DISCIPLINE.

A herd of wild cattle ranges over the hills; a bull is at the head of them. It is Nature's way.

It may not be the right way. It may be that females are in many particulars superior and should dominate the herd, the flock or the pair. But it is the way Nature has matters arranged, and there doesn't appear to be anything one can do about it. Leadership is a job wished upon the male.

You, perhaps, can remember when you were a boy full of rebellious ideas. When you failed to function is accord with the scheme of ethics provided for the household you did not fear your mother's wrath. Her punishments were light. But your day turned dark when she made no effort to punish you and threatened to tell your father when he came home. A great man, your father! He was boss in his own household, and his heavy hand encouraged you in ways of virtue.

A similar condition obtained at school. You did not fear the young woman who, taught the fifth grade. She was a mere female. Her punishments were amusing. But you refrained from evil, if in fact you refrained at all, because she might at any time call in the principal, who was a male and greatly dreaded by those who were not pure in heart.

So many people wonder why children aren't like they used to be! They differ simply because no potter, whatever his skill, can exactly duplicate the work of another potter.

Mother is bossing now. She can't handle the clay as your dad once did. It just can't be done.

The children may have much to learn, but you can't fool them in this matter. They know who is boss, and they do not fear her. Nor would they tremble if she should threaten to sic dad on them. Who fears a worm? The job of bossing is hers—presented to her on a silver platter by made Americans eager to be chivalrous—and she simply can't handle it. That's all. It takes a regular male to awe the kids.

THE LEGISLATURE.

As is always the case when a new administration takes control of affairs unusual interest attached to the opening of the Legislative Assembly on Thursday of this week. Of the forty-seven members who will take oath of office, twenty-eight are new to political life, sixteen were members of the last House, two held seats for some years prior to the general election of 1920, and another, Hon. Mr. Baxter, elected in that year, resigned soon afterwards to enter the Federal cabinet. Every opposition member, who sat in the last House and appealed for re-election was returned. There have been two deaths since the election of August 12th., Mr. Flewelling, returned for St. Stephen-Milltown, and Mr. Potts, who was returned as the colleague of the Premier in St. John County. Of the thirty odd members who sat on the government side in the last House, only seven will be in the present House, and of those three were members of the old Government.

Probably the best known international figure in poultry husbandry is Mr. Edward Brown, F. L. S., of London, England. He is known to every European poultry enthusiast and is no stranger on this side of the Atlantic. Mr. Brown is President of the International Association of Poultry Breeders and Investigators in Poultry Husbandry, and will be President of the World's Poultry Congress in 1927. In the summer of 1925 Mr. Brown visited Canada and assisted in preliminary organization, and it is anticipated that he will be able to visit Canada again next May, when he will address as many of the Provincial Congress Committees as time will permit.

Shaffer Matthews, dean of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, and a man who thinks straight through things, has some opinions about over-zealous reformers. Hear him in an address at the Yale club in New York. He says that no one is more dangerous to society than an unemployed reformer who has time to meddle in the affairs of others. Dr. Matthews says he is suspicious of prophets "who usually degenerate into scolds and become unable to tell the truth."

The Saint John Globe in noting the fact that the Fraser Companies, Limited, earned a profit of over a million dollars last year, says it is an illuminating commentary on the action of the provincial government in reducing stumpage fees which their predecessors had declined to do. As a matter of fact the old government did reduce the rate of stumpage and another fact to be considered is that the business of the Fraser Companies is not confined to the Province of New Brunswick.

The doctor who named "pouting" as one of the causes of breakdown in health knew his psychology. We expect sick people to be disgruntled. Disgruntled people may expect to be sick. The inability, because of a certain "littleness" of the spirit, to check off and forget the petty irritations of everyday life causes more bad health than all the so-called over-work that many of us think we suffer from.

Smugglers, suggests The Vancouver Province, must be strongly in favor of maintaining undefended the three thousand miles of international border over which after-dinner speakers proclaim "not a shot has been fired for one hundred years."

Jane Addams says that women should vote in such a way as to be the balance of power in politics. But sitting on the fence never got anyone very far.

A wife charges that her husband's real estate business was dissipated in gambling joints. Gambling joints certainly are places where one can lose lots.

