FOCH'S SECRET OF LIFE.

It is not only his discussion of the management of the war which commands Marshal Foch's Armistice Day interview to attention. It is, too, the revelation that the Marshal is philosopher as well as soldier. His closing words to the press were:

"To command is nothing. To negotiate is nothing. What is necessary is to understand those with whom one has to deal and to make one's self thoroughly understood by them. To understand each other is the whole secret of life."

The thought might be carried farther. If men understood men, the talents of one like Foch might be directed to more profitable pursuits than war. The resort to arms to settle international disputes would become obsolete, since virtually all conflict is born of a lack of that understanding which is the Marshal's "secret of life."

How far we have gone toward marvelling that secret is a question. About the physical man we know immeasurably more than we did a few centuries ago, though the sum of our knowledge in relation to all that is to be known may not be much. About the mental man we know less; and about the imperiousness which comprise our personalities we know least of all. If we knew why we behave as we do, that perfect understanding of each other which is Marshal Foch's conception of the goal toward which man may best aspire would lie at hand.

OUR BIG GAME.

A well known sportsman said recently that from the number of moose being shot, that unless there was a close season for about three years "The King of the Forest" would soon become a scarcity.

The editor of "Rod and Gun" in Canada, himself a sportsman, recalls in the current issue of the magazine a maxim for conservation laid down by the late Dr. Gordon Hewitt in his book on "The Conservation of the Wild Life of Canada." It is as he states that the "main axiom of wild life conservation" is this: "A species of animal must not be destroyed at a greater rate than it can increase." This, "Rod and Gun" points out, if lived up to, would solve the majority of the big game and fur-bearing animal problems today in Canada.

Many suggestions are made, but our contemporary says:

"It all comes back to the great need of the moment, the impression on the young hunter, and the careless and indifferent hunter, that he cannot hope to find good sport year after year, no matter whether he goes a-fishing or a-hunting; whether his objective is rabbit skins, partridge or ducks, if he pays no attention to any law of conservation or if he fails to realize that co-operation with the forces of nature is not only money in the pockets of the country as a whole, but it also provision for his recreation or even his larder."

Premier Ferguson of Ontario who is appealing for a new mandate has a strong line up of candidates and looks like a sure winner in the election, to be held on December 1st. He is being opposed by an aggregation composed of Liberals, Progressives, Prohibitionists, Liberal Progressives and Independents. It is possible for a combination of this kind to secure a majority in the next House, but it would be rather difficult for them to form a stable government, and that is what every province is in need of these days. The fact the Premier Ferguson has secured three seats by acclamation seems to indicate the direction in which the wind is blowing.

An incident in connection with the construction of the St. John Valley Railway is being made to do duty as a canvass against Hon. A. R. Gould, Republican candidate for the U. S. senatorial vacancy in Maine. It is a pretty stale canvass and it is doubtful if it will do Mr. Gould very much harm. Mr. Gould is a man of dynamic energy and undoubtedly stands high in the estimation of the people of northern Maine. He has many warm friends in New Brunswick also who will be pleased to hear of his success in the pending election.

The sleepless student thinks faster but his body pays for it. This is proved by tests made by psychologists. Try it on yourself—but not too often. If you sleep but three or four hours your brain will seem keener the next morning. Much sleep causes sluggish thinking. But if you keep up with your three or four hour sleep program you will probably break down before long. Perhaps it's better to think longer and not quite so fast.

Miami City Council coping with the after effects of the hurricane, has compelled landlords to file a schedule of the rental charges they are going to make this winter. Profiteering is hard to stop. When the spirit of get-rich-quick takes possession of thousands of people at the same time, in the same place, selfishness is in the saddle. Cities with less sudden prosperity but with slow and steady growth are the fortunate ones.

Mussolini seems to lean to the opinion that voting should be in the hands of a few who are qualified by education, but we have an idea the joker in that is that they must be educated to Mussolini's way of thinking.

Edison says that, as between the radio and the phonograph for music, the phonograph will win in the end. But then Edison didn't invent the radio.

A Harvard professor says monkeys came from man. We've seen a number of men in the act of making the change.

There was an item on an inside page the other day to the effect that Mr. Gloria Swanson is looking for work in Los Angeles.

Loss of sleep, says a committee of College professors, "improves the mind; thereby vindicating the radio bug who sits up to get Los Angeles."

EMPTY STOCKING FUND.

The Editor of The Mail.
Dear Sir—By means of its "Empty Stocking Fund" the Saint John Telegraph-Journal helps numbers of people to spread Christmas cheer amongst deserving poor in the Winter Port. In Fredericton and in other sections of York County there are deserving people whose Christmas could be decidedly brighter if a little help was given from an "Empty Stocking Fund."

Who will establish one here, soon? I feel that your paper would give hearty support.

Yours truly
STERLING BRANNEN.

Betty—Do you believe in Santa Claus?
Billy—No, but I'm willing to be convinced.

DIED

TUPPER—November 22nd in this city at her home at 217 George Street, Emeline Tupper, widow of Mr. Charles A. Tupper, aged seventy-seven years. Funeral on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

It is said that "a telegram in Russia costs 50,000 roubles a word." Perhaps the barbed signatures they have over there account for the high cost.

There is reason for the Missouri paper's demand for a new name for the Maiden Blush apple. When a name ceases to mean anything it ought to be changed.

A Highly Esteemed Resident of This City Gone to Her Reward.

Glasgow, Nov. 22—It took all Sir Austen Chamberlain's characteristic immutability to remain serious when, at the ceremony of his installation as Lord Rector of Glasgow University recently, he was faced by 2,000 students, all wearing monocles like himself, singing in unison: "Oh, Austen, dear, we love you so!"

Like his famous father, Joseph, Britain's Foreign Secretary cannot very well be imagined without his single eyeglass, and there were loud protests from the students when he changed it for horn-rimmed spectacles to sign the document appointing him to his new dignity.
