PARIS HAS CHANGED ANTIQUE DRESS; CITY IS BECOMING MODERN AND CENTRE SHIFTING

Paris, July 2—Like all great world cities in this age, Paris is changing rapidly. Old buildings are coming down and new ones going up, new streets are being cut through, and the commercial center of the city is definitely shifting westward.

This latter movement is one of the first changes to impress the visitor who has permitted several years to go by without returning to the city by the Seine. Before the war most of the fashionable restaurants and other establishments catering to the world of society lay east of the Madeleine Church along the grand boulevards—now they are centering in the district west of Place de la Concorde, which lies just south of the Madeleine.

Real estate men predict that the future commercial center of the city will be the Etoile, with the Arc de Triomphe towering in its midst. For proof they point to the Champs-Elysees. This magnificent avenue which Baron Haussmann created for Napoleon III is now almost solidly business, whereas not so many years ago there was not a single shop along its tree-shaded length.

Business Creeps in.

Many of the great dressmakers now have their establishments there, along with scores of fashionable hotels and restaurants, automobile show rooms, theaters and luxury shops. The avenue has gone over to business completely and there are many indications that it will be Paris' future Main Street.

LeFigaro, one of the best-known Paris newspapers, which formerly had offices in Rue Drouot, is now installed near the Rond-Point, which is about half way up the avenue. The Folies-Bergere, famous revue theatre, is moving from Rue Richer near the old upper boulevard theatrical section to Avenue Wagram, which radiates from the Etoile. The new theatre will be almost in the shadow of the Arc de Triomphe. There is great real estate and building activity throughout the Etoile quarter.

The movement to the Etoile is expected to be accelerated by the opening of Boulevard Haussmann through into Boulevard des Italiens. This will give a broad direct route, from the boulevards to the Etoile avoiding the congestion at the Opera and the Madeleine. The obstructing buildings have all been removed and the pavement laid, but the construction of subway stations is delaying the opening of the new thoroughfare.

Home of Americans.

The Etoile district is the home of the fashionable American colony. Students, artists, and less wealthy expatriates live across the Seine in the Latin Quarter. This district is also on the move, which is nothing new, however, as all during the centuries of its history it has displayed almost as much temperament in its expansions and migrations as its artistic denizens.

Originally the Latin Quarter lay along the left bank of the Seine opposite Ile de la Cite and Notre Dame, and extending back along Rue Saint-Jacques and Boulevard Saint-Michael. It wandered back up the hill when the Sorbonne moved during the Middle Ages, and the bulk of its picturesque population followed.

It was centered around the Sorbonne, along the Boul' Mich, as Boulevard Saint-Michel came to be known, when Du Maurier wrote the novel Trilby, which gave members of the English-reading public their most permanent impressions of Latin Quarter life. Ever since the appearance of the novel visitors have been coming to Paris to look for the garrets and the artists in velvet coats, Windsor ties and broad-brimmed black felt hats. Unhappily for the tourists few of these picturesque characters survive. The modern artist is scarcely to be distinguished in appearance from a bond salesman or lawyer, although some still affect the old costume.

With all the changes, Paris has not seemed to be affected much in appearance or spirit. The old districts along the Seine which give the city much of its atmosphere are not greatly changed from what they were centuries ago. None of the old monuments have been touched or will be touched because the government is taking pains to protect them. The spacious gardens with their fountains, sculpture, and luxuriant flower-beds, breaking up the masses of the city and opening green-walled vistas, have not been sacrificed. The zoning law restricts all building to six and seven stories, and most of the new structures follow the exterior designs of their neighbors. Paris is still Paris.

ROBERT FORKE PROMISED TO COOPERATE WITH GOVERNMENT

Ottawa, July 2—In all the strange history of this week at Ottawa, the strangest fact is yet to be told.

Robert Forke, then Progressive leader, with the authorization of his caucus, assured His Excellency the Governor-General in writing last Monday that his group would co-operate with the new Meighen Government to the extent necessary to pass the legislation already concluded, vote supply, and in general give effect to the non-contentious legislation of the session. Conservatives now charge.

After giving this assurance, fourteen Progressives—all but three of those who were in the House—voted against the Government Thursday night on a want of confidence motion.

How They Voted.

The fourteen were: Miss MacPhail, Messrs. Forke, Coote, Brown, Garland, Gardiner, Beaubien, Steedsman and Miller. Those who voted with the Government were: Messrs. Lucas, Boutilier and Fansher.

