POPULAR POLKA DOTS.

This season witnesses one of the most marked revivals of polka dots that have occurred in the past decade. Not only are they of distinct importance in feminine fashions but emphasis is laid upon their vogue in scarfs and ties for men.

In large or small designs in conventional motifs or in scattered effects the polka dot may with truth be said to dominate the fashions of the moment. One sees it featured in linens for sports frocks in silks for tailored dresses and ensembles and in chiffon for formal afternoon models. Ensembles, which exploit a frock of polka-dotted crepe matched by the coat lining of similar material are among the most successful costumes launched this season.

In combination with plain materials polka dots are charming and few frocks are smarter or possess greater distinction than navy blue crepe de chine for the dress white white crepe de chine with large blue dots forms the tie and apron panel.

HATS IMPORTANT.

There are tailored hats and street hats, sports hats and dress hats, afternoon hats and evening hats—all lovely for the purpose for which they are intended. In buying a hat one must not only consider the hat itself, but the clothes it is going to accompany. And this consideration includes the shape, size and color.

The value of the hat is not realized and it really is one of the most important articles of apparel. Too often this mysterious bit of head covering is either vastly unbecoming or very inappropriate, or both. The reasons for these errors are usually unknown to the wearer. There is a particular type of hat to suit each personality—certain curves, lines and widths which are becoming to one person and do not look well on another.

Biscuit-Rich Macaroon Mousse.

3 egg whites
1-2 cup powdered sugar
3 egg yolks
8 dry macaroons
2 cups whipping cream
1-2 teaspoon vanilla

Roll the macaroons fine. Beat the egg whites until stiff, fold in the sugar slowly, the well beaten yolks the macaroon crumbs and lastly the stiffly beaten cream and the vanilla. Pack in three parts ice to one of salt and let stand three hours.

FROZEN PUDDING.

1 quart vanilla ice cream (frozen in vacuum and consistency of thick cream)
1 cup orange juice
1-3 cup sugar
1 cup seeded raisins, chopped
1-2 cup sliced maraschino cherries
1-2 pineapple, cut into very small cubes
Make a syrup of the orange juice and sugar and pour over the raisins let stand an hour or more before using, then drain. When the ice cream is ready fold in remaining ingredients and continue freezing without string, to solidify.

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM.

1 pint milk
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons water
1 cup sugar
2 egg yolks
1 cup heavy cream
1-2 cups crushed strawberries
Make a custard of milk, flour, water and sugar. When it has

CAFE DE LA PAIX.

Garson, gimme a beer
How long you been here?
I saw the darlinest coat!
We came on an awful boat
What's the franc today
Donnez-moi deux croissants et un cafe au lait.

Gosh, look at that taxicab go!
Beige with an orange bow
I just adore museums
Looks like delirium tremens
Notre Dame is certainly swell
Here's the dirt but don't you tell.

Garson, where's that whisky?
Yes, I know it's risky.
The food is only fair
Chez vous a cinq heures
Did you get any mail?
When do you sail?

I saw the Folies Bergere
Believe me them girls was bare.
There's a bird from home.
Bunch of nuts at the Dome.
Going to stay long?

No, girlie, my wife's along.
Garson, encore a beer,
Such prices, my dear.
My wife does the art.

I saw that girl in Montmartre.
Two weeks and nothing but rain
On the other side of the Seine.
Two cognacs and a port.

My, but they're wearing them short.

Guide, mister, want a guide?
Thanks for the buggy ride.

I just know she's dyed her hair.
Tres jolie et ce neest pas cher
No, I ain't been to the Louvre.
Mama, get a move
We'll probably go and stay a week.

Ah, mademoisette, comme vous etes chic!

Where do you go from here?
Garson, gimme a beer.

WOMAN PUBLISHES A PAPER FOR HAREMS; SHEET IS SAID TO BE ONE OF THEIR CHIEF DELIGHTS

A newspaper publisher with the most exclusive subscription list in the world!

Miss Edith May Warne, who recently arrived in New York from Asia, has the distinction of editing a publication that is the only communication with the outside world permitted to women of India's harems. So when it comes to diplomacy Miss Warne stands in the foremost ranks of the Fourth Estate.

"It is one paper that never touches on politics," said Miss Warne at her hotel, where she and her father, Bishop Francis Wesley Warne, were for a few days. "Every word of the Women's Friend is weighed with the utmost care before it is set down for those simple, childlike minds that have never made any contacts whatsoever outside of the harem."