A man in Indiana has been buried in an electrically lighted tomb with a telephone beside him. A modern version of the King Tut fashion.

Indiana burglars who attempted to steal a bathtub were probably not inspired by the conviction that cleanliness is next to godliness.

"According to statistics, the average term of marriages in Leningrad is four years"—item. What does a couple do then—run for re-election?

The average marriage in Russia now lasts about four years, which is probably as long as the Soviet wants it to.

A Georgia court has decided that a man is not bound to follow his wife's advice when he is driving a family car. Not legally, perhaps.

Late Wall Street news suggests that the fellow who buys in anticipation of the market going up doesn't always gain his point.

In case the meek inherit the earth according to Scriptural prophecy, where does Mr. Mussolini go from here?

The potato and the lump of anthracite can not pass each other going into the basement without smiling.

The rich don't all go South for the winter. There are the coal dealers.

FOUR DEATHS FROM GAS POISONING

Jersey City, N. J., March 8—Four persons a mother, her father-in-law and her two daughters, today were found dead of gas poisoning in their home at Van Wart Place.

The bodies were discovered by James Martin, the husband, who broke a window to enter his home. Police believe the deaths were accidental.

The dead are: Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, 39; Philip Wolf, 67; Mary Martin, 7, and Frances 5.

A gas tube on the kitchen stove was disconnected.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Spring hasn't parked her galoshes in the attic yet.

"I'll be there in a minute" means sixty seconds-plus.

Have you noticed how early the sun is getting up? Perhaps not.

Everybody knows just what Mr. Robin when he comes is going to sing.

John Philip Sousa says music is responsible for the dress of today. Well, they do dress to beat the band.

It is probably true that there are worse afflictions than poverty. Riches may be one of them for all we know.

Down goes the stock market, once more substantiating the axiom of gravitation, that what goes up must come down.

Nothing is accomplished by making sarcastic references to the weather. Let us keep our hearts clean, that we may glorify every stream of sunshine that pours down upon us.

"Sometimes I wonder," remarked the Man on the Car, "whether the fellow who is forever trying, always in the wrong way, to reform somebody doesn't have moments when he feels like doing something devilish himself."

MARVELLOUS GOWNS WORN IN THUMBS UP

All the ladies who have attended the performance of "Thumbs Up" by the Originals right across Canada this year are raving about Gene Pearson's marvellous make up and manners as the "Prima Donna Soprano" of the show. Strange to say, it is not only his remarkable voice that excites all their attention and admiration but his wonderful girlish appearance. "I think he has the most beautiful hands—and he uses them so gracefully!" exclaimed a woman in the audience in Montreal. "He, I don't believe that's a man!" growled her escort. "And the way 'She' manages her train. Say, if I was as pretty as that I'd go into the movies," gasped a flapper at Toronto a few weeks ago. "Well, that other 'Girl' is no slouch either!" responded her friend in appreciation of Stuart Callaghan, the "premiere danseuse" of the company. Anyway it requires histrionic ability as well as a soprano voice for a man to properly impersonate a refined and lovely woman with the grace and charm Gene manages the impersonation. It has been interesting to watch him develop his characterization during these three or four seasons he has been with the Originals. But, then, progress is the middle name of any and all members of this energetic and gifted group of entertainers, as witness every one in the present sparkling revue, and the cleverness and originality of it all. The Originals open at the Capitol tonight at 8.15 for two nights. You are advised to be early.

TO PROBE THE COST OF MILK

Washington, March 8—A session of the United States tariff commission, to take up questions investigating the cost of producing milk, cream and buttermilk in this and other countries was called today for March 25, following in the wake of the 50 percent increase recently made in the butter tariff.

Interests here viewed the coming hearing on cream and buttermilk as possibly heralding an increase in these dairy products.

Syracuse, N. Y., March 8—With three persons dead from respiratory disease and several thousand ill at their homes, Syracuse is bordering on an epidemic of influenza similar to that which swept the city in 1918.

Public schools in Solway and East Wood, suburbs, have been ordered closed. All hospitals in the city are crowded and the illness has greatly depleted the employed force of the business establishments of the city.