Mr. Bird was paired with Mr. Kennedy, Peace River, and explained that he had broken his pair inadvertently. Mr. Kennedy was ill. The other Progressives were on their way west.

The legislation killed by this action of the Progressives included the vote for the Hudson Bay Railway, the Rural Credits Bill and the Campbell Grain Act amendment.

What happened was this: When His Excellency sent for Mr. Meighen, last Monday, he asked the Conservative leader if he commanded a majority in the House to get the work of the session concluded in an orderly manner. Mr. Meighen replied that he could, having received informal promises from a number of the Progressives to the effect that they would vote with the Conservatives to get the all-important bills through, pass supply and privilege.

Forke Summoned.

His Excellency, to make sure, summoned Mr. Forke, the Progressive leader who consulted with his group in caucus and took with him to Government House an agreement in three clauses to see the new government through the remaining work of the session. On this assurance Lord Byng invited Mr. Meighen to take control without a dissolution and save the work of the session.

The memorandum was as follows: "Memo. for Mr. Forke from Progressive group before he visited the Governor-General:

"Tuesday, 29th June, 1926.

"Motion agreed to by Progressive group:

"That we are in agreement of the necessity of continuing the investigation into the Customs and Excise Department by a judicial commission.

"We believe it advisable that no dissolution should take place until the judicial commission has finished its investigation into the Customs and Excise Department, and that Parliament be summoned to deal with the report."

Stuffed Tomato Salad.

Remove skins from tomatoes. Scoop out pulp and sprinkle inside with salt. Allow to chill and drain. Dice 1 cucumber and 1 Bermuda onion and 1 hard boiled egg. Mix with mayonnaise and chill. When ready to serve place tomato on crisp green lettuce leaf or a bed of cress; fill with salad mixture and garnish top with egg yolk rubbed through strainer.

DADS VOTE 'NO'

Berlin, July 3—Bad little Prussians—both boys and girls—will continue to be whipped in school. The Diet defeated a Socialist motion for abolition of corporal punishment.

German air services have been conducting successful experiments in regular night flights between Berlin and Stockholm and Berlin and Copenhagen.

WEDDING BELLS AT DUMFRIES

Nuptials of Mr. Kenneth
C. Anderson and Miss
E. Kathleen Scott.

Dumfries, N. B., June 30—A very pretty wedding took place at 3.30 on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Scott when their daughter Emily Kathleen was united in marriage to Mr. Kenneth Caverhill Anderson son of Mr. and Mrs. John Anderson of the Barony, N. B.

The bride was attractively attired in a pretty gown of white canton crepe and carried a bouquet of white carnations. She was attended by Miss Mildred Anderson, sister of the groom, who wore a becoming dress of green georgette and carried a bouquet of pink carnations, Mr. John Scott, brother of the bride, supported the groom.

The ceremony which was performed by Rev. W. A. Patterson, took place on the verandah under an arch of roses and ferns in the presence of over a hundred united guests. Miss Gertrude McMullin played the wedding march. During the signing of the register Mrs. W. A. Patterson sang The Voice that Breathed o'er Eden.

A delicious supper was served by friends of the bride in the dining room which was prettily decorated in pink and white. The bride was the recipient of many lovely gifts including cheques, silver and furniture. The grooms gift to the bride was a cheque to the bridesmaid a signet ring, to the organist a bar pin and to the best man cuff links. The happy couple left by automobile for a honeymoon trip to Nova Scotia on going away the bride wore a navy blue suit with hat to match. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will reside at The Barony.

LIP READING TOURNAMENT HELD BY DEAF

(By Science Service.)

Philadelphia, July 4—Individuals who are deaf, but who are experts at "hearing" conversation by skillfully reading the lip movements of a speaker competed in a national lip reading tournament here 1st Wednesday. The tournament was a feature of the annual meeting of the American Federation of Organizations for the Hard of Hearing.

All over the country, organizations for the hard hearing had been holding preliminary lip reading contests to select their local champion to send to the tournament. At least twenty of these local experts competed for the national championship and for the silver cup which goes to the organization represented by the winner.

The convention devoted one entire session to the problem of deafness in school children. A group of specialists which has been making a survey of mechanical aids to hearing will present its preliminary report at the session next Thursday.
