Of Interest to the Women

USE BRUSH AND COMB FOR BEAUTIFUL HAIR.

Many women seem to think a brush is all one needs to keep hair in good condition, forgetting that without its partner the comb, the brush is of little use. But the comb has to be a good comb; it must be used correctly and it must be kept clean.

A good comb has blunt teeth, to prevent scalp irritation. Moreover it has smooth teeth, to keep it from catching the hair. It must have both wide and fine teeth, or better still, it should be twins—a wide toothed comb to free the hair from tangles, and a fine toothed comb for a variety of special services where wide teeth won't suffice.

Taking the tangles out isn't such a difficult matter with short hair but for those whose hair is still long it must be done correctly, or the hair will suffer—and it very seldom is. The hair should be held near the roots by the left hand while the right hand does the combing, beginning toward the end of the hair and going downward, then taking a second position above this and combing the ends, rising in this way, little by little, till all tangles have disappeared.

The hair should be brushed till it is quite smooth. Then it should be parted in strands, the brush should be held firmly by the back (not the handle), brushing with a brisk stroke outward at the front and sides and from the nape of the neck over the head at the back. Women who don't understand this trick—and unfortunately, this includes a great many hairdressers—will drag the brush through the hair haphazardly, straining the roots and pulling a good deal of hair out at the same time. If the hair has a natural wave but the brush is allowed to pull it and go against the wave it may eventually become straight. A good deal of so-called falling hair, too, is due simply to a clumsy use of the brush.

Now that the tangles are out and the hair has been brushed, both brush and wide toothed comb are laid aside in favor of the comb with fine teeth. No bang can be dealt with successfully without the fine toothed comb, nor could the owner of a permanent wave hope to keep her hard earned curl without it. The short curved combs with fine teeth, used in water waving hair that curls naturally, are employed at night to train a permanent wave and prevent its kinking, but during the day, one may dampen an ordinary fine toothed comb and pull the waves into place every time the hair is dressed. The same thing is true of a head that has been marcelled, except that the comb is left dry or, perhaps, occasionally moistened with brilliantine.

When it comes to caring for a comb many women make the mistake of using water that is too hot. As ordinary combs are made of hard rubber, this has a tendency to warp the teeth so that they become crooked. The best way to clean a comb is to wash it in soapy water to which a little ammonia has been added.

CHANG, WAR LORD, HAS MILD PERSONALITY

Paris, July 22—Pierre Benoit, well known French novelist, has been traveling in the Far East. At Mukden he was invited to dinner by Chang Tso Lin, the Manchurian war lord, who that very morning, annoyed with one of his local prefects, had delayed a journey in order to have the man shot.

Entering a fantastic getaway, crossing ante-rooms filled with soldiers, Benoit was conducted at last by a silk-robed secretary into a salon, where, sitting on a sofa between two huge stuffed tigers, Chang was waiting. The war lord, dressed in a black robe, seemed to the Frenchman anything but ferocious, hein, emaciated, with an apologetic manner, Chang smiled ambiguously, and gently lifting a delicate hand, himself served a cup of green tea to his guest.

Soon after they dined—bird-nest soup, sharks' fins, lacquered duck, bamboo pith, pigeon eggs, shrimp fritters, duck kidneys and other Chinese delicacies, washed down by repeated draughts of wine from tiny cups—first white Chaoshing, then pink wine, then a wine flavored with five different herbs. They conversed through an interpreter.

PERSIAN SHAH'S GRATITUDE

London, July 2—Through a strange chain of circumstances Dr. Jondentich has become court doctor to the Shah of Persia, Riza Khan. When conditions were different from what they are today Dr. Jondentich was a well to do Russian doctor. The revolution brought him to exile in Warsaw. One evening Dr. Jondentich happened to go to the movies. On the screen he saw flashed a picture of the new Shah of Persia. In Riza Khan he recognized a poor, half-starved soldier, whom he had been able to help during the war. Dr. Jondentich, through the Persian legation, sent a letter to the Shah, reminding him of the incident, and requesting a little aid. The Shah showed his gratitude in a generous way; he asked the doctor to become his court doctor. Of course Dr. Jondentich accepted.