6,000 Circulation.

With a circulation of 6,000, published in five different cities and in five different languages, the Women's Friend sets a new record in subscription rates. Thirty-three cents a year is the cost.

"And you'd be surprised at the way the men folk balk at that small amount," said the managing editor. "Though they are perfectly willing to pay exorbitant prices for gold bangles and rare silks with which their women are adorned, they dislike the idea of spending anything for their minds. They consider it throwing their money away."

Miss Warne was born and brought up in India, the daughter of missionaries. Through her work with the Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, she was placed in charge of this novel newspaper, financed by the society. Her understanding of the customs of the various castes enabled her to prepare copy that would not only be of absorbing interest to its readers, but would get by their rulers.

Interests Few.

"Very few women in India, whatever their caste, are interested in anything other than their homes and families," she said. "They have been held down for so many generations that they can't conceive of striving to be on an equal footing with men, or living any other life than the subservient one to which they are accustomed."

It is only the wealthy families who can afford to shelter their women, which is known as living in purdah, or "behind the curtain." Miss Warne explained. What seems like barbarism in an enlightened world is regarded by the women as their just rights.

"They would be frightened and distraught if they were freed," she said, "because they are so unprepared to think at all for themselves. A few women have broken purdah to study medicine, which is considered wholly an altruistic enterprise. Women doctors are greatly in demand, because men doctors are not allowed to treat the purdah women, and unless one of their own sex can give them scientific treatment there is no help for women in the harem when they are in need of medical attention."

In Lucknow, India, there is a women's college where provision is made for girls who live in purdah, so that they can study without being seen by man.

Have Movies.

"That is the sort of thing they want—advantages that do not require any radical changes or giving up of their sheltered existence," Miss Warne continued. "There is one moving picture theatre that also makes arrangements once a week to accommodate the cumbersome, box-like contrivances that contain a feminine parcel. And one of the most amusing things is to see one of these contraptions bounding along the busy streets of the town with a fascinated eye peering through a gap in one of the curtains. They are every bit as curious as other women, but they lack initiative."

India does not boast of flappers or ultra feminists. Miss Warne reports, but there is a revolt among the younger generation of men who want their wives to be educated and intellectually companionable.

"Men who go away and obtain an education cannot reconcile themselves to wives who are mere ornaments," she said. "They want companionship of women, and are very keenly encouraging missionaries and educators to come into their country to try to break down the old customs prohibiting women from taking any part in affairs outside their homes."

Natives Beautiful.

India's high-born ladies are often extraordinary beautiful, Miss Warne, who is one of the few Christians who have ever had the experience of visiting in the harems, states.

"They are slender, languorous, creatures, with lovely dark eyes and delicate features," she describes them. "As they spend almost all of their time taking care of their bodies, they are immaculately exquisite, dressed in gorgeous silks and satins that they wrap about them very expertly."

The newspaper is one of their chief delights. Miss Warne says those who can read never miss a word of it. Some of the contributors are women who have broken purdah, and they write with an understanding of what the women in seclusion are most anxious to read about.

"Household hints, new inventions, beauty recipes, but for the most part they want advice about their children," she said. "They are devoted to their families."

Miss Warne is anxious to get back to her post, and admits that a tremendous satisfaction comes to the fortunate publisher who can give his subscribers exactly what they want.—Elizabeth Custer in New York Telegram.

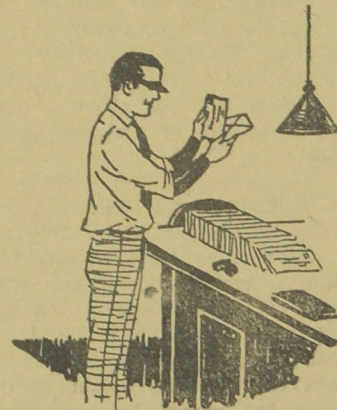

Clarence (desperately)—You turn me down and there'll be the devil to pay.

Inez—All right. How much do I owe you?

Stenographer—I'm sorry we haven't the date but we will look you up in our records?

Jones—What do you think I am? A jazz orchestra?

BLUNDERS

WHY IS THIS WRONG?

One of the many annoyances that the postal service has to contend with is the receipt of bundles of carelessly sealed letters, many of which are stuck together. Since letters can be run through the cancelling machines only one at a time, all those stuck together must first be pulled apart by some postal employee. This may result in mutilation of the addresses or in placing the letters to one side until other mail has been handled.
