at the top of the cliff at Beachy Head.

The ball rolled towards the edge of the cliff and Jefferies not realizing his danger fell and to the horror of his companions rolled over the edge. He fell and rolled 170 feet when he stopped on a ledge just above the steepest part of the cliff.

His friends ran to the coastguard station and the crew turned out with ropes. Some of them climbed down to where Jefferies lay, attached ropes to him and he was hauled to the top. Afterwards he was taken by ambulance to Eastbourne Hospital suffering from severe bruises and cuts on the head.

THINKS CONNIE PULLED A BONE

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 23 — Rev. John McNeil, Presbyterian, thinks Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, has pulled a bone. Connie, getting an injunction against interference with Sunday baseball, said Sunday games would not be so noisy as week-day ones.

Rev. Mr. McNeil rises to remark that it would be strange indeed, when Babe Ruth made a home-run, if the fans should sing out "Hallelujah."

A LESSON IN SPELLING.

Ralph Waldo Emerson got a lesson in spelling-as-she-is-spoken from R. E. Richardson, a globe trotter who has laid up a vast store of varied information and philosophy.

Young Richardson when a little lad attended school at Concord, Mass. Emerson was then head of the school board. The members appeared at school at certain intervals and put the pupils through more or less of an oral examination.

The sage pointing to Richardson, asked "How do you spell horse?" "H-o-r-s-e," came the instantaneous reply.

OMAHA GIRL IS LEARNING TO BE OWN HANDY MAN

Here is a girl whose husband if she decides to be married will enjoy his nightly homecoming, his Sundays and his holidays, confident there will be no array of "odd jobs" to confront him. She is Florence Street, 17, only feminine member of the wood-working class at Technical High School who is learning to be her own "handy man." She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Street, 2139 South Forty-eighth avenue, Omaha says a dispatch to the New York World.

"Every woman ought to know how to repair ordinary damages around the house," said Miss Street, as clad in overalls, she hammers and planes at her bench. "It saves money and dispositions if a housewife can mend leaks and patch up broken furniture."

"I am studying woodworking because it is the most interesting thing I know of," she said. "My knowledge is going to be valuable, too, because I can do most of the repair work around our house already."

Miss Street is also studying mechanical drawing, cooking and sewing. She will continue her course for two more years. She plans to teach following her graduation.

BURGLAR DOES STUNT IN BOLD GET AWAY

New York, Aug. 24—A wizened little Greek known to the police as "the acrobatic burglar," jumped out of a window of the prison ward of Harlem early today, clad only in pajamas and bathrobe and limping because of a bullet wound through his left thigh. He leaped across an eight foot-alleyway to the top of a one story annex crawled along a twelve foot picket fence, flung himself to the street and escaped in a taxicab.

The prisoner, John G. Pollatos, wanted for more than a year for a series of "acrobatic burglaries," had been captured a few hours earlier by eight policemen and two detectives after a midnight chase over the back fences of the West Side.

At the hospital he was watched by a policeman until the entrance of an intoxicated negress created a disturbance which the policeman was called upon to quell. Five minutes later Pollatos was seen clinging to the fence, and by the time the police man had reached the street, the "acrobatic burglar" had limped his way to a taxicab.

BOSTON TRIBUTE TO JOHN R. BRADEN

Frank G. Trott in the Boston Globe bids farewell to John R. Braden as follows:

John R. Braden 2.02½ is through racing. The remarkable little pacer, with money in the bank to insure a comfortable home as long as he lives, has been touched by Father Time. While still a drawing card in the potato country, his owners do not wish to see him race behind as he has in his few starts this season.

The son of John R. Gentry has been a profitable investment for the Presque Isle syndicate known as the Mooseluck Club. For the other "Down East" communities, John Wilard's pupil has been most expensive. Never has there been a free-for-all pacer more truly accomplishing the purpose sought than has Braden. He was bought by the Presque Isle sportsmen to win over home tracks and for several years he did so, despite the fact that in the desire to secure a horse to defeat him Aroostook County men paid fancy pacers for fast record pacers, yet they never could, except on rare occasions, handle him. He was made to order for what was wanted and in addition fell into a master's hands.

Aroostook County will have faster pacers than John R. Braden but never will there be his equal for season after season racing against all comers.

A little cool weather scattered in with the rest in August helps the fur sales.

As a class it's the porters who always came to grips.

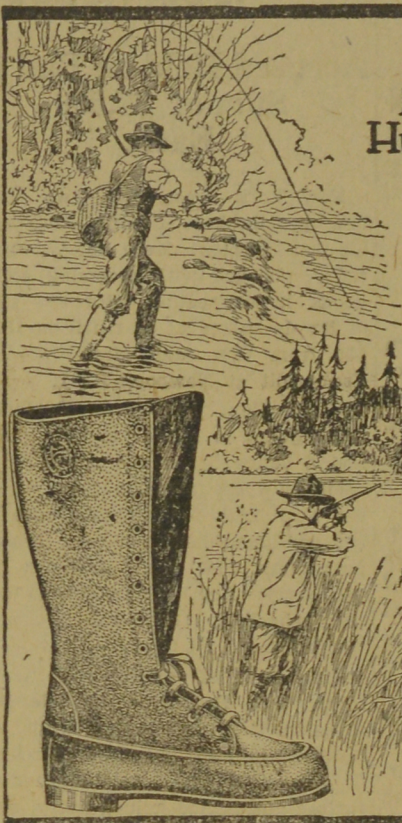

A limited intelligence is one that fails to get our own point of view.
