BRITAIN HOPES TO WEAR THE CROWN OF KING COTTON; WILL OPEN BIG TRACT IN SUDAN

London, Nov. 10—Great Britain's bid for control of the world's cotton supply may be regarded as carried a stage further with this week's appointment of Sir John Maffey, formerly chief commissioner of the Indian northwest frontier province, to succeed Sir Geoffrey Archer as Governor General of the so-called Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. The appointment of the new British administrator for a territory as large as the whole of western Europe, which this country virtually annexed as a sequel to the assassination of Sirdar Sir Lee Stack in Cairo two years ago, and which Great Britain plans to develop into one of the greatest cotton producing areas in the world, coincides with the injection of a new economic factor into the still unsettled political relations between England and Egypt.

Egypt on Verge of Crisis.

The later country is on the verge of a serious economic crisis due to the slump in the cotton market and, following the example of the United States, has now decided to restrict the output. The Egyptian government has drafted a decree limiting acreage under cotton to two-thirds of the present area. It is proposed that this decree which is still to be submitted to Parliament, should be operative for three years. The proposed three years restriction of the Egyptian cotton output as a result of the backwash of the market depression coincides with the imminent development of a new source of cotton supply which must inevitably react on price levels the world wide.

This is the Gezireh area in the Sudan, where a large acreage of first-class cotton land will soon be irrigated as a sequel to the completion last spring of the great Makwar of Sennar dam on the Blue Nile, which is the largest in the world. Ultimately this arid and empty district of the Sudan, some 6,000,000 acres in area, will be reclaimed by a barrage from a desert and transformed into one of the richest cotton-growing regions in the world. Plans so far call for immediate irrigation of only 300,000 acres, which are estimated to produce 400,000,000 pounds of cotton yearly.

Restriction May Be Temporary.

Whether this restriction will be maintained under the new circumstances, however, remains to be seen. It was originally accepted by the British government as a concession to the Egyptian government, which feared that the development of the Gezireh area in the Sudan would divert the flood water supply, whereby the whole Nile Valley lives, from the irrigated areas in upper and lower Egypt. During the political crisis following the assassination of the Sirdar the British government canceled the existing contract with Egypt for the allocation of the water supply and announced that the area to be irrigated in the Gezireh district would be increased "to an unlimited extent as needs may arise."

This threat was withdrawn, however, after it had played its part in ironing out the crisis. This country, however, took advantage of the crisis to expel all the Egyptian civil and military elements from the Sudan, which was, and nominally still is, administered under Anglo-Egyptian "condominium."

While Egypt still maintains a claim to sovereignty in the Sudan—this great stumbling block in the way of settlement was informally discussed during Premier Sarwat Pasha's recent visit to London, but without the least advance being registered—England has been creating a fait accompli of wholly British administration in this vast and still scarcely tapped territory.

DAN CUPID IS THE BEST AUTO SELLER

Chicago, Nov. 6—The world's greatest automobile salesman is the ruddy faced little cherub who is always running around with a piercing arrow in search of a man and a maid who want to go places—young Dan Cupid himself.

The god of love got his master salesman's certificate at the joint conference on education and industry last week at the University of Chicago, from Edwin S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Co., who is widely known as an analyst of trade conditions in the automotive field.

"If you think that love has nothing to do with automobile sales," Jordan said, "why is it that our production always reaches its highest peak in June?"

Toronto, Nov. 8—"Are you in favor of a peaceful withdrawal from the service if you are not conceded the same rates of pay as have already been granted these classes on the railways of the United States?"

This is the question put to 15,000 conductors and trainmen on the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways as a result of meetings of local and general chairman of the Brotherhood of Railroad Carmen and trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors held in Montreal and in Winnipeg at the latter end of last week. While the ballot does not say so, it is a strike vote, the taking of which over the two systems began yesterday.

The Universal Remedy for every pain

FROZEN APPLES.

Leaves drift in fitful gusts down orchard lanes
And bared boughs topped with frost above the cover
Sway with last flocks of blackbirds going over
And only in the matted grass remains
Last splendor of the autumn—To the strains
Of what mad serenade, the elfin rover
Who flushed the leaves like a departing lover,
Kissed last these apples crimson still through rains?

Rains cannot wash the flush away; in snow
The deepened rose of these smooth cheeks shall meet
The flush of dawn but who comes here must know
That frozen apples are too cold to eat
O safer Eden, saved against desire
We turn from you to eat beside the fire!
