BIG STRIKE COST MANY MILLIONS

The Cost of Coal Stoppage is Not in Estimate.

FOREIGN TRADE SUFFERED

Major Taxes Will Not be Affected by Strike.

Special cable to The Daily Mail by the British United Press.

London, May 13—The cost of Great Britain's general strike was estimated today for the United Press at $125,000,000.

A Board of Trade official made the estimate, which is admittedly conservative. It does not include the cost of the coal stoppage, which is now in its 13th day. The estimate was computed on three basis, which exclude other sources of cost.

1. International and foreign trade loss $9,000,000.

2. Labor's wage loss $30,000,000.

3. Government's loss in customs and minor taxes $5,000,000.

The strike will not affect major taxes such as the income tax and the tax on property this year, it is explained, as they will be levied on last year's estimates.

Injured Hotel Trade.

The strike was said not to have been long enough to seriously damage the country, but future damage depends on the length of the coal negotiations.

C. B. Bich, manager of the Saferi Hotel, told the United Press the strike "did disastrous damage to the first class hotel trade".

"Many Americans" he said, "cancelled British hotel reservations and went to the continent."

"I estimate the loss to the first class hotels at $5,000,000. For instance of the 456 first class passengers aboard the Leviathan on her last trip only 70 arrived in London. Most of the others went to the continent because of the strike."

SAYS BRITISH WORKERS HAVE BEEN BETRAYED

Special cable to the Daily Mail by the British United Press.

Moscow, May 13—"The British workers have been sold and betrayed" Gregory Zinoviev, Secretary of the third Internationale told newspapermen here today, commenting on the collapse of the general strike.

J. H. Thomas, Ramsay MacDonald, and Arthur Henderson, all moderates in the Labor group, were condemned by Zinoviev as the betrayers of labor. He declared however, that the strike would play a gigantic role in history, dubbing it the Dress rehearsal of future great fights.

Karl Radek, the Communist writer, described the end of the strike to "unexampled treachery" on the part of the Conservative trade unionists.

"The new treachery of Thomas" he said "will create a deep crisis in the British workers movement. This crisis will end with the creation of a mass communist party in England."

This tragedy will strengthen the revolutionary nucleus in the English proletariat which can convince the masses that it is necessary to break quickly and decisively with the corpse of the past which persons the live fighting organization of the British proletariat.

Roads Open on 17th.

B. H. Kinghorn, Chief Road Engineer, announces today that on the 17th Monday next, the trunk road Fredericton to Woodstock will be open to motor traffic, also the secondary trunk road through the parish of Douglas.

The Woodstock-Houlton road is not reported fit, water is over the road near Oromocto and the road up the Nashwaak is poor.

Strike Conditions Still Maintained By British Miners

The Dock Workers Have Not Yet Returned to Work in Liverpool and Manchester—Publishers Have Demanded From Printers a Guarantee That There Will be no Dictation of Editorial Policy in Future.

(By CLIFFORD L. DAY, United Press Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, May 13—The coal strike conditions still prevail in Great Britain today despite cancellation of the general strike orders by the Trades Union Council.

Railway men are still idle in Edinburgh, Peterborough, Cardiff, Hull and other centres. The dock workers have not returned in Liverpool and Manchester. The printers are still idle almost everywhere reported to be owing to the publishers demand for guarantees that there will be no dictation of editorial policy in the future.

Glasgows leading newspapers today announced that henceforth they would employ only non-union labor.

Miners Still Out

The more than one million miners are still out. Railway and street car service is crippled today. The extent of the continued stoppage is such that in many remote points, it is believed the strike order still is in effect.

A spokesman for the trades union council, told the United Press today that the council was carrying out its arrangements for making the cancellation effective, but was also notifying the unions to await instructions from their respective executives.

HON. CHARLES D. RICHARDS PAYS TRIBUTE TO THOSE FOR WHOM MEMORIALS ARE GIVEN

Hon. Charles D. Richards, B. A., M. L. A., Minister of Lands and Mines for New Brunswick, was the speaker this afternoon in the Memorial Hall of the University of New Brunswick when the first memorial windows installed in the beautiful hall were unveiled. These windows are memorials to the late Earl of Ashburnham, and to the late Lieut. George P. O. Fenwick erected by Mrs. G. Clowes Van Wart and Miss Lena Fenwick his sister of the Great War responded to the Empire's call of service and of duty, and who, with others, died that freedom might remain, freedom of thought of action, freedom for the development of our national life and ideals.

This fine Memorial Hall typifies and represents in tangible form our sense of reverence for and loyalty to the memory of these men. A humble tribute, perhaps, but yet one which keeps fresh the memory of the past and cannot fail to inspire the future sons and daughters of the University with high ideals and noble purpose.

Since the last encaenia gathering, three splendid gifts have been received and placed in this Hall, and it is my duty and my privilege to make reference to them this afternoon.

Ashburnham Memorial

In the centre, on the eastern side, will be observed a fine memorial window. This has been erected by the Countess of Ashburnham, in memory of her husband, the late Right Honourable the Earl of Ashburnham. A son of old England and a true Britisher, the Earl of Ashburnham, then Captain the Honourable Thomas Ashburnham, came to this city a number of years ago. He was a graduate of Trinity College, Cambridge, and had had a varied and active military service for a number of years in India and Africa. He spent six years in India.

He was with the famous 7th Hussars in the Egyptian Campaigns, in 1882 to 1884, winning three medals, one of which was personally presented by Queen Victoria. He also served under Lord Roberts in South Africa, and he took a pardonable pride in the fact that he was at one time an instructor of Sir Douglas Haig. Some little time after coming to this city, the then Captain Ashburnham happily married one of our own Fredericton ladies, and became identified with this community as one of our own citizens. Upon the death of his brother in 1913, Captain Ashburnham succeeded to the title, but the Earl and Countess of ters. There also was a memorial platform chair presented by Mrs. James Bird in memory of her son Lieut. J. Talmage Hanning.

Hon. Mr. Richards was an undergraduate at the University while both of the deceased officers were students and was a personal friend of each. His remarks are as follows:

This building in which we are assembled today stands as a lasting memorial to the memory of the sons of the University who in the dark days
