LORD BEAVERBROOK ON VISIT TO ST. JOHN; PLEASED OVER POWER DEVELOPMENT AT GRAND FALLS

St. John, Aug. 17—Lord Beaverbrook of England, formerly Max Aitken of New Brunswick, at one time law student in Saint John, there after engaged in Montreal stock selling circles and latterly in the financial and journalistic world of London, arrived in port aboard the ocean going power yacht "Miramichi" Captain J. Haurksen, early yesterday, accompanied by his two sons, his secretary, S. W. Alexander and a few personal friends. The sons are Masters Max and Peter Aitken aged 14 and 16 respectively, students in the Westminster school, London. Father and sons will greet Lady Beaverbrook upon her arrival in this city today, via Quebec. Her Ladyship will be accompanied by the eldest of the children, Janet. Together the family will make a brief tour of places in the Maritime Provinces.

Talked About Saint John.

As he sat under the canopy on the cabin deck of the big yacht, the former Max Aitken visualized the familiar scenes of Saint John as he remembered them so clearly during his residence here as a law student. He plied the reporter with question after question and seemed a tingle with anticipation at getting ashore and rambling through familiar streets again. It seemed to please him to hear of changes that had been wrought in the upbuilding of the city—the trend of tourist travel, Maritime wards, the linking of Saint John with chain stores, chain theatres, and chair hotels, etc. He felt sure, while the city in the main might be familiar to him, in detail it would appear much modernized and typical of the newer Canadian citizenry.

Sentimental Touch.

Reverting to the unveiling of the Bonar Law cairn at the late British Premier's birthplace, Rexton, N. B. last summer, Lord Beaverbrook spoke feelingly. He mentioned Richard Law, son the British statesman and stated that his sister, who was recently married to an American naval officer, would be visiting in this province very shortly and would doubtless come to Saint John. His Lordship appeared to enjoy the thought that these personal links of Empire, brought New Brunswick, his own province, so prominently to the fore, although he did not express it in just those words.

Delighted to be Here.

Lord Beaverbrook's face was wreathed in smiles when he greeted the Telegraph-Journal reporter aboard the palatial yacht swinging at anchor in the stream. He said it was a delightful sensation to wake up in the familiar old town on so charming a summer morning and once again meet townsfolk. He had been down at St. Andrews for nearly a week having journeyed thence along the American coast from New York where he boarded his yacht. This yacht, by the way explained His Lordship, is the famous craft owned by the late millionaire news service proprietor, Scripps, who journeyed twice around the globe in it and finally died aboard last March, in West African waters. It is a Diesel-engined boat of 500 tons, burns oil is without boilers and carries a crew of 29 men. The officers are English, the crew American. While on the subject of the rather notable yacht, Lord Beaverbrook related that the late Mr. Scripps, its former owner, demanded perfect silence aboard. Orders were given in whispers, no noisy work was permitted, walls were padded and even the washing of decks was demanded in noiseless fashion.

Spoke of Grand Falls.

The former New Brunswicker seemed eager for home gossip. His many-sided interests as a newspaper proprietor in England, in the world of finance generally, politically, and his association with the industrial developments on both sides of the water, prompted him to ply the reporter with many questions. It pleased him greatly, he said, to learn New Brunswick had taken such a long step forward in the proposed development of Grand Falls for industrial purposes. He asked questions as to the availability of the power once it was generated and seemed anxious to be assured that it would be purchasable by the industries in general. His Lordship remarked surely the harnessing of Grand Falls would be a tremendous uplift to the province of New Brunswick and the North Shore section and upper parts of the province should feel the stimulus most markedly.

Heartening Prospect.

New Brunswick was undoubtedly rich in natural resources, the chief of them being forest land products for the manufacture of pulp and paper. The enormous demand for paper was of course the ultimate reason for encroachment upon standing forests. New Brunswick was now coming into its own. Not only were newspapers growing in size but magazine publication in all its branches was forging ahead by leaps and bounds, and new uses for all qualities of paper demanded the utilization of the forest in enormously increasing quantity year by year. The map of New Brunswick was almost three-quarters crown land, a heartening prospect in view of the vast initial waterpowers with which to energize paper mills and kindred manufactories.

THE KITCHENER COFFIN PROVED TO BE EMPTY

The British Public Made the Victim of an Unpleasant Hoax.

London, Aug. 16—The British nation today found itself the victim of a hoax of a particularly unpleasant character, when the investigation of the Home Office revealed today that the coffin brought from Norway to the accompaniment of much newspaper publicity and purporting to contain the body of the late British Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, was empty.

Frank Power, a British newspaper man, was responsible for the story that he had found Kitchener's body in Norway, which he brought to London and delivered at the Waterloo station.

Officials Present.

Officials from the Home Office and Coroner Oddie were present when the great secrecy, and shortly afterwards the Home Office issued the following statement:

"The packing case, alleged to contain a coffin and human body, which on Saturday night was removed by the police from an undertaker's on Waterloo Road, to the Lambeth Coroner's Court, was this morning opened in the presence of Coroner Ingleby Oddie and Sir Bernard Spilsbury (noted pathologist). The packing case was found to contain an empty coffin. The coffin was new and obviously had not contained a human body."

Myth Exploded.

The government recently made public a detailed statement which had convinced a majority of the people of the groundlessness of many of the published Kitchener myths. But such myths die hard, and many persons still entertain doubts respecting the fact of the national hero. These doubts, should finally be set at rest after today's revelations.

In the meantime the police are looking for Frank Power, originator of the hoax, who seems, for the time being at any rate, to have disappeared. Power's real name is declared to be Arthur Vectis Freeman, and he is said to have been a student of criminology. He has already admitted, in his last press statement made yesterday that although he began in a bonafide spirit his investigation into the sinking of the H. M. S. Hampshire, on which

SAYS OLD AGE PENSION BILL WAS A SHAM

New Westminster, B. C., Aug. 16—"That kind of politics is beneath contempt. It is despicable to the last degree." Premier Meighen in such words here this afternoon referred once again to "rumors" that he proposed to amalgamate the Canadian National with the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The same rumor, Mr. Meighen said, had been spread in the last election and was successful in stealing the votes of many thousands and determining the result in some doubtful countries.

"The fabrication has been revamped in this campaign," Mr. Meighen went on, "and the man who has introduced it is no other than the leader of the opposition Mr. MacKenzie King. I don't need to say more. My pledge cannot be more specific. We have no thought of it. We never had. It is a fabrication from the first word to the last."

Premier Meighen spoke of old age pensions. He declared that the old age pensions bill of the King government was a sham from the first word to the last, as had been 80 per cent of all legislation put in the statute books by that government.

It had sham written right across in red ink, Mr. Meighen added. The senate said it was a sham and defeated it. He never had much confidence in it, Mr. Meighen proceeded but he did not oppose, knowing that if he did so he would be held up as opposed to old age pensions.

"I never interfered with senators in discharge of their duties," Mr. Meighen proceeded. "I would rather they had passed the bill so the people would know what a sham it was; indeed some of the Liberal senators walked out to make sure the bill would be defeated."

Mr. A. D. Ganong of St. Stephen is a guest at the Queen.

Kitchener was voyaging when he perished, he had later accepted an offer from a moving picture promoter, with a view to recouping himself for the heavy expenses of his investigation. What view the authorities will take of the affair is not known, but Power's strange activities are the subject of general denunciation by the newspapers.

Not in many a year has England been so shocked and distressed, for the memory of the great soldier is held sacred in every household in the land. Even while the coffin was resting in the mortuary, surrounded by sacred emblems and treated with all respect, some of the newspapers attacked Power's action.
