SAVE THE FORESTS.

The week beginning April 17th and ending on April 24th, has been specially set apart as "Save the Forests Week," for Canada. The forests are certainly a great asset to the Dominion and it is of the utmost importance, that they be carefully protected, so that they may continue to furnish a livelihood for a large element of the population, continue to furnish a large portion of the revenue for every provincial government as well as for the Federal administration, and their products continue to occupy a foremost place in the domestic and foreign commerce of the Dominion. Much has been done in late years by both the provincial and federal authorities towards awakening public sentiment to the great importance of forest conservation, but more remains to be done. Forest fires are still too common in this country and the annual losses and waste from this cause are far greater than they should be. There is still a great deal of work to be done and it is work in which every man, woman and child can participate.

The efforts which have been put forward to interest the Boy Scouts of Canada and the United States in forest protection are most commendable and should be continued. Not long ago a troop of Boy Scouts of Long Island, N. Y., met and passed the following resolution:

"Whereas, God gave us trees as assurance of awakening life in the spring-time for comforting shade in the summer, for beauty in the fall, for warmth in winter's chill, for shelter from the inclemency of weather, for ordinary necessities of life, for more than we can now or ever hope to account for, and;

"Whereas we feel that all of this has been placed in our hands in trust—to love, to guard, to conserve; therefore be it

"Resolved, that we members of Troop—of Queen's Council, Boy Scouts of America, pledge ourselves not to use our axes on living trees while on hikes, either individually or collectively; that we will extinguish in approved scout manner, our fires before leaving them; and we will constitute ourselves protectors and conservators of this form of life and use our influence in having all others do likewise."

It is certainly the duty of all to constitute themselves protectors of the forests of the country and heartily co-operate with the federal and provincial authorities in the carrying on of this great work.

UNHEEDING CHANGE.

In hearing held by the elders of a church in Indiana, roller skating came in for examination as "an appearance of evil." The modern dress of women was enthusiastically condemned. Basketball received a reluctant approval, the judges urging that the costumes worn by the players be made to conform "to decency and modest apparel."

A great many efforts at reform appear to be efforts merely to throw up breastworks against change. They are often absurd. But more frequently they are pathetic. They are the acts of men and women who are not so much scandalized by the ways of the young as they are bewildered by them. And the world marches over them as remorselessly as the cart wheel over the little mounds that ants have raised in the road.

It was once said of the Medes and Persians that their laws change not, meaning their customs. But it was not true. It has never been true of any people. Particularly today, custom changes while we have our eyes upon it, and no power is able to halt the process.

An expert dog man said: "Swing a fine dog around by the tail. The creature is in great pain but no sound escapes him. It ain't in 'em to complain. Same way when a stable burns. It ain't the best horses that scream. It's the nags." That, somebody has said, is the definition of a thoroughbred. A thoroughbred performs at top capacity and keeps his troubles to himself.

At a certain age people begin to worry about their "destiny" in the world. That is a special complaint of young people about to be graduated from school or college. Napoleon answered the query a long time ago when he said that character is destiny. Few of us are "destined" to do things. The big things are done by people who prepare themselves for the doing.

An English evangelist appeared before his audience with his chest and arms bare and his trousers tucked up to his knees. He said he wanted to show flappers how they looked. Too many people, when they are tragically in earnest, only succeed in making themselves ridiculous.

A watchdog in Irvington, N. Y., slept while burglars dropped a 300-pound safe from a second-story window to the sidewalk. Of course nothing embarrasses a busy burglar like having an effusive watchdog jump up and lap his hands.

In answer to an inquiry in Parliament last week Premier King stated that Mr. R. L. Calder, K. C., employed as counsel at the customs investigation, was being paid $200 a day for his services plus $15 a day for expenses.

Further examination of the new bridge rules fails to reveal a penalty of any kind for the hostess who puts up incense burners and bath salts as prizes.

A doctor publishes a press article on silicosis, a disease due to breathing sand dust and not, as one would naturally suppose, to uncontrollable laughter.

As a general rule a "consent decree" in an anti-trust case signifies the defendant will have to figure out some other way to put the thing across.

Something else that is being produced in vast quantities in this country on account of prohibition is statistics.

While it is claimed that Noah had alcoholic beverages of various kinds aboard the Ark, his animals were not imaginary.

The Arctic tourist business will nevertheless lag a trifle until some one dispels the popular impression that itchy woolen underwear must be worn.

Jazz: A form of music, the underlying principle of which seems to be that any six or eight notes make a chord.

About this time of year a coon-skin coat on a college boy gets to look as if it were ready to revert to its wild state.

A new song is entitled "What Can I Say After I Say That I'm Sorry?" One would naturally suppose that completed the conversation.

Musolini's nose isn't the first one to suffer for trying to run other people's affairs.

Very few successful men remember all the accidents that made them what they are.

There was less talk of the high cost of living when affixing a patch was a fine art.

Yet people might prefer homes to cars if they could strut down town in them.

The grouch doesn't really suffer. He enjoys being wretched.

No harm in being kind to animals every week.

SPECIAL ATTRACTION AT GAIETY THEATRE

Once in a while comes along a movie about which we can say that it is lively and original and the whole family, old folks and young folks, can go to see it and have a good time.

Mike playing at the Gaiety, Monday and Tuesday is such a movie. Sally O'Neill plays Mike the daughter of a railroad man who does a little rail-roading herself.

Away out on the Arizona desert they are running their little shack of a railroad station when along comes a boy who used to be a telegraph operator but he want to sleep on duty, having been on duty sixty hours, and there was a head-on collision and many lives lost, and he went to prison for criminal negligence.

Another of the more remarkable achievements of American industry in recent years has been the production of "invisible hosiery" in 18 different shades.

After a long and arduous courtship, preparation for the wedding, showers and entertainments, it is surprising that the bride can stand alone though the ceremony.

When a prominent young man is picked up in a dazed condition in the street and taken to the police station and the paper says he was suffering from amnesia the neighbor women say: Humph!—Ohio State Journal.—"Humph!" is adequate.