PADDOCK SAYS GRANGE

A JOKE AS A DON JUAN

Hollywood, Cal., July 22—Charlie Paddock today came to the defense of the girls of Hollywood against the criticism of Red Grange, the football star.

Red Quit Cold.

Red last week quit the movies cold, saying the movies were not for him; that movie girls didn't know nearly as much about making love as the college co-eds back where he went to school; and that he was going back to Wheaton, Ill., and drive his ice wagon again.

Charlie closely analyzed Red's statement in the light of his own experience. The "afstest human," who holds many records on the cinder path, could speak with authority, for in five weeks' courtship he had won the heart of Bebe Daniels, movie actress. "The Hollywood girls aren't any different from the girls of any other town," Charlie announced. "If Red couldn't keep himself in trim making love to them, he is probably just as well off back in Wheaton employing his talents where the cooks have a chance to kiss the ice man."

"I don't believe that Red has hugged many movie stars while in Hollywood," Paddock added, contemplatively.

Says He is Boasting.

"When he compares his co-eds to film actresses I'm afraid he's boasting a little bit."

"If Red came to Hollywood with the intention of accomplishing a lifetime of petting in a few weeks, no wonder he is disappointed. He had failed to realize that film people before cameras were playing the parts of characters in pictures and not real characters."

"If Red took love-making in the movies seriously, it's his own fault if the screen kisses disappointed him."

"Red and I are close friends and I admire him greatly on the gridiron, but he was a joke as the Don Juan of Hollywood."

THE HERRIOT CABINET WAS SHORT LIVED

Paris, July 21—The newly formed Herriot government, which succeeded the ministry was defeated direct-

Briand, was defeated in the Chamber of Deputies late today. The official vote was 290 against the government to 237 in its favor. The ministry was defeated directly on a question of confidence and approval of its ministerial declaration, which was concerned almost entirely with salvation of the French franc and the general financial state of the government.

Immediately after the vote Premier Herriot went to the Elyse Palace to present the resignation of his cabinet to President Doumergue.

The cabinet of Edouard Herriot resigned at 10.30 o'clock tonight. Havas Agency announced.

President Doumergue tonight asked M. Poincare to form a new ministry. Poincare accepted in principle and will begin his consultations tomorrow morning.

New C.P.R. Cold Storage Cars

Under old conditions there was always a certain amount of risk in shipping fruit. The entry of dust or cinders, or the high temperature of the car, was frequently the cause of fruit becoming spoiled during transit. But under present conditions, fruit not only retains its coloring, freshness and firmness when it is shipped from one point to another, but it is actually improved. For many months officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Dominion Express have been carrying on experimental work with a new type of ventilated express car to be used in the handling of soft fruits by express to prairie points, and they have recently arrived at an entirely new method of ventilating express equipment, which is known as the "B. C. Ventilator."

This device allows the air to be received into the car through two spacious intakes located at the ends of the car at the roof, carried to the floor without decreasing in velocity and effectively distributed through the lower sections of the car. Three times a minute there is a complete change of air, 10,276 cubic feet of air per minute being recorded through the intakes and 9,522 through the exhausts. The new type of ventilator was tested out under full load conditions

Lower picture shows—Interior of the modern fruit car. This month, the car containing more than a thousand crates of strawberries, which were carried from Vancouver to Calgary in excellent condition. At the end of the journey not a single speck of dust could be found on top of the boxes, and the average temperature of the car was 8 to 10 degrees lower than the outside air, during the entire trip. The strawberries arrived in perfect condition and the new type car is expected to greatly help the fruit growing industry of British Columbia inasmuch as it opens up the entire prairie district to that trade
